ALDRICH BILL PASSED BY SENATE, 42 TO 16

Five Republicans Voted Against the Measure and Three Democrats for It.

CASH RESERVE INCREASED

Penalties for False Reports of Emergency Circulation—Creation of Fund to Protect Depositors Defeated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—By a vote of 42 to 16 the Aldrich Currency bill passed the Senate late to-day. Five Republicans voted against it—Borah, Bourne, Brown, Heyburn, and La Follette. Three Democrats—Johnston, Owen, and Teller—voted for the bill. As passed, the bill bears small resemblance to its original shape when it first was subjected to the fire of amendments.

The most important amendments adopted to-day were those increasing the cash reserves of banks, the joint work of Nelson and Johnston, and providing penalties for false reports made by officers of banks as to circulation of emergency currency. This last was offered by La Follette, and was adopted only after a sharp fight. The final vote on the bill was:

Yeas—Aldrich, Akenny, Beveridge, Brandegee, Burkett, Burnham, Burrows, Crane, Cullom, Curtis, Depew, Dick, Dillingham, Dixon, Dolliver, Du Pont, Elkins, Flint, Frye, Gallinger, Gamble, Guggenheim, Hopkins, Johnston, Kean, Knox, Lodge, Long, McClumber, Nelson, Owen, Perkins, Piles, Richardson, Smith, Smoot, Stephenson, Sutherland, Teller, Warner, Warren, Wetmore—42.

Nays—Bankhead, Borah, Bourne, Brown, Culberson, Frazier, Gary, Gore, Heyburn, La Follette, McCreary, McEnery, McLaurin, Overman, Paynter, Taylor—16.

Minority Measure Voted Down.

Just before the vote on the bill was taken, Teller, acting for Bailey, asked for a vote on the minority measure. This was defeated by a party vote, 42 to 13. Teller's amendment, proposing Government notes for State issue in the case of emergency currency, was lost, 42 to 14.

The most extended debate of the day came when Nelson offered his amendment for the creation by taxation of a fund of $20,000,000 with which to guarantee deposits. This was to be accomplished by taxation that would divert into such a fund $1,750,000 a year until the total was accumulated.

The proposition raised a storm. Owen, Beveridge, McCumber, Piles, Knox, Smith of Michigan, Dolliver, and Heyburn took the principal part in the fight, which went back into the causes of the panic that started the consideration of the bill. During the debate several Senators gave epigrammatic opinions of the causes, three of which are as follows:

Knox—The fundamental cause of the panic lay in the fact that the country was doing more business than it had men, means, or machinery to handle.

Owen—the soul of the panic was the fear of depositors. Withdrawal of currency from circulation was its fulfillment.

Dolliver—The business of the world has developed beyond the resources necessary for its management.

The Nelson amendment was voted down, 49 to 11.

An interesting feature of the passage of the bill was a reiteration by Mr. Aldrich of his promise to bring in a bill for an investigation of the entire banking system of the country, with a view to instituting reforms.

The Bill as Passed.

As passed, the bill provides for not more than $500,000,000 of emergency currency, to be issued to National banks upon deposit by them of State, county, and municipal bonds, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. The currency is to be issued with a view of obtaining an equitable distribution of the currency over the United States and in accordance with the unimpaired capital and surplus of the banks in each State. Banks are to pay for this emergency circulation one-half of 1 per cent. a month during the first four months it is circulated, and afterward three-quarters of 1 per cent. a month.

The bill provides that National banks shall pay not less than 1 per cent. on Government funds deposited with them.

As amended to-day, the bill carries an important change in banking laws relating to bank reserves. This amendment provides that of the 15 per cent. reserve required to be kept by banks not in reserve cities, four-fifths is to be kept in the vaults of the bank, and of that amount one-third can be in the form of securities of the kind required.

By another amendment, agreed to to-day, the period during which one-half of 1 per cent. interest is to be charged was reduced from six to four months, after which three-quarters of 1 per cent. is to be charged until redeemed.

At the instance of Mr. La Follette, an amendment was adopted prohibiting any National bank from investing its funds in stocks or other securities of a corporation the officers or Directors of which are officers or Directors of the bank, and providing a penalty of imprisonment of from one to five years. In accepting this amendment, Mr. Aldrich stated that he had not time to consider the amendment fully, but was in sympathy with its general purpose. He said it could be perfected in conference.

Course in the House.

Republican leaders in the House were reticent to-day about predicting the course of the Aldrich bill in that branch of Congress. It will probably be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, despite current report that jurisdiction over it might be given to the Committee on Rules.

The action of the Senate in refusing to adopt the amendment offered by Mr. Nelson to provide for Federal guaranty of National bank deposits will make it easier to pass the Aldrich bill in the House, where little friendliness toward that feature has developed.

ERIE TRAIN WRECK KILLS TWO

Fast Express Collides with Freight Near Hornell.

HORNELL, N. Y., March 27.—The west-bound Wells-Fargo Express train on the Erie Railroad crashed into an east-bound freight early this morning at what is known as "JX" tower. The engineer and fireman of the express were killed, and five trainmen were injured.

ROBS HENRY SCHIFF'S HOME.

Police Puzzled Over Jewel Theft at Rich Importer's Residence.

A clever sneak thief who has baffled the efforts of the police to catch him is operating in the wealthy residential section of the city on the upper west side. Several minor robberies have been reported to the police recently from that neighborhood, and it became known yesterday that some time on Thursday night the burglar entered the home of Henry Schiff, at 49 West Ninety-first Street. Mr. Schiff is a wealthy importer, and the thief escaped from the house with about $5,000 worth of jewelry. Samuel Schiff, a son, discovered the robbery. He had spent the evening away from home and returned at about 12:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Going to his bedroom, on the third floor, he noticed that several small bits of jewelry were missing from the drawers in his dressing table. Thinking that some member of the family had borrowed the articles, Mr. Schiff postponed investigating until yesterday morning.

At the breakfast table he asked who had disarranged things in his room, and when it developed that no one had been in the room the night before, the family began to investigate. Mr. Schiff discovered that a jewel case which had contained several stickpins and rings, among the former a very valuable diamond horseshoe pin, as well as a set of evening studs and waistcoat buttons, was missing. From Mrs. Schiff's room, a diamond bar pin set with two large diamonds and a sapphire was gone. A gold bracelet was also missing, as was a fob of Mr. Schiff's and $30 in cash which had laid on his chiffonier.

Mr. Schiff immediately notified Police Headquarters by telephone, and a detective went to the house. He discovered that the bars in front of the basement windows, front and rear, were intact, and the servants insisted that the lower doors of the house had all been locked the night before.

"I am forced to the conclusion," said Mr. Schiff last night, "that some daring thief slipped into the house while we were at dinner and secreted himself, perhaps in a closet, waiting until the family had retired before making his selection of our valuables, or else robbing the house while we lingered at the table. The servants were all engaged during the dinner hour in the rear of the house, and a burglar would have had an easy time, provided he had once got into the house.

BIDDLE'S PROWESS AS BOXER.

Wealthy Opponent of Jack O'Brien Knocked Out 9 Pennsylvania Students.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—Only favored ones will witness the bout at the Merion Cricket Club Saturday night, April 4, between Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, millionaire society man, poet, publisher, and boxer, and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien.

The clamor for tickets of admission to see the match has been so great that it has been decided to limit the spectators to club members and a few guests.

Despite his wealth, Mr. Biddle lives like a fighter preparing to enter the ring to battle for a championship. He is tall, muscular, and well built. There is no superfluous flesh on his frame. He eats sparingly and trains when he is not writing poetry or managing his publishing business.

Jack O'Brien has been reported as saying that he will give the Merion Club members the most exciting battle they ever witnessed. Mr. Biddle laughed when it was suggested that O'Brien might be planning to knock him out. He said he would meet O'Brien, according to "Queensberry rules," and with eight-ounce gloves.

Friends say Mr. Biddle will not hesitate about fighting O'Brien. They tell a story about him knocking out Fitzsimmons, and how he made Corbett look to his laurels while the latter was in training quarters. It was only two or three weeks ago when Jack Daly, Corbett's former training manager, and now an instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, took Biddle out to the gymnasium and introduced him as a new pupil.

Among the students are some husky boxers. One of the cleverest asked the young man to put on the gloves just for a little training. Biddle bashfully and rather reluctantly consented. The rest is sad. One by one they came to the slaughter, and Biddle laid them out until he had nine victories to his credit.

Members of the Merion Cricket Club say there is to be no betting on the Biddle-O'Brien fight, but in the haunts where Biddle is known friends of the society man are laying odds in his favor.

AUTO BURSTS INTO A HOUSE.

Carries Robert C. Clowry's Niece Into Parlor of a Trenton Citizen.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., March 27.—An automobile containing two women and their chauffeur late last night crashed through the front of a frame cottage into the parlor of a citizen in this city. In the car were Mrs. Karl G. Roebling, niece of Robert C. Clowry; Miss Emily Roebling, and Chauffeur John Roupp. The car belonged to the Roeblings, and the party was returning from the seashore. The house that was so unceremoniously invaded was that of W. J. Chinnick, and is situated near the Inter-State Fair Grounds.

The night was very dark, and the chauffeur failed until the last moment to notice a herd of cows in front of him. The machine was running at a high rate of speed when a white cow showed up. The car dodged the white cow, but hit a black one, wrenching the steering wheel from the driver.

The machine then zigzagged across the road, smashed through a light picket fence, and did not stop until it had forced its way into the Chinnick parlor. Although the house front was smashed, none of the party was injured.

Mrs. Chinnick was putting her child to bed in a back room when the crash came. She opened the door into the front room, and was amazed at the sight of the snorting machine containing her unannounced callers.

The chauffeur helped the women to alight, and mechanics were at once put to work on the wreck, but it took until this morning to remove the car. The front of the house will have to be practically rebuilt.

The black cow which was hit got a broken leg and had to be killed.

JOHNSON WILLING TO BE NOMINATED

AWAITS CALL OF PARTY

Says That In No Sense Is He a Candidate to Defeat Bryan or Any Other Man.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 27.—Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota to-day made a specific declaration that, while he has done nothing and will do nothing toward procuring for himself the Democratic nomination for President, he will not refuse the honor if it is tendered him. The Governor made this statement in a letter to Swan J. Turnblad, publisher of The Minneapolis Swedish-American Post, who had asked for a declaration on the subject. The Governor's letter follows:

St. Paul, Minn., March 27, 1908.

Mr. Swan J. Turnblad, Minneapolis, Minn.

My Dear Mr. Turnblad: Your letter of March 23, in which you state you have been subjected to many inquiries as to my plans in connection with the Democratic nomination for President I have for acknowledgment. In reply thereto let me say:

I do not believe that any American citizen should be an active, open candidate for the nomination to the Presidency. Any American would appreciate the high honor which could come to him in being selected as standard bearer of his party. While I recognize that the press has had much to say about me in connection with this high office, I have hitherto avoided any public or private expression regarding my position.

Matters have progressed so far, however, that it seems to me that I should at least say in answer to your interrogation that if the Democratic Party of the Nation believed me to be more available than any other man and felt that by my nomination I could contribute any service to the party and to the Nation, I should be happy to be the recipient of the honor which it would thus confer. I am not unmindful, either, of the high honor which has been paid me by the people of Minnesota; and if the Democratic Party of the State desires to present my name to the next National Convention I am sure I would have no objection. But even if Minnesota were the only State to declare for me at that time, I should feel that the distinction was one of the greatest which could come to me.

I have done nothing and will do nothing in the way of organization to bring about this end, and shall not be a candidate in the sense of seeking the nomination.

If, however, those who have the welfare of the country and the Democratic Party at heart should feel that I am necessary in this year of grace, I certainly shall respond to any call which may be made upon me.

In this connection I desire it understood that in no sense am I to be a candidate for the purpose of defeating Mr. Bryan or any other man; that the only consideration which would induce me to allow the use of my name would be the feeling that I might be necessary to the cause. If the Democratic Party should see fit to nominate Mr. Bryan or any one else, the action would meet with my approval, and the nominee certainly would have my unqualified support, as I should expect his support if conditions were reversed.

I have written you fully, that you may thoroughly understand the situation. In order that there may be no doubt, I would say, in answer to your question, that if a nomination came to me I certainly would not refuse it. Very truly yours,

JOHN A. JOHNSON.

WILDCAT IN A FREIGHT CAR.

Now It's Loose Near South Amboy and the Natives Go Armed.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH AMBOY, N. J., March 27.—Many residents of this town have armed themselves in anticipation of a sudden attacked by a supposed wildcat, which escaped from a Pennsylvania freight car this morning. The car contained lumber consigned to the South Amboy Lumber and Supply Company. It came to the company's yards from North Carolina, and was on the way nearly a week.

To-day, as lumber handlers started to open the car, they heard a scratching noise inside, and when they opened the door they saw in the shadow two gleaming eyes. None of the men wanted to enter. Finally Edward Letts hit upon the happy expedient of going to the other side of the car and banging it with a crowbar. The others drew away from the door to give the animal a chance to come out. It did.

It proved to be a wildcat, or Southern lynx, and the lumber handlers say it was about four feet long.

It was seen later in the day drinking from a spring near the railroad. Later it took to the woods. The lumber company has offered a reward for the cat, dead or alive.

MILTON FOR BRYAN'S SEAT.

New Florida Senator Is a Banker and Business Man.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 27.—Gov. Broward to-day appointed Hall Milton of Marianna to succeed the late Senator Bryan of Florida in the United States Senate.

Mr. Milton is a grandson of ex-Gov. John Milton of Florida, and is 42 years old. He was born in Marianna and is a successful banker and business man. Mr. Milton's appointment is for the unexpired term of the late Senator Mallory, which had been filled by the appointment of Senator Bryan three months ago.

Hawkins Nominated on 761st Ballot.

ANDERSON, Ind., March 27.—Nathan B. Hawkins of Portland was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Eighth District this afternoon on the seven hundred and sixty-first ballot.

Senator Clark Is Renominated.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 27.—Returns from sixty out of the seventy-five counties in Arkansas indicate the nomination in the Democratic primaries of George W. Donaghey for Governor. United States Senator James P. Clark has been renominated without opposition.

STUDENTS TIE GIRL TO TREE.

Also Paint Seniors' Faces in School Riot Quelled by Police.

Special to The New York Times.

MUNCIE, Ind., March 27.—While the junior class of the Muncie High School was holding a class party at the home of Miss Norma Pattinger last night they were attacked by members of the senior class, and a riot followed, which six policemen could not suppress, and which was brought to an end only when a riot call brought the entire force upon the scene.

A dozen of the participants, including two young ladies, were severely injured, and Jacob Merz, father of one of the juniors, was roughly handled when he went to the rescue of his son. After the seniors had been dispersed and the police had retired the juniors started out after the seniors, and several of them were found together and attacked.

Miss Jessie Stylers, a senior, was captured and tied to a tree, where she remained several hours almost exhausted till found by a searching party organized to look for her. Two other girls and several boys were taken to the Pattinger home, where their faces, necks, hands, and arms were painted red with house paint.

While this was going on in the parlor the seniors returned to the house, obtained ladders, and, mounting to the second story windows, entered the house and stole all the wraps of the juniors.

PRINCE HELIE UNNERVED.

Mme. Gould's Suitor Ill After Two Strenuous Days in New York.

Helie de Talleyrand-Perigord, Prince de Sagan, who has passed unscathed through some hundred duels of the French variety, is now ill at the Waldorf-Astoria, laid low by the rigors of a stormy courtship. Yesterday he did not see Mme. Anna Gould, for whose hand he is suing, unless their paths crossed in the afternoon auto spins which both took in Central Park. After the Prince's ride in the Park, he returned to the Waldorf-Astoria and immediately retired. He was far from the buoyant, vigorous man of the early day, and he seemed to be suffering from acute nervousness. He dined in his room alone. He declined the services of a physician, and said that he would probably feel better in the morning. He admitted that the excitement of his two days in New York has probably played havoc with his nerves.

Barring sending a box of roses to Mme. Anna Gould at the home of her sister, Miss Helen Gould, 579 Fifth Avenue, there was no apparent communication between the Prince and the former Countess de Castellane.

Mme. Gould's continued refusal to deny that she and the Prince will marry, and her gradual modification of a denial that they were engaged, has proved, her friends say, that she will overcome the obstacles thrown in her way by her family. It was also said that Mme. Gould would leave New York in a day or so, and it is suggested that Paris may be her destination.

THINK BOATMAN DROWNED.

His Hat and Coat Found in His Drifting Launch in the Sound.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., March 27—Yachtsmen along the northern section of Long Island Sound searched to-day for Albert Hanson, who had charge of the boathouse at Hudson Park, New Rochelle, and who has been missing since yesterday morning. His relatives fear that he has been drowned or else has met with foul play while chasing boat thieves on the Sound.

In the last few days a number of small boats have been stolen from several Sound ports, among them two of Hanson's.

Early Thursday morning Hanson started out alone in his sixteen-foot naphtha launch to look for the thieves. This morning his launch was found floating off Rye Beach, about ten miles from Hudson Park, with Hanson's coat and hat lying near the steering wheel. The launch was picked up by a tug and taken to City Island.

Hanson has a wife and two children living in New Rochelle. The police of New York and towns along the Sound were asked to-night to try and get some trace of the missing boatman.

BANK'S LOSS $1,105,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 27.—W. L. Felds, Bank Examiner, appeared before Commissioner Lindsay to-day and swore out two additional warrants against Henry Reiber, teller, and John Young, auditor, charging them with the embezzlement of $1,105,000 from the Farmers' Deposit National Bank.

The new warrants were served on Reiber and Young this afternoon in jail and their bail increased to $250,000 each.

Immediately after the informations were made the Directors of the bank met and passed a resolution making up the amount stolen from the surplus. The action divides the surplus almost in half. There has been no excitement among the depositors. Examiner Felds issued a statement declaring that the full amount of the default had been ascertained, and that the credit of the bank would not be affected in any manner. He indorsed the methods of the officials.

WIFE DEAD, HUSBAND HELD.

Life Insurance Company Starts Inquiry Into Mrs. Leo's Death.

Michael Leo, whose wife was burned to death in Newark a week ago Thursday, was arrested in that city yesterday afternoon and will be held pending an investigation into the circumstances of his wife's death.

Leo was married on Dec. 31 last, having met his wife through a matrimonial agency. Her life is said to have been insured for $2,500, and the insurance company has prompted the investigation.

The story told of her death was that the woman's clothes caught fire from a cloth she heated to place upon her head, and that she was fatally injured.

Playwright Moody Ill of Typhoid.

William Vaughn Moody, author of "The Great Divide," is very ill with typhoid in his New York apartment at 107 Waverley Place. Yesterday he showed signs of improvement for the first time, and his temperature somewhat subsided.

CONGRESSMAN SHOT NEGRO IN STREET CAR

Heflin of Alabama Asked Him to Stop Drinking, and Was Insulted.

WHITE MAN HIT ALSO

Congressman Arrested and Released on Bail — Had Advocated "Jim Crow" Cars for Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Representative James T. Heflin of Alabama, who recently advocated a "Jim Crow" law for street car service in the District of Columbia, shot a negro on a Pennsylvania Avenue car to-night. The negro had insulted him.

The bullet hit the man, Lewis Lumby, just above the right ear. It did not penetrato his skull. The negro is now in the hospital, and Congressman Heflin was arrested and charged with assault to kill. Later he was released on $5,000 bail.

Heflin fired two shots. The first failed to reach the negro and struck Thomas McCreary, another passenger, in the foot. McCreary is a trainer in the employ of August Belmont, and is in Washington this week in charge of the Belmont string at the Benning track.

The shooting occurred shortly after 7 o'clock as the car reached the corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and Sixth Street, bound for Capitol Hill. Congressman Heflin, accompanied by Congressman Edwin J. Ellerbe of South Carolina, had boarded the car at Twelfth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, Mr. Heflin being on his way to deliver a temperance lecture at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church.

He observed two negro passengers, one of whom was Thomas Lumby, who was in the act of taking a drink from a bottle of whisky. There were a number of other passengers, including several women. Mr. Heflin remonstrated with Lumby and asked him to stop drinking, saying:

"Don't take that drink, there are ladies here, and it is not right. It is against the law for you to do this thing in a street car, and I hope you will put that bottle away."

The other negro, who was sober, attempted to take the bottle away from his friend, but failed. Lumby became offended at Mr. Heflin's remonstrances and applied vile epithets to him.

As the car reached Sixth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Heflin and Lumby were engaged in a struggle. Mr. Heflin, who is a large, powerful man, succeeded in throwing Lumby off the car as it came to a stop. Most of the occupants of the car hastily alighted, including Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCreary.

The negro fell to the ground on being pushed off the car. He rose and, it is said, began cursing Mr. Heflin again, and made a motion for his hip pocket as if to draw a weapon, whereupon Mr. Heflin fired at him through the car window, missing the negro and hitting Thomas McCreary, who was about twenty feet from the car. Mr. Heflin fired again, one of the shots striking Lumby in the head above the ear. Lumby ran a short distance and fell.

The conductor of the car disappeared, and a policeman ran the car to Third Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

Mr. McCreary's wound is not serious and after treatment at a hospital he returned to his apartments.

At the Emergency Hospital it was said that Lumby, although badly wounded and unconscious, has a chance to recover.

Mr. Heflin explained at the station his reason for going armed. He says that since he introduced the "Jim Crow" measure he has received many letters of a threatening character, and obtained permission from the police authorities to go armed.

Mr. Heflin represents the Fifth Alabama District, in which the Tuskegee Institute, of which Booker T. Washington is at the head, is located.

Congressman Heflin was treated with marked courtesy by Policeman Scriven, who was compelled to arrest him. The Alabama Representative was permitted to ride to the station house in a carriage. He was not confined in a cell, but was held in the Captain's private room. Many Congressmen called at the precinct station.

Speaker Cannon had an emissary on hand. Andrew Neil, his negro messenger, was at the station house a very few minutes after Mr. Heflin was brought in. Mr. Clayton of Alabama came out of the room where he had been talking to the prisoner and gave a message to Neil, who hurried away to the Speaker's home.

Congressmen are immune from arrest except for treason, felony, and breach of the peace, during their attendance at the session and in going to and returning from the sessions.

Thomas McCreary, accidentally shot in Washington yesterday, is a well-known trainer on the New York race tracks, and has recently looked after the stables of Fred Johnson and others. McCreary was formerly a jockey, and when he became too old to ride, began the training of horses.

His home is in Eatontown, N. J., though he spends much of his time in this city. He went to Washington a short time ago for the opening of the racing season there. He is about 30 years old.

TWO STORMS LASH MICHIGAN.

Tornado in South and Blizzard in Upper Peninsula Do Damage.

DETROIT, Mich., March 27.—A tornado near Jackson, in the southern part of the State, late this afternoon, and a blizzard with heavy snowfall in the upper peninsula to-night are the extremes of a general storm that struck Michigan to-day. The tornado did considerable damage to farm property around Blackman and Woodville, northwest and west of Jackson, but no loss of life has been reported. At Menominee, in the upper peninsula, a velocity of 40 miles an hour is reported, driving the snow into huge drifts. Train and trolley service is seriously delayed in upper Michigan.

Overcome by Heat in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—After shopping for several hours Mrs. May Florence, 25 years old, fell overcome by the heat at G and Seventh Streets, shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon. She was soon able to return to her home. The temperature registered 82 degrees to-day.

BIG STICK FOR VENEZUELA.

President Likely to Ask for Authority to Take Vigorous Action.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 27. — The big stick may be taken from behind the diplomatic door and brandished in connection with the Venezuelan controversy. At the Cabinet meeting to-day further consideration was given to the Lodge resolution passed by the Senate, demanding the correspondence between this Government and Venezuela over questions pending. The President may accompany the papers with a message couched in vigorous language.

The delay in turning the correspondence over to the Senate has been due entirely to consideration of this phase of the matter. The correspondence is expected to show that President Castro has opposed all efforts for a peaceful adjudication of the differences between this Government and his own. It is probable that Congress will be asked to grant the necessary authority for the Administration to force a settlement.

THROWN FROM AEROPLANE.

Henry Farman Has a Mishap While Manoeuvring in His Airship.

PARIS, March 27.—Henry Farman, the English aeronaut, met with an accident at Issy to-day. He was manoeuvring in his aeroplane, which was traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour, when the left wing of the machine struck the ground.

The machine swerved from its course and Farman was thrown through the air for a distance of thirty-five feet. He was badly cut about the face, but otherwise his injuries are not serious.

STATE OF KANSAS ENJOINED.

Railroad Commission Forbidden to Put New Freight Rates Into Effect.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 27.—Judge Pollock in the United States Circuit Court to-day issued an order, temporarily enjoining the State Board of Railroad Commissioners and Attorney General Jackson from putting into effect a new schedule of freight rates on April 1.

The railroads assert that the rates are confiscatory. The case will be argued April 14.

HUMMEL IN ENGLAND.

He Laughs and Heartily Greets Some Friends at Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, March 27.—Abraham Hummel, the New York lawyer, who was released from prison on March 16, arrived here on the Lusitania to-day.

He was laughing when he landed and exchanged hearty greetings with friends. He showed no signs of being ill.

FORGOT $12,000 PACKAGE.

Lawyer Wellman Makes a Quick Return to Court for His Cash.

Twelve thousand dollars, wrapped in a neat little parcel, lay for over half an hour on the counsel table in Part V. of the Supreme Court yesterday, and no one knew anything about it. That is probably why Lawyer Francis J. Wellman recovered it.

He had been arguing a case before Justice Gerard when the midday recess was taken. He hurried out to luncheon, leaving the parcel of money on the table. Half an hour later he ran into the court, breathlessly. There, lying on the table, he found his money as he left it. He wouldn't say why he had so much money with him.

YOUNG BRIDEGROOM A SUICIDE

Wife Finds Garret A. Randall of Hackensack Dead in Bed.

Garret A. Randall, a member of the firm of Browning & Horsey, manufacturers of stationery, at 38 Park Row, this city, committed suicide early yesterday morning by inhaling gas in his home, at Hackensack, N. J. His wife found him dead in his bed.

Mr. Randall was a grandson of the late Judge Garrett J. Ackerson of Hackensack, N. J.

Mrs. Randall, who is a daughter of L. A. Olmstead, a retired manufacturer, is prostrated. A few years ago she was to have been married to Fountain Westervelt of Hackensack, but he disappeared the day before the wedding and has not been seen in Hackensack since. She married Mr. Randall at Rutherford last July, while on an auto ride. Mr. Randall was 30 years old.

ARSON AND MURDER PLOT.

Italians Try to Burn Up Workmen Employed on Guggenheim Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., March 27.—An investigation is being made into the burning of a building on the estate of Isaac Guggenheim here last night. The building was occupied by a score of Italian laborers employed on the estate, and it is suspected that the fire was set by local Italians who were jealous because their countrymen, who are from New York, had obtained work here.

When the fire was discovered the men in the house in trying to get out found that obstructions had been placed against the door and it was with great difficulty that the door and windows were forced open.

Then it was discovered that barrels filled with stones had been rolled against the door and windows. It was apparently an attempt to destroy every one in the building, as it was also learned that oil had been poured on the outer walls and ignited.

ARRESTED, ENDED HIS LIFE.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 27.—Conscience-stricken and crazed by the knowledge that his financial entanglements, including forgery, check kiting, and losses in speculation, had driven his wife into a suicide's grave, Henry Hyde Dwight, member of an old Boston family, committed suicide to-day five minutes after a Pasadena constable had placed him under arrest on the charge of forging a check for $40.

Dwight was a talented architect and landscape artist. He was a Harvard graduate, and with his wife moved in exclusive society circles here and in Pasadena. Tuesday friends received notes from him in which he declared he had planned to end his life sooner than face criminal prosecution on charges of embezzlement and forgery or a lunacy commission.

KAISER WROTE TO ROOSEVELT

HE HAD MADE INQUIRIES

DISCUSSION BY THE CABINET

Root Refuses to Talk, but Officials Hint That Mr. Tower May Retire Sooner Than Was Expected.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 27.—Although the German Foreign Office still persists in the declaration that it has no knowledge of any official German objection to Dr. David Jayne Hill as Charlemagne Tower's successor as American Ambassador to Berlin, I am enabled to cable the following absolutely authentic version of the piquant incident which has become the diplomatic sensation of two hemispheres.

The ignorance of the facts at the Foreign Office will be understood everywhere when THE NEW YORK TIMES announces, on the highest possible authority, that Emperor William chose to communicate his views on this occasion—as he did on the occasion of his letter to Lord Tweedmouth on British naval matters—not through the customary channel of his Foreign Office, or the Embassy at Washington, but through a highly private communication addressed to President Roosevelt himself.

This communication was sent through the American Embassy at Berlin. It is now on the ocean. As it cannot reach Washington until some time next week its contents were to-day cabled in cipher to President Roosevelt, who will no longer remain in any doubt as to the character of the objections which the Kaiser has to receiving Dr. Hill as America's representative at the Imperial Court.

Roosevelt Must Take Responsibility.

When the exact nature of these objections shall become known—and the only person who can make them public is President Roosevelt—it will become apparent that the Kaiser, in his characteristic, impulsive manner, has taken boldly upon himself the responsibility of pointing out to Mr. Roosevelt why he considers Dr. Hill unfit for the Berlin Embassy.

The Kaiser's letter makes no secret of the fact that he has changed his mind regarding Dr. Hill's availability within the last five months. In November, when Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambassador at Washington, lodged inquiries at Berlin regarding the appointment of Dr. Hill, the Emperor gave his unreserved approval to the choice.

Since then, especially within the last four weeks, certain information affecting Dr. Hill's personality has reached the Kaiser. When it was confirmed from a number of valued and responsible quarters, including several distinguished personages who accompanied Prince Henry of Prussia on his visit to the United States, the Emperor regarded it as his privilege and duty to advise Mr. Roosevelt promptly of the change his opinion regarding Dr. Hill had undergone. The result was the detailed message which the Emperor authorized Ambassador Tower to transmit to Mr. Roosevelt in the imperial name.

Mr. Tower promptly cabled the State Department at Washington that such a message was on the way, and expected that the first news of it would come from Washington. The present sensation having broken out before the Kaiser's letter could reach Washington, the Ambassador decided to-day to forward it by cable.

No Intriguing by Tower.

The communication will show that there is no foundation whatever for the statements published in Europe and America to the effect that the incident is the result of a base intrigue on the part of Mr. Tower for the purpose of prolonging his stay in Germany. The Kaiser is frankly fond of Mr. Tower, and is honestly proud of the sumptuous social representation which America has enjoyed under the régime of the multi-millionaire Ambassador and his wife. He has said all this to President Roosevelt, and has expressed the very sincere regret wherewith he views the coming departure of the Towers.

That seems to represent the sum total of the "intriguing" rôle which Mr. Tower has played in the entire incident, namely, the misfortune of being extraordinarily popular in the estimation of the sovereign to whom he has been accredited for the last five years.

When the full history of the Hill incident becomes known, it will turn a strange searchlight on the practices in vogue in the German Foreign Office, for the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES is able to state in the most positive manner that the Press Bureau of the Foreign Office, in issuing categorical denials of any German objections to Dr. Hill, was either pitiably misinformed of what has been known to the chiefs of that department, or wished to evade the responsibility for the changes of mind wherein the Kaiser, like any other mortal, apparently reserves the right to indulge.

Although the Foreign Office has been aware for at least a week of the imperial opposition to Dr. Hill, it has seen fit to leave even Baron von Sternburg in ignorance thereof, for Baron von Sternburg's first intimation of the real situation was Ambassador Tower's cablegram to the State Department notifying it that the important communication was on the way.

A MYSTERY, SAYS DR. HILL.

Society Woman Thinks a Social Feud Has Made the Trouble.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 27.—Dr. David Jayne Hill, who has been chosen to be American Ambassador to Berlin, is still without word, either from Washington or Berlin, to explain the sudden objections raised in Germany against his appointment.

"The whole matter remains a profound mystery," he said, when I saw him to-night. "I must confess that if I don't go to Berlin it will be a bitter disappointment. I can't believe the statement that I am persona non grata there. I have reason to believe that the contrary is true. Moreover, none could be in a better position to judge in this matter than my chief in Washington."

Dr. Hill said that he did not know how long he would remain in Paris. He came here with Mrs. Hill on business. The announcement of the difficulty about the Berlin post came as an absolute surprise.

When I told Dr. Hill that it was intimated in certain quarters that his lack of a great personal fortune was the sole disqualification, he replied:

"I can't believe that such is the case. If it were true, the best thing I could do would be to go home immediately."

Many Messages of Sympathy.

Dr. Hill, whose attractive personality and excellent professional record have won him a host of official and unofficial admirers throughout the United States and Europe, has suddenly become a central figure in the diplomatic world. From a private source I learn that he is the recipient of numerous messages of sympathy and encouragement from all sorts of high personages.

One eminent diplomatist told me this afternoon that the report that Dr. Hill's relations with Prince Henry of Prussia had anything to do with the contretemps was utterly absurd.

"I was in Washington at the time of Prince Henry's visit," he said, "and I can positively state that the Prince entertains a feeling of the warmest admiration and friendship for the future Ambassador. Dr. Hill accompanied the royal visitor everywhere he went and superintended all the arrangements for his personal safety. It was known in Washington at the time that Anarchists intended to commit an attempt on Prince Henry's life. Whether the Prince knew this I can't say, but when he left Washington he expressed his strong personal gratitude to Dr. Hill, and as a token of his friendship gave a portrait of himself, with an autograph sentiment."

Tale of a Society Feud.

On the other hand, a former Washington society woman, now a resident of Paris, who is thoroughly conversant with the secret diplomatic history of Europe, assures me that the whole imbroglio is social, and not political. Dr. Hill was officially accepted by the German Government as long ago as last November, when Mr. Tower's resignation was momentarily expected. There has been a strong feeling in the diplomatic set against Mrs. Hill. As the wife of the Assistant Secretary of State in Washington, it is declared, she made social enemies who are now striving to accomplish her husband's downfall, although every one, even her enemies, is fond of him. The Towers are said to have permitted themselves to be influenced by the Washington gossip and what they have heard in other embassies in Berlin.

HILL NOT WEALTHY ENOUGH?

Diplomat Suggests Inability to Entertain Lavishly May Influence Kaiser.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 27.—Keen interest has been aroused in diplomatic circles here by the Dr. David Jayne Hill incident in Berlin, and the outcome of the affair is awaited with the greatest curiosity. Such details as have been published here serve only to make the confusion more confounded. I to-day asked a well-known member of the diplomatic corps his opinion on the subject.

Shrugging his shoulders, he said, "How can I give an opinion without knowledge of the facts? The world at large does not even know what are the facts and what is pure guesswork. If I might hazard a guess I would say that the secret of the whole matter is to be found in the fact that the United States Government does not pay its representatives abroad an adequate salary.

"The American Ambassador at Berlin receives, I believe, a salary of $15,000 a year. I am quite sure that Ambassador Tower has spent at least treble that amount annually. Now, Dr. Hill, I understand, is not a wealthy man, and on the salary he would receive from the State Department he could not possibly represent his country so magnificently as the present incumbent of the post is doing from a point of view of social entertainment.

"It is quite possible," continued my informant, "that there is nothing behind the objection to Dr. Hill than some more or less outspoken expression of regret that he is not possessed of private means which would enable him to follow the example set by Charlemagne Tower. Presumably when the German Foreign Office was sounded as to Dr. Hill's acceptability, as is customary before all diplomatic nominations, this question was not taken into consideration—in fact, it could not overtly be taken into consideration. However, the Kaiser's personal views are well known. He does things on a magnificent scale himself, and would perhaps naturally prefer, all other things being equal, that a wealthy man be accredited to his Court rather than a man of modest means, when the Ambassadorial salary in itself was inadequate. Once it became known that Dr. Hill was not wealthy some indiscreet reference to the matter may have precipitated the present imbroglio.

"This view of mine," repeated my diplomatic friend, "of course, is pure guesswork, but as all the other views expressed on the subject appear to be of the same quality it perhaps is as near truth as any."

FOOD.

Children should not be allowed to drink Coffee. It contains a drug — Caffeine —which interferes with the child's natural growth.

Almost any doctor will tell you this. Many are now advising Postum — made from clean hard wheat—as a table beverage in place of coffee. When served hot with good cream, and sugar to taste, it is delicious, cheering and at the same time, healthful.

Postum contains no coffee or other harmful substance, but includes the "vital phosphates" from the wheat.

"There's a Reason."

TALKED OVER BY CABINET.

Washington Officials Refuse to Say They Have Received Kaiser's Letter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—It is reported in Washington to-night that the State Department now holds the key to the mystery that has shrouded the unofficial intimation that Dr. David Jayne Hill, the newly appointed Ambassador to Berlin, is not exactly acceptable. The solution is said to have been found in a cable copy of the letter sent by Ambassador Tower. Annoyed by the mystery and the international speculation occasioned by the episode, the State Department is said to have made a peremptory demand for a cabled report.

It is known the Hill-Tower tangle was discussed at the Cabinet meeting this morning. Secretary Root, however, refused to say anything of it when he left the White House. He was not to be found to-night. Assistant Secretary Robert Bacon declined to confirm or deny the report that the letter had been cabled.

"I'm trying to forget the incident," he said. "It is futile to discuss it, and it already has had far too much publicity."

In some quarters well-informed persons profess to see in the entire affair the desire of Mrs. Tower to continue at the German capital, where she has conducted a most successful campaign. She is an especial favorite in Court circles. It is pointed out that a clever woman would find it an easy matter to have a hint dropped that a continuation of the Ambassador's term would please all concerned.

More than one official of the State Department appeared significantly amused to-day when informed of Mr. Tower's statement in Berlin that he was sincere in his letter to the President last Fall in which he said he wished to retire, and that he still expected to turn in his resignation "within the next few months." One official remarked that possibly he meant within the next few "days." The feeling in the State Department is that no matter whether Dr. Hill goes to Berlin or not, Mr. Tower will shortly come home.

ALLEGED DENIAL BY KAISER.

Venice Hears that He Has No Objection to Dr. Hill.

VENICE, March 27.—Emperor William, it is reported, read with much interest the telegrams printed by the newspapers here concerning his alleged refusal to accept Dr. David Jayne Hill as United States Ambassador to Germany and said these accounts were incorrect.

He had made no objection to the appointment of Dr. Hill, he is reported to have said, although he had expressed regret that Charlemagne Tower was to leave the post of Ambassador.

BOOM HILL FOR GOVERNOR.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, March 27. — Emperor William's objection to Dr. David Jayne Hill's appointment as Ambassador to Germany was heard with surprise by Dr. Hill's many Rochester friends.

Max Lowenthal, friend of Dr. Hill, suggested yesterday that he be nominated by the Republicans for Governor this Fall. The suggestion has met with considerable favor.

BARNEY BIGLIN OUSTED.

Government Takes Away His Contract to Transfer Immigrants.

After thirty years at the immigration station as baggage transfer agent, Barney Biglin is to go. The order was given yesterday for the removal of his safe from Ellis Island. This is the result of a fight Commissioner of Immigration Robert Watchorn is making to have incoming aliens handled directly by the railroad companies from the time of their leaving the station until they arrive at their destination.

Barney Biglin had a contract with the Government under which he took intended passengers and their baggage from Ellis Island to the Grand Central Station for 50 cents each, and to the Fall River boat for 25 cents. His contract provided that he carry them in covered wagons, but since the opening of the Subway he has transferred the immigrants by that route.

Almost a year ago Commissioner Watchorn decided that not enough care was exercised in the handling of the passengers leaving Ellis Island. He declared that a person holding a ticket from the station to outside points should have the right of direct transit from Ellis Island, and he refused longer to permit such persons to be transferred from Ellis Island to the railroad stations by agents.

Mr. Biglin acted as the agent for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and when the Commissioner discovered that the passengers were being carried to the Grand Central Station in the Subway cars he declared Mr. Biglin's contract void and sent word to the road that any future contract would have to be made directly with the Department of Commerce and Labor, and not through an agent.

Yesterday the road notified the Ellis Island authorities that it would not make a contract for the handling of passengers, and immediately this word was received Barney Biglin was notified that he could move his belongings from Ellis Island.

Passengers bound East are handled by a baggage man at a cost greater than under the old system. They must now pay 85 cents for each piece of baggage and their own Subway fare.

Parsons Scores Odell.

Congressman Herbert Parsons replied last night to William Halpin, who the night before took exception to the Ehrhorn charges of fraud at the primaries in the Seventh Assembly District last year being revived at this time to give Mr. Parsons a chance to appoint Inspectors opposed to Mr. Halpin. In his reply Mr. Parsons bitterly attacks former Gov. Odell, and deals none too gently with Mr. Halpin.

FAYAL, The Azores, March 27.—The British steamer Armenian, Capt. Starck, from Liverpool for New York, towed into this port to-day the British steamer Manchester Trader, Capt. Scott, bound from Manchester for Philadelphia. The tail shaft of the Manchester Trader is broken.

WASHINGTON, March 27. — When George Scheuster takes the Thomas car out of Valdez, Alaska, in the Paris Matin NEW YORK TIMES race from New York to Paris, he will be the bearer of a letter from Secretary of War Taft to Gen. Picquart, the French Minister of War. Scheuster, with the car, sailed to-day from San Francisco for Seattle.

Mr. Taft, despite the fact that he is a leading figure in a great political race and is loaded down with work, has had time to follow the course of the automobile race with the greatest interest.

When he read this morning that the American crew was to sail from San Francisco to-day, he decided to show his interest in tangible form. So he wrote a letter to be forwarded to the crew. It reads:

> War Department,
>
> My Dear Sir: I am entrusting to the driver of the American contestant in the New York to Paris automobile race my greetings to your Excellency on the termination of this notable international event. The American public have watched with great interest the progress of the cars in the attempt to open up a new trans-continental route by a means of locomotion.
>
> The automobile, the manufacture of which has become one of our leading industries, is destined to assume a very important part in the economic welfare of the world. The perseverance and pluck of the contestants entitles them to the congratulations of all well-wishers of the development of mechanical ingenuity. Very respectfully yours.
>
> WILLIAM H. TAFT, Secretary of War.
>

This letter was sent to catch the Thomas car at Seattle before it sails for Valdez next Wednesday. Should it not do so it will go to Valdez on the next steamer and be sent forward as fast as possible to catch the car.

OFF FOR ALASKA.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 27.—On the steamer City of Pueblo the American Thomas car, racing from New York to Paris, left this city at 11 o'clock this morning for Seattle. It will arrive in Seattle on Monday morning, and will leave on Wednesday morning for Alaska, expecting to reach Valdez on April 6 to begin the most hazardous part of the whole 20,000-mile journey. The car was accompanied on the steamer by Georgo Scheuster, the mechanician who has been with it since it left New York, and will drive it to Paris; by George Miller, who joined the car at Buffalo, and has been with it since, and by Capt. Hansen, who joined it at Omaha.

An enthusiastic welcome was given to the machine on its arrival in San Francisco, and as enthusiastic crowds cheered it on its way to-day. The streets were lined with people when the machine left the Pioneer Garage, at 9 o'clock in the morning, and started for the dock of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company. Along the entire route the car got a continuous ovation. About the steamship dock it was necessary to establish police lines to keep the people away while the machine was being loaded aboard the boat. Not until the ship was lost from sight did the crowd disperse.

The attempt to cross Alaska at this late date is regarded here as foredoomed to failure, but Scheuster said this morning that the same predictions were made with respect to various stages of the trip across the United States, and after Indiana blizzards, Iowa mud, and trackless Wyoming, he was not prepared to accept what any one said of an automobile's possibilities until he had tested them himself.

He expected to take the car from Valdez to Fairbanks and to go down the Yukon River until he comes to make the run from the Yukon to Norton's Sound. Once there, he believes some way will be found to get across the intervening ninety miles from Kaltag to Unalakleek. However, impossible or not, the Thomas car started out, he says, to go as far as possible along the route outlined from New York to Paris, and he was prepared to stick to the route until it was no longer possible to advance.

A unique experiment will be made in sending reports from the car in Alaska. Carrier pigeons were taken aboard here, and will be liberated at given intervals along the route. Part of them will be let loose two days out from Seattle to carry back word to San Francisco on the ship en route. The remainder will be liberated along the trail in Alaska in the hope that some of them may make their way back to this city.

Arrangements have been completed with the Government authorities to permit the use of the Government telegraph stations along the trail between Valdez and Nome. This makes it possible to send nine messages from Alaska, at Tonsina, seventy-seven miles from Valdez; at Copper Centre, 102 miles; at Gulkana, 132 miles; at Washburn, 313 miles; at Fairbanks, 376 miles; at Tanana, 534 miles; at Kaltag, 735 miles; at Unalakleek, 835 miles, and at Nome, 1,098 miles. From Nome the Government employs wireless to St. Michaels, wires from St. Michaels to Valdez, and cable from Valdez to Seattle, so that quite a variety of telegraphic means of communication will be employed.

Those who have been in Alaska and are now here declare that the men who talk of hardships and rough experiences met with between New York and San Francisco will think they have been at child's play before they reach Nome. They say, however, that there is no real danger in the trip, as the men will always be within reach of roadhouses, which at fifteen or twenty mile intervals are situated all along the trail to Nome.

GOLDFIELD WAITS FOR ZUST.

Italian Car Leaves the Telegraph Line at Ely, Nevada.

Special to The New York Times.

GOLDFIELD, Nev., March 27.—The Italian Zust car, which left Ely and the telegraph line at 7 o'clock this morning to cross the mountain trail to this city, has not yet arrived here, though it is expected by midnight. The conditions on the trail are much the same as those met by the Thomas car, when it made the trip more than a week ago. There is some soft mud to fight through south of Ely before the mountain ascent begins. Then there is a long run through the mountainous stretches before the car begins the descent into the Tonopah district. It is slightly more than 200 miles from Ely to Tonopah, and 30 miles to Goldfield from the latter place. No report of the arrival of the car at Tonopah has been received as yet, though lookouts are posted there for the purpose of escorting the car to this place.

The same attention will be given the Italians as the American car received. If they will remain here for the purpose a banquet will be served and every effort made to impress the foreigners with the hospitality of a Western mining city and the sportsmanship of the American public.

It is understood the car will go through Death Valley from Goldfield to Mojave as the Thomas car did in making the run into California.

DE DION LEAVES OGDEN.

St. Chaffray Resoved on Desperate Efforts to Catch the Leaders.

Special to The New York Times.

OGDEN, Utah, March 27.—We are about to leave Ogden to cross the great American Desert. It is now late in the afternoon, but we are in a mood for desperate things. We are very decided that we must make fast time now.

Ogden used to be a place where a man could have four wives, but a wilful law has forbidden man to make four ladies happy at the same time. This law was not passed because they were unlucky, but on account of something else. At Ogden there are more women of good complexion than in many other places, and men who could get only one wife became jealous, so it was forbidden to have four wives.

I am jealous, too. I would like to catch the Thomas car before the thaw sets in over the North, but I go to the American Desert, which is full of sand and of rain.

We are still thinking of last night's wonderful journey into Ogden. Snow, more snow, in the country of sun, in the beautiful canyons from Castle Rock to Ogden; trees without leaves covered with white mantles; prairies looking like lakes in the night under the stars; torrents making a big noise left and right, and covering sometimes the roads. I cannot tell the beauties of the country.

Before we came to Ogden we were running in a dark night, and the snow was falling and beating into our eyes. The master cold went through the eyes to the back as through a window. I remember the big wires up the road conducting electric power. That was all there was to remind us we were not at Bering Straits.

The searchlight suddenly showed us a band of men on horseback at the top of a small hill, and coming at fast speed. As soon as they found it was an automobile their fantastic figures disappeared in the dark. The De Dion was faster than their horses, and we passed them and heard their cries. Were they robbers, or simply cowboys hoping to make a race?

The valley is rich in cattle, and small calves were running loose in the road, but we were anxious to get to Ogden before the snow had thoroughly closed the way, and keeping in mind strongly an event of the afternoon, we took chances of striking them. Fortunately we did not.

The event of the afternoon was a troublesome one. After leaving Evanston the De Dion got stuck in the mud so deeply that the efforts of our three men on the ropes and tackles was not enough to free it.

After an hour and a half of effort with tackles and shovels we were taking a rest when we saw two tramps coming to us from afar. Of course no labor or help can be expected from tramps except for money. These tramps we found did not wish dollars if it was necessary to work. They inspected everything cautiously, and refused energetically to help; it was so foolish for men to work hard for a car stuck in the mud, they said.

They were Hungarians. We have not seen Indians, but we know that the redskinned men ask always for some gift. Our Hungarians, in the old place of Indians, tried to rob us of an axle.

Lascaris, our companion on the trip since Chicago, is acute. He had a clear view of the situation, and saw the movement of the tramps. He took out his revolver and gently told the robbers to help us for the sake of their lives. The Hungarians proved to be clever workmen under the show of well-armed Lascaris and Autran. They helped strongly, and thanks to them the big car got out of mud, and we came to Ogden.

DELAY FOR THE PROTOS.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., March 27.—The German Protos car, which broke down four miles from this city, was towed in here last night for repairs. It will be necessary for the car to remain here for two days before it will be able to continue the journey to San Francisco.

Lieut. Koeppen and his chauffeur, while disappointed by the delay, are making the best of the time to overhaul the car and put it in condition to travel on any roads when it is able to start again.

LECTURE ON THE AUTO RACE.

Women Hear Orrel A. Parker Tell of Its Difficulties.

Before a large atendance of women Orrel A. Parker of the Automobile Club of America yesterday repeated his lecture on the New York to Paris race which he gave before the club members last week. He showed pictures of the competing cars, of features of the journey, and of stretches of the road in Alaska and Siberia.

His recitation of the hardships in the contest was followed with closest attention. He told of the delivery of a message to Montague Roberts on the Thomas car from the Overland Limited in transit across Nebraska. E. C. Morse of the Thomas Company dropped a packet from the train in front of the racing automobile as it ran parallel to the track. He described how the car was met on the plains by a cowboy bearing a small bunch of roses, which he delivered to the driver as an expression of the good will of Western women.

A POLICE SHAKE-UP, WITH MORE TO COME

Graft Expose Results in Reduction of One Acting Captain and Many Transfers.

KELEHER NOW A LIEUTENANT

He Raided the "Plant" Gambling House—Bingham to Resign Next Year—Talk of Police Reform.

Police Commissioner Bingham began his "Spring cleaning" yesterday by shaking up the department a bit. He intimated also that the jolt was only the first of a series, which will keep New York's policemen, from Inspectors down to patrolmen on the beat, on the jump for some time to come. Yesterday's shake-up was the result of the recent exposure of police graft in the Third Inspection District in the protection of gambling dens, which exposé came about through a trap laid for dishonest policemen; a trap in which a "plant" gambling house, operated on Sixth Avenue near Twenty-sixth Street, was run for six days under the sanction of the Commissioner and the District Attorney's office.

Following the shake-up Commissioner Bingham told what he would like to do were his hands untied for awhile.

The most important of yesterday's changes was the reduction of Acting Capt. Bernard Keleher to a Lieutenancy, and his transfer from the West Sixty-eighth Street Station to the Fifth Street Station for desk duty. Lieut. Keleher has been looked upon as one of the most alert and capable of the younger Acting Captains. His name was involved in the police graft scandal, but no suspicion of having received money was directed to him. He raided the first of the two "plant" gambling establishments which were operated in an effort to trap dishonest policemen.

Hanson's Vice Squad Goes.

The wiping out of Deputy Commissioner Hanson's so-called Vice Squad was another feature of yesterday's shake-up. This squad, at whose head was Lieut. John H. Ayres, had been doing special duty for many months under the personal supervision of Mr. Hanson. Its main duty was the investigation of poolroom cases. Under Lieut. Ayres were Detective John A. Hughes and Policemen Creary and Owens. Lieut. Ayres and Hughes were visitors to the place of "French Marx," the arsenal saloon, which was known as the rendezvous for gamblers and wardmen who had been suspected of levying tribute from gamblers.

"For the good of the service," was the only reason Commissioner Bingham would ascribe for the changes.

"All I can say is that for the good of the department I am transferring one Captain, reducing one Acting Captain, and sending several detectives who were mentioned in the graft scandal to Mercer Street Station, so that I can keep a watchful eye on them. The detectives will do patrol duty," he said.

The Captain who is transferred is Michael J. Reidy of the Flushing Avenue Station, Brooklyn. He goes to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, succeeding Acting Capt. Keleher. Capt. Reidy was a Lieutenant attached to the Detective Bureau until three months ago, when he was promoted. He is young, bright, and active, and knows the crooks.

Lieut. Ayres has been sent to do desk duty in the Fourth Avenue Station, Brooklyn, and Hughes goes to Mercer Street. Hughes has been called the "best dressed man on the force." Other "plain clothes" men who have been transferred for patrol duty at the Mercer Street Station under Capt. O'Reilly are John De Cantillion of Oak Street Station, Arthur Carmick of Charles Street Station, Daniel O'Sullivan and Frank Mueller of Madison Street Station, John J. Lyons of Delancey Street Station, John F. Bonser of the West Twentieth Street Station, John C. Horan of the Macdougal Street Station, and Thomas J. Moore of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station.

The names of De Cantillion and Lyons were prominently mentioned in the police graft scandal, and Lyons is accused by William Rose, "boss gambler" of the "plant" establishment, of having received $250 protection money. Rose also accuses De Cantillion of wanting to get in on the graft. Horan's name also figured in the scandal. Moore and Bonser were with Acting Capt. Keleher when he made the raid on the "plant" gambling house on Thirty-fourth Street before the trap was fairly laid.

Another List of Transfers.

Other changes were:

Lieut. James S. Bolan of the West Forty-Seventh Street to the Fourth Inspection District under Inspector Walsh.

Lieut. Robert Howe from the Butler Street Station, Brooklyn, to Richmond Hill.

Lieut. Michael McDonough, Richmond Hill, to Butler Street, Brooklyn.

Lieut. Edward T. Alcorn, Whitestone, to Butler Street, Brooklyn.

Thomas Matthews, Carnarsie, to Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn; Francis H. Kelly from the Harbor Squad to Charles Street, Manhattan, and George V. Crede from Charles Street to the Third Inspection District.

The following "plain clothes" detectives of Inspector Thompson's staff of the Sixth Inspection District (Harlem) have been ordered to various precinct station houses to work in uniform as patrolmen. William B McManus to the West 100th Street Station; Anthony Newman to the West 100th Street Station; William C. Ryan to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station; Charles Van Bushkirk to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, and John J. Rahill to the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

Lieut. James E. Raleigh of the Vernon Avenue Station, Brooklyn, was retired and pensioned. He was appointed to the force on Jan. 4, 1887.

"If I could have my own way I would reorganize this department so that the policing of New York would be as easy as spanking a baby," said Commissioner Bingham yesterday. "In the first place I would get about fifty old army men—retired Sergeants and so forth—and put them in as Captains of Police. Then you would see some drilling and some discipline. And they would be honest, too. They would not do as Inspectors, because the Inspectors require the police training that the present Inspectors have. But as Captains they would be good.

"I do not expect to serve out the five years the statutes require as the term of office of a Police Commissioner. Next year, when the Mayor's term is up, I will hand in my resignation to his successor."

"Are you tired of the job, Commissioner?" he was asked.

"Not tired, but very weary," replied Commissioner Bingham, with a sad smile. "It is no cinch, this job. My hands are full all the time. I was never expected to break up the graft in the Police Department, and I never expected to do it. Graft will remain as long as the police officials come from the ranks. I was expected to break the 'system,' however, and I have done it, I believe. That helps some. My ideal for a department here would be to have one district which would be a crackerjack—a model for all the rest. In it I would have the best men on the force. Every man in the other districts would be striving to get transferred to the crack district. That would improve the whole tone of the force. Maybe, such a one will be established. Wait."

STOUT HEIRS FIGHT MRS. BLACKBURN GIFT

Allege Aged Man Was Deceived Into Thinking He Was Father of Her Adopted Daughter.

HE GAVE THE CHILD $50,000

And Set Aside $100,000 for Mrs. Blackburn, Which He Revoked Later After a Quarrel.

Mrs. J. C. S. Blackburn, Jr., a daughter of the late Lieut. Gen. Sterling Price of the Confederate Army and a daughter-in-law of ex-United States Senator J. C. S. Blackburn of Kentucky, is defendant in a suit brought by the heirs of the late Jacob Stout to have set aside bequests totaling $150,000 that it is alleged Mr. Stout set aside for Mrs. Blackburn and the latter's adopted daughter Dorothy, under the impression that he was the father of the child. One of the twelve heirs of Mr. Stout, who jointly bring the suit against Mrs. Blackburn, is Mrs. Josefa N. Osborn, who is a stepdaughter of Jacob Stout.

According to the allegations of the plaintiffs, Mr. Stout, who at the time of his death, last July, was 87 years old, had been led to believe that he and Mrs. Blackburn were the parents of little Dorothy. He became deeply attached to the child, the complaint says, and set aside $50,000 for her benefit. The other $100,000 is a fund that Mr. Stout is alleged to have set aside for the use of Mrs. Blackburn. Mrs. Blackburn, who lives in a handsome house at 158 West Eighty-fifth Street, denies the allegations and declares that at no time was Mr. Stout ignorant of the true parentage of her adopted daughter.

The child, Mrs. Blackburn says, is the daughter of a woman named Holbe, now living in Germany, who, not being able to support her, gave the child to Mrs. Blackburn in her infancy. Mrs. Blackburn says that Mr. Stout knew all about this transaction, and that his gifts to the child were due to his affection for her.

Ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott of the firm of Olcott, Gruber, Bonynge & McManus, is counsel for Mrs. Blackburn, while Tomlinson & Tomlinson of 35 Wall Street are looking after the interests of the other heirs. Mr. Tomlinson said last night that the case would not come up in court for some time yet, and he was averse to discussing it now. Judge Olcott also refused to discuss the case from the Blackburn standpoint.

Mrs. Blackburn has been living at the West Eighty-fifth Street address for several years. She is one of three sisters, all of whom were noted for their beauty. She is said to have inherited one-third of an estate valued at $500,000 from her father, the late Gen. Price, who was one of the most distinguished of Missouri's sons in his day. The house in which Mrs. Blackburn lives is said to be part of the estate she inherited from her father.

It is said that there is a mortgage on the house for $10,000, drawn in favor of Mr. Stout in 1900, and it is alleged that the money has never been paid, nor has the mortgage ever been foreclosed. This mortgage also figures in the suit that will be aired in the Supreme Court of Staten Island next June.

Mrs. Blackburn has applied to the courts to be appointed guardian for Dorothy Blackburn, and in this application, it is said, she declares that she never at any time tried to make the late Jacob Stout believe that he was the father of the girl. That she will fight to a finish the attempt to have the indentures made by Mr. Stout set aside, there is not the least doubt, it was said yesterday. The trust fund set aside for the child consists of 500 shares of United States Steel, preferred, valued at $50,000.

Mrs. Blackburn came to New York soon after her separation from her husband, and soon after that she is said to have met Mr. Stout, who was then 78 years old.

"Mr. Stout," Mrs. Blackburn says, "was in the habit of calling on me once or twice a year. He knew that Dorothy was neither his daughter nor mine, and he knew that the child had been given to me when she was a little baby by a woman named Holbe, who did not know what to do with her. The father, a man named Walters, died three months before Dorothy was born."

It was in February, 1904, that Mr. Stout is said to have set aside the first of two $50,000 trust funds for the use of Mrs. Blackburn. In December of the same year the second $50,000 was set aside, making the fund $100,000. In the following June, Mr. Stout and Mrs. Blackburn are said to have gone before a notary public and entered into an agreement, in which they stated that they contemplated matrimony, and in which agreement Mrs. Blackburn relinquished her dower rights in consideration of the $100,000 trust funds.

Two years later, in March, 1907, there was evidently a quarrel between Mr. Stout and Mrs. Blackburn, and Mr. Stout is alleged to have made an indenture revoking the $100,000 fund. Two months later he relented somewhat, and created the $50,000 fund for Dorothy. In July following he died. His will did not mention the Blackburns.

Mrs. Blackburn is said to contend that the $100,000 fund cannot be set aside for the reason that the agreement signed in 1905 was an ante-nuptial contract that Mr. Stout made in recognition of her promise to marry him, and that the revoking order is therefore null and void.

WORRY HUGHES SUPPORTERS.

Governor's Friends Fear Taft Organization May Undermine Him.

Unless the friends of Gov. Hughes bestir themselves without delay the delegation from this State to the Republican National Convention at Chicago, may not only desert the Governor after the first ballot but will assert and probably with some justice that the sentiment of the majority of the Republican voters in their districts favored such a move. It is to bring about this state of affairs that the "Taft Organization of the State of New York" has opened headquarters at 170 Broadway.

The purpose of the organization is to stir up sentiment by various means and to get on the record every voter who favors the nomination of the Secretary of War.

The Executive Committee of the new organization was made public on Thursday. Louis C. Hay is Chairman of that committee, and he was at work yesterday at the headquarters.

Mr. Hay showed a printed slip, with the names of the Executive Committee on one side and on the other the name of the organization and a blank: "I favor the nomination of William H. Taft for President of the United States and desire my name enrolled." There was room for a signature and address.

"In addition to opening headquarters in this city," Mr. Hay continued, "we will open offices in practically every centre of population in the State. It is our intention to bring out the strength of Mr. Taft in this State and show people that it exists."

"Then it is not the purpose of the organization to obtain delegates?" was asked.

"Well," said Mr. Hay, "if we can get the New York delegation to vote for Mr. Taft on the second or third ballot, there might be an advantage in that."

It was observed that in the list of the Executive Committeemen was the name Samuel R. Betts. Mr. Betts is the partner of James S. Sheffield, who is a very close friend of President Roosevelt. The presence of Mr. Betts on the committee was taken as indicative of the fact that the President was interested in the organization.

There can be no doubt that there has been a remarkable change of sentiment somewhere since Jan. 23, when Secretary Taft wrote his letter to Congressman Parsons, calling off the fight on Hughes in the County Committee.

A STATEMENT

The Globe-Wernicke Co. is the largest manufacturer of office and library furniture in the world, the originator and owner of the basic patents covering the sectional or unit idea as applied to filing cabinets and bookcases, and the commercializer of the card index. The Company stands indisputably and pre-eminently the leader in the office furniture business. We set the pace in the early infancy of this industry and we have maintained it. Many imitators have come and gone leaving hundreds of victims with parts of filing cabinets and bookcases that can never be duplicated and there are inferior wares on the market to-day imitating our product, but there is just one Globe-Wernicke "Elastic" bookcase, there is just one Globe-Wernicke "Elastic" filing cabinet. We make the best goods that money can buy and our prices are right. Globe goods are known the world over as the standard of honest construction, merit and excellence.

ITALY WILL SUPPORT WAR ON ANARCHISTS

Government and People Are Pleased by the Activity of President Roosevelt.

PASSPORTS TO BE GUARDED

Honest Italians in America Have Complained of the Depredations of Their Criminal Countrymen.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, March 27.—Reports that have reached this city about President Roosevelt's war on Anarchists have produced the greatest satisfaction in all quarters, from the Government to the lower classes. The latter have many relations and friends among the emigrants to America, whose reputation as sober, honest, and laborious workmen has been compromised by the reckless acts of a few countryless desperadoes who have been already repudiated by their own fatherlands and have sought refuge in America, thus hoping to escape justice.

The Government authorities here will co-operate in every way with President Roosevelt in his campaign. It will prevent the departure of whoever has the least stain on his record by refusing passports. The Government, in a circular to all the Prefects in the kingdom has given the most stringent orders on the subject.

The trouble is that the undesirable emigrants manage to sail from non-Italian ports. Information received here from the United States shows that once in America these criminals are specially dangerous to other Italians, who often apply to the home Government for protection. But Italy cannot possibly interfere. So now it is hoped that President Roosevelt's proverbial energy will be successful in defeating the gang of international malefactors who are trying to give their crimes a political character by calling themselves the propagators of new doctrines.

Nobody here forgets that Paterson is the den wherefrom Bresci was instigated to murder King Humbert. So Mr. Roosevelt's blow to the paper of those so-called Anarchists by keeping it out of the mails is heartily applauded. His campaign, besides ridding the country of its worst element, will render a great service to a large number of Italians who are the direct victims of the criminals, and who only desire to be loyal, quiet, hard-working citizens.

It is curious that both the King and the Pope are equally interested in Italian emigration, being convinced that Italians will make splendid colonists if the bad elements be weeded out.

SIGNORA TOSELLI WATCHED.

Genoa Police Fear She Will Molest Saxon King, Her Former Husband.

GENOA, March 27.—The police are closely watching the movements of Signora Toselli, formerly the Countess Montignoso, in the fear that she may molest King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, her former husband, who is here.

Notwithstanding denials it is said that Signora Toselli and her new husband do not agree.

BONNANO MURDER ARREST.

A Greek Barber Locked Up on Suspicion—Evidence Circumstantial.

The latest development in the Vincenzo Bonnano murder was the arrest last night of a Greek barber, whose name the police say is George Christopolus, 24 years old, the proprietor of the Olympia barber's shop at 49 West Twenty-ninth Street. He lives at 215 East Twenty-eighth Street with his wife.

The police will not say whether the monogram on the handkerchief found in the dead monk's hands had anything to do with the prisoner's arrest, but they called attention last night to the fact that his initials are "G. C." The initials on the monogram are "C. G." or "G. C."

Teresa Barrow says Bonnano was in his room with the Greek barber on Sunday before monk was found murdered.

ABRUZZI SAYS: DO I LOOK DISAPPOINTED?

When Asked if He Expects to Find Occasion to Return to America.

GOING TO ROME TO-DAY

Where, It Is Expected, Announcement of His Engagement to Miss Elkins Will Soon Be Made.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 27.—"I cannot say anything yet. I would like to, but—perhaps you can understand? Yes, I am going practically immediately to Rome."

The Duke of the Abruzzi, or just plain Luigi Sarto, as he registered at the Carlton Hotel, made the above statement to THE NEW YORK TIMES's correspondent on his arrival by the boat express of the Lusitania this afternoon.

The Duke wore a neat gray suit, a derby hat, and a smile that he tried hard to suppress, but failed to. He played a neat trick on the reporters who met him at the Euston station, although he posed for the photographers like a veteran, both with and without his hat.

The moment the photographers had finished he gave his valet directions in a loud voice to take his baggage to the Hotel Carlton, and, hurrying into a motor car, disappeared in the traffic, ostensibly going to the hotel mentioned. Accordingly, shortly afterward a swarm of reporters were making futile inquiries at the hostelry. The answer to all was that the Duke's valet and baggage had arrived, but not the Duke. The reporters waited for three or four hours, and then, tired and depressed, all but one left.

Shortly afterward the Duke, who had been in communication with the hotel by telephone from a near-by club, arrived to dress for dinner. As he entered he told THE NEW YORK TIMES's correspondent that he thought of continuing his journey to Rome to-morrow.

"When will you return to America?" I asked.

"I can't tell," he answered.

"Do you intend to return?"

"I don't look like a disappointed man, do I?" he asked.

The significance of this statement seems to bear out the general belief that the Duke has not met with a rebuff in love, as suggested by some American dispatches, but is simply going to Rome to get the King's permission to marry Miss Elkins, as is necessary with members of the house of Savoy, and that, if the royal assent is obtained, the official announcement will be made through the Italian State Department.

The Duke, by the way, proved to be one of the most popular passengers aboard the Lusitania, having thrown off the mask of reserve immediately after the ship sailed. The only subject he would not discuss with his newly made friends was that of his love affairs. He was present at the concert aboard the ship, and played deck games on several occasions, entering into the sport as enthusiastically as a schoolboy.

LIVERPOOL, March 27.—"There is absolutely nothing I can say regarding my reported engagement to Miss Katherine Elkins," said the Duke of the Abruzzi when he arrived here this morning on the Lusitania. He emphasized the personal pronoun in his statement, and intimated that any announcement must come from another source. He greeted the newspaper men smilingly.

Upon leaving the Lusitania in company with the Italian Consul at Liverpool, who was the only person here to meet him, the Duke faced a battery of cameras, but this did not ruffle his temper, and still smiling he passed up the dock to the railroad train, upon one of the cars of which there was the usual printed notice in large letters showing that a compartment had been reserved for him.

Among the friends he made on the voyage were Robert Watchorn, Commissioner of Immigration at New York, and William B. Howland, proprietor of The Outlook.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 27.—The committee whose duty it is to pass on the qualifications of army officers, composed of Grand Duke Nicholas, Minister of War Rudiger, and other officers of high rank, has invited Gens. Fock and Reiss to resign their commissions. These two officers were charged with complicity in the surrender of Port Arthur to the Japanese. Gen. Reiss complied with the request, but Gen. Fock declined, pending an investigation of the charges brought in connection with his recent duel with Gen. Smirnoff. Gen. Stoessel, who is serving his sentence in the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, is engaged in writing his memoirs.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, March 27.—The German cruiser Bremen left here to-day for Kingston, Jamaica, carrying all the revolutionary refugees who had taken asylum at the French and German Legations. They number in all seventy-five men. The United States gunboat Paducah arrived here this morning.

ROME, March 27.—Signor Pomelli, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, answered an interpollation in the Chamber of Deputies to-day made by Deputy Poggi regarding Joseph Paolucci, an Italian, who was hanged March 23 in the District of Columbia for the murder of his sweetheart. He said Italy must respect the sentence of a civilized country. Deputy Poggi declared that America had committed a barbarism by hanging a man who was already at the point of death from consumption.

THE HAGUE, March 27.—The Second Chamber of the Netherlands Parliament to-day approved a convention with the United States under which American meats are to enter Holland at a reduction of the present import duties.

MELBOURNE, March 27.—The Minister of Defense, Thomas Ewing, has invited the commanding officers of the various branches of the forces to submit recommendations in connection with the reception to be accorded the American battleship fleet in Australian waters.

BANKS GET PROVIDENT LIFE.

Court Orders Philadelphians to Transfer Title of Foreclosed Shares.

Control of the Provident Savings Life Assurance Society by the banking institutions which have taken over the majority stock pledged with them as collateral by the Thomas interests was assured yesterday by the issuance of a mandatory order by Justice O'Gorman compelling President John C. Grady and other representatives of the Coyle syndicate or Philadelphians, now in the board of the company, to transfer title in the shares foreclosed to the banks.

The Mercantile National Bank, the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, the Consolidated National Bank, and the Hudson Trust Company, which between them held 692 shares of the 1,250 shares of the company's capital stock as collateral for Thomas loans, have been taking title to the shares during recent weeks by bidding them in at auction, and have pooled their interests with the intention of conducting the company until full recovery has been made from the setback received because of the notoriety of the disclosures of the methods of the late management.

OLYMPIC GAMES AT BARNARD.

Students Compete in Greek Literary and Athletic Contests.

Yesterday afternoon the annual Greek games (supposed to imitate the Olympian as closely as possible) were held in the Thompson gymnasium between the Barnard sophomores and freshmen. All the students of both classes were lined up on opposite sides of the room in Greek costume. At one end of the room was an "altar" on a raised platform, on which the class Presidents, Miss Mabel Palliser, '10, and Miss Katherine Gay, '11, were seated.

The opening contest was by two Greek choruses. The freshman chorus of fifteen girls was accompanied by tinkling cymbals. The sophomores were entirely unaccompanied, but danced gracefully and majestically as they sang a song to Eros, translated from the Greek of Sophocles, and Miss Lilian Egleston, '10, was awarded the laurel wreath, being the author of the winning chorus. Prof. McWhood of the music department was judge.

There followed an invocation to the gods, Jupiter, Mercury, and the rest, and a libation was then poured. The next event was a contest in epic poetry, which was won by Miss Frances Randolph, '11. The rest of the contests were athletic.

GENEE LOSES A BRACELET.

Trying to Trace It Through the Lost Column and Offers a Reward.

Mlle. Adeline Genee, the dancer, is trying through THE TIMES's Lost and Found Column to recover a small round gold chain purse attached to a gold bracelet. The word Nita is engraved on a small gold plate on the purse, which contained when she lost it, in addition to some bills, an uncut blue stone, resembling a topaz, which had been sent to her by an old friend from the mountains in Nevada. In speaking of her loss yesterday she said:

"I do not care for the money I lost, but I cherish the purse and the stone very highly, and I hope the finder will be good enough to return it to me. On Tuesday I had luncheon with Mrs. Fiske at Sherry's and remember taking the bracelet, with the purse attached, off my arm there. We drove from Sherry's to the Casino in a taxicab. I missed the bracelet as I was entering the theatre about 2:30 o'clock."

The manager of Sherry's said yesterday that he had made inquiries among the waiters, and the loss had not been reported, as he was sure would have been the case had the purse been left on the table.

MURPHY SLAP AT McCARREN.

Tammany Leader's Hand Seen in Recent Brooklyn Appointments.

The McCarrenites were downcast and the anti-McCarrenites jubilant yesterday when four appointments to the Marriage License Bureau in Brooklyn were announced by City Clerk P. J. Scully. All the men appointed are from the forces opposed to the leadership of Senator McCarren. They are Charles Salg, Joseph E. Wainwright, Thomas Maher, and Herman Hessberg.

The names of the appointees were submitted, it is said, by anti-McCarren leaders in Brooklyn. The anti-McCarrenites say that the men were named with the approval of Tammany Hall, and that the appointments are a slap at McCarren.

Brooklyn politicians expect that Senator McCarren will retaliate through Controller Metz. The Controller has ten new auditorships in the Finance Department to fill. McCarren men assert that if Charles F. Murphy's attitude toward the Brooklyn Senator is not one of peace the Controller will not recognize Tammany in making these or any other appointments in his office.

BABY SEAGOERS.

Andree Coerse, 4, and Her Sister Cross Ocean, Parents Meeting Them Here.

Two baby girls, Andrée Coerse, 4 years old, and Henrietta Coerse, aged 2, arrived yesterday in the cabin of the White Star liner Majestic. They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. H. Coerse of 235 East Fifty-first Street, and they crossed in the care of Steward William Brown.

The little ones won the affection of the women passengers and were properly petted by them. The parents of the children were at the pier to meet them.

EDISON COMPANY YIELDS.

Agrees to Service Board's Demand in Regard to "Breakdown" Service

The New York Edison Company came to terms with the Public Service Commission yesterday in the matter of electrical "breakdown" service. At the adjourned hearing in the matter J. W. Lieb, Jr., the company's Third Vice President, stated that the company had decided to agree to furnish "breakdown" service at a rate of 9 instead of 10 cents per kilowatt hour, and the minimum charge would be $30 a year per kilowatt of "maximum demand" instead of per kilowatt of installation.

It was learned yesterday that Commissioner Maltbie had told an officer of the company that if the company did not yield the point of charging for maximum demand the commission would put experts on the books in every plant of the company, and if it found that the rates were excessive would compel a general reduction.

Nurse Gets $25,000 for Lost Legs.

Miss Addie M. Hunt, the trained nurse who had her legs cut off by being run over at Great Neck station on June 21, 1905, obtained an award of $25,000 damages against the Long Island Railroad Company by a jury yesterday before Supreme Court Justice McCall.

BROOKLYN NEWS NOTES.

The West End and Fourth Avenue Baptist Churches, which are to be consolidated, have purchased a plot of land at Sixth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, on which a large church building will be erected. The present properties of the two churches are to be sold.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company and the Kings County Electric Light and Power Company applied yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Marean to restrain James M. Rodgers and John J. Haggerty, contractors, from interfering with the plaintiff's electric conduit in Gold Street in the construction of a sewer main. Justice Marean reserved decision.

Burglars early yesterday morning broke into the clubhouse of the Ninth Assembly District Democratic Club, at 315 Fifty-third Street, and stole a small sum of money and some checks. They also took some valuable papers from the private desk of ex-Fire Commissioner William A. Doyle, the district leader, and smashed a lot of furniture in the place.

There was a mad dog scare at Fulton and Poplar Streets yesterday morning, when a terrier supposed to have been suffering from rabies appeared there. James O'Hara of 13 Poplar Street and John Ward of 54 Fulton Street were bitten by the animal. Their wounds were dressed by an ambulance surgeon. The dog was shot by a policeman.

CHILAPA, MEXICO, SHAKEN AND BURNED

Two Earthquake Shocks, Followed by Fires That Destroy City of 15,000.

THE INHABITANTS ESCAPE

Shock in West Indies—Wisconsin's Roaring Well, That Rumbled Before Frisco Disaster, Does It Again.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, March 27.—Chilapa, a town of 15,000 inhabitants, in the State of Guerrero, has been shaken by an earthquake and burned.

The shocks, two in number, occurred early last evening, and were followed by fires, which originating in a dozen places among the tumbling buildings, joined in a conflagration that swept the town.

Telegraph communication with Chilapa was severed by the shocks, and the town is two days by horseback from the nearest railway station.

Gov. Damian Flores of Guerrero, who is in this city, at 9 o'clock this evening received the first official advices from the town of Chilapa. The message says that, while a number of the buildings of the town were leveled to the ground, no lives were lost. The police quarters and the Mayor's office were destroyed and the jail was badly damaged. Great fissures were made in the streets and open fields. In the neighboring town of Ometepec the jail was destroyed and thirty prisoners made their escape.

Couriers have been dispatched to Chilapa from Chilpancingo, forty-five miles distant, and it is presumed that messengers for relief were sent from the burned city early to-day, and possibly immediately following the earthquake last night.

The destroyed town lies about 115 miles south of Mexico City. It was the seat of a Bishop and several important manufactories were located there.

The State of Guerrero is in the earthquake belt. On April 15, last year, it was visited by a serious earthquake, which did considerable damage and threw the people into a panic. At this time Chilpancingo and Chilapa were partially destroyed, and 100 persons lost their lives.

Mrs. Emma Jeannette Dorville, an American, dropped dead of heart disease last night in the Tiburcio Theatre in Vera Cruz during a panic which followed the earthquake. News of the panic reached Mexico City to-night. When the quake was felt the audience rushed for the exits and many persons were severely bruised.

A gendarme was killed, fifteen persons were slightly hurt, and one was fatally injured in Mexico City last night by falling beams and walls. All of these were workmen.

ST. THOMAS, D. W. I., March 27.—A sharp earth shock occurred here Thursday afternoon and created much alarm. No damage, however, is reported.

BELOIT, Wis., March 27.—The roaring well has roared again. March 19 it was found that the phenomenon on the farm of Charles Lathers, northeast of Beloit, was active. The well roared for several weeks before the great earthquake at San Francisco, and the curious sound of rumbling, together with wind from the mouth of the well, ceased at the precise hour when the shock struck the California City.

On the day, a little more than a week ago, when the well resumed its clamor, residents of Rock County predicted a calamity. To-day it came, in Chilapa, Mexico.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Two great earthquakes were recorded at the Weather Bureau last evening. Four excellent records of each shock were obtained, in which all the details of the phenomena are shown with great distinctness.

The first shock was much greater than the second, and began with great distinctness at 6:09:22 P. M. The second shock began with equal distinctness at 10:54:22 P. M.

The duration of the first preliminary tremors in the first shock was exactly the same in all four records and amounted to five minutes and three seconds. The first preliminary tremor in the second shock lasted only four minutes and fifty-four seconds.

The distance, in the first case, would be a little more than 2,400 miles, probably, and in the second case, slightly less than 2,400 miles. This disturbance agrees so closely with that indicated for an earthquake recorded on the afternoon of March 25 as to suggest that all three of these earthquakes originated in nearly the same locality.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 27.—The earthquake in the Danish West Indies and Mexico was registered on the seismographs in the State Museum here, the record showing the disturbance to have been one of high intensity and long duration.

The main shock was preceded and followed by other disturbances which seem to have originated in the same zone, the several shocks probably marking successive stages of a convulsion that is one of the severest recorded at Albany during the last year.

MARCH GOING OUT LAMBLIKE.

Mercury at 71, Overcoats Cast Aside, and the Ricky in Demand.

Unless conditions greatly change, March will go out like the proverbial lamb. Yesterday the mercury did a bit of climbing, and gin rickeys and peek-a-boo clothes came out again. By 1:10 o'clock in the afternoon the weather man reported 71 degrees. In the street it was two or three degrees warmer, the record for a March 27.

There was enough humidity in the warm southwest wind to be unpleasant. Heavy overcoats became intolerable.

It was not only the warmest March 27 on record, but it approached within six degrees the previous high record for a March day, established on March 23, 1907.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IS URGED BY IVINS

He Declares All New Lines Should Be Built by the City and Privately Operated.

SAYS BELMONT'S A CONVERT

Problem of Congested Population Not Relieved by New Transit Facilities—The Public Criticised.

Declaring that municipal ownership with proper leases for operation of the various lines was the only solution of the local transit problem, William M. Ivins added another chapter at the Museum of Natural History last night to his discussion of the congested condition in the city and the relief that could be afforded.

Mr. Ivins declared that more people are being converted to municipal ownership every day, but he suggested that the ownership must be brought about on terms fair to the city.

"It will be interesting to show how a great opponent of municipal ownership has been converted," he continued. "I speak of Mr. August Belmont. He has built a tunnel for $8,000,000 which cannot earn interest on half that sum at an additional three-cent fare. He is now, therefore, entirely willing to sell it to the city and carry passengers through it for nothing for the city's account, the city to pay the interest on an issue of over $7,000,000 of bonds and guarantee him against any loss in operating expenses. This is going a length in municipal ownership that the wildest-eyed Socialist has never yet dared go. It is truly wonderful how our interests change our views, give color to our theories of Governmental function and safe and sane administration, and determine our patriotism."

Speaking of this city's transportation problem in general, Mr. Ivins said:

Would Have City Own All New Lines

"My study of its history and of the present situation convinces me that all new means of transportation must be owned, though not operated, by the city, whether subways or surface or elevated roads; that they must be part of the municipal system precisely as the streets themselves, the dock system, and the water system now are. Private capital will not build and own on any terms that the people will endure. What remains of our birthright we are not going to sell for a mess of pottage. But what private capital will not do except at the price of extortion the city can do, because it can be satisfied with a return on its capital just sufficient to pay its own interest charges.

"I do not believe it is well or wise to allow new roads to be owned by private capital, and I don't believe that private capital will ever want to own them or will ever bid for them except on terms so advantageous to it as to be equally disadvantageous to the city. But note that I do not say municipal operation. I am heartily opposed to that. To that I emphatically cry No! No! No! But the reasons are too numerous to consider here and now. My belief is that the solution is corporate operation under municipal regulation, although no municipal management could fail more signally than the private management has in this city. But the inducement for private management to fail would not exist now that the law no longer permits the practices that have bankrupted our surface system."

Mr. Ivins does not approve the manner in which the present Subway is operated.

"There is another thing in the Subway history that is interesting as showing how its owners are thoroughgoing Socialists when their interests dictate," he said. "You know that 'what we don't know don't trouble us.' Well, if the surface roads had the same exemption from taxation that the Subway enjoys they would now be paying, and the Subway itself would not be paying half its present dividends if it had to pay taxes as the surface roads do. The bald fact is that the city is sacrificing nearly a million a year in taxes and collecting that sum out of the public at large in order to have got the present Subway equipped by private capital, even though the city has had to lend $43,000,000 of its credit for construction. The city, I foresee, will hereafter have both to build and equip. Then it can make really advantageous terms for operation on a profit-sharing basis."

Now that there is a strong need for better transportation facilities, Mr. Ivins said, it is time to make the experiment of municipal ownership under his plan. He added: "Let the capital be that of the city, except so much of it as is needed for the ordinary business purposes of the operating company, which would not be a large sum, because the operating company, being supplied with its road and equipment, requires no large capitalization. Then let the city rent the operating privilege to the company, which after paying 5 per cent. on its own full paid working capital, and upon no water whatever, will agree to pay the largest share of the profits, not less than one-half, to the city. This for all future subways, and I believe that some application of this same principle supplies the only way out of our surface railway mess."

More Facilities, Worse Congestion.

Touching on the increased transportation facilities for suburban travel, Mr. Ivins was decidedly pessimistic as to its affording relief from congestion. Rather he was inclined to the belief that it would but add to the congestion. He said that every added facility for reaching the city brought thousands more people either for business or for pleasure, and thus conditions grew worse and more intolerable.

"Things, however, are not wholly beyond direction. It is certain, for instance, that new transportation facilities build up new localities, but it is by no means equally certain that they decrease congestion in old localities," he said. "They distribute the new growth, but do not redistribute the old. Personally I am convinced that they tend to increase that congestion. It is one of our mischievous commonplaces that increased transit lines will relieve congestion where it is greatest—one that everybody repeats and everybody seems to believe true. The fact is that every new railway line, I may say evry new car, means not greater comfort to the old travel, but new travel and new congestion, for the travel habit grows more rapidly than the facilities for travel possibly can. The use of electricity on the elevated railroads only relieved the surface cars for the first year, and the starting of the Subway only relieved the elevated road for a few months. The Brooklyn extension is to-day relieving the bridge, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and the Manhattan Elevated to the extent of 50,000 passengers each way daily, but it is making an intolerable state of affairs in the Subway still more intolerable, and in a little while there will be a return to the old conditions on the Bridge and elsewhere.

"Does any one think that we shall have relief through the opening of the McAdoo and the Pennsylvania tunnels? Not a bit of it. Every added facility brings its added thousands to the city for business or pleasure, and those thousands once here have to move through already crowded streets and ride on already crowded cars. Thus conditions grow more and more intolerable, and every means for bringing more people more comfortably and more quickly into the city not only implies but necessitates greater congestion within the city."

Taking another view of the transportation question, Mr. Ivins touched upon the position of the public. He said:

Public Helps Conductors Steal.

"After very careful study, I am satisfied that the company's loss through dishonesty on the part of conductors, and passengers, too, and the physical difficulty of collecting fares, costs the surface system nearly $1,000,000 a year. 'Well, I'm glad of it,' I've heard many men say, for they so hate the system that they become dishonest themselves or connive at dishonesty on the part of the company's employes.

"One of my acquaintances, a hearty fellow-worker in the effort to secure a better service, tells me quite unashamed that he never pays a fare unless the conductor expressly demands it of him, and adds that he rides free half the time because the conductor overlooks him or is not sure he had not already had the fare. This gentleman is a lawyer with a nice casuistic turn, as you may guess, and justifies this aspect of his hatred for the management by saying that he has no duty to pay until the company performs its duty of trying to collect. Then there are others who pay but prefer that the conductor rather than the company should have the money.

"Another acquaintance, with his wife and five children, got on an east side car last Sunday and paid his seven nickels. There was no one else in the car, and my acquaintance, who is a good-natured, ruddy-faced man, seeing the conductor pocket the money without ringing up, beckoned to him and said, 'Why not ring up a few of those nickels?' The response was full of good east side bonhomie, 'Phat's that, would you rather have the company have it than me? I know ye for a gentleman and a safe rider.' Another man, who with a half-dozen neighbors takes the car at about the same time every morning, says they all know the conductors, and that these latter, regarding them as friends and interested in their welfare, have no fear and never ring up until after a stranger has got into the car.

"Not long ago I saw just such a performance myself, and the conductor quite unblushingly told me that he didn't have to ring up transfers, and had transfers to burn. There is at least one barber's shop in the city where one gets a transfer with a shave."

Mr. Ivins then took up a criticism of those who talk about municipal reform without knowing anything much about the subject.

A Broader View Needed.

"One of our chief faults, and one from which we are now suffering most, is that our people and our Government have habitually, for generations, taken narrow and partial views, and always stunted healthy and proper municipal growth as a whole, by an exaggerated demand now for this, now for that, and never with a due sense of proportion or harmony or sane foresight. To-day we sacrifice everything to schools, to-morrow to an aqueduct, and then the next day to subways; to-day we cry for too rigid a restraint on the use of our credit, and to-morrow we clamor for none whatever.

"We demand action, action, action, and then shout mistrust of everyone, and impose checks and balances of power that paralyze all government. And if any man is bold enough, I may say courageous enough, as a sworn public officer, or as a foresighted citizen, to ask that all things be considered together and that power be commensurate with the task to be performed, he is certain to harvest a crop of hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness instead of an honest support in an intelligent effort to treat the city's life and the city's future as a whole."

Others who spoke were Allan Robinson, President of the Allied Real Estate Interests of New York, who advocated a change in the law which would permit private capital to build and operate transit facilities if the city cannot do so; John Martin, and Morris Hilquit. George McAneny, President of the City Club, presided.

Controller Metz followed Mr. Ivins. He declared that the city didn't have the money to build subways, and he thought best that private capital should be employed for the work.

The Controller declared that it would be exceedingly unwise to raise the tax rate in New York, because it would certainly drive the manufactories into New Jersey. Many were going across the river now, he declared.

The exhibit will close to-morrow evening and be opened in the Academy of Arts and Sciences, Brooklyn, Monday for two weeks.

The Strong Man

In this week's issue of THE SATURDAY EVENING POST Dr. William Lee Howard discusses muscular development. He tells what, in his opinion, is the worst form of exercise; why much modern physical culture is a fallacy, why the three-mile boat race is better than the four-mile, what "warming up" really signifies, how pugilists are beaten by a liver, and the meaning of fatigue poisons.

"Memories of Authors," in this same issue, form the continuation of William Winter's reminiscences. He speaks charmingly of his Boston Bohemian friends—including a verbal duel, in bed, between Fitz-James O'Brien and Donald McLeod, on the relative merits of the Scotch and Irish races.

DIETERICH DIVORCE HEARING.

Standard Oil Man Testifies Behind Closed Doors Against His Wife.

The hearing of testimony in a suit for divorce brought by Alfred C. Dieterich, who is connected with the Standard Oil Company, against his wife, Mrs. Edna H. Dietrich, began yesterday behind closed doors, at 35 Nassau Street, before Referee Samson Lachman. Mr. Dietrich's grounds for divorce are said to be based on the disappearance of his wife last December and her subsequent appearance in Paris with Harry S. Brenchley, who at one time was connected with the stables of Alfred G. Vanderbilt.

That Mrs. Dieterich, nominally, at least, is fighting the suit was evidenced by the presence of a member of the law firm of Kearney & Davis, who have been retained on her behalf. Nathan D. Stern was counsel for Mr. Dieterich.

One of the witnesses examined yesterday was a steward named Steffins, from a Hamburg-American liner. It was on one of this company's boats that Mrs. Dieterich and Brenchley are alleged to have sailed from here. Mr. Dieterich was also a witness. The date of the next hearing was kept secret.

THOMPKINS DIVORCE DROPPED

But Couple Will Live Apart—Settlement to be Made in This City.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 27. — By agreement the divorce case of Dr. Byron V. Thompkins of Sheffield against his wife, Julia A. Thompkins of New York, has been dropped. Dr. and Mrs. Thompkins will not live together again, but there will be no further court proceedings. Dr. Thompkins is now in New York, where a settlement of the case will probably be made. Judge Hitchcock ruled that the court had jurisdiction in the case.

SCARED TO DEATH BY FIRE.

Widow of Justice Whitbeck Dies as Apartment Above Her Burns.

The excitement incident to a fire in the flat above caused the death last night of Mrs. Annie Whitbeck, 78 years old, the widow of Supreme Court Justice Hans Whitbeck of Columbia County, N. Y. The fire was confined to the room in which it started in the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burke, on the fourth floor of the Quincy apartments, 476 West 141st Street. Mrs. Whitbeck lived in the apartments below with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Noble.

Mrs. Whitbeck and her daughter were alone in the flat when the fire was discovered, and Mrs. Noble helped her mother into the hall. Mrs. Whitbeck was badly frightened and the smoke, which had begun to drift down from upstairs, choked her. The elevator, with a load of tenants from the upper floors of the seven-story house, was on its way downstairs and had passed the third floor.

"I cannot walk down," sobbed Mrs. Whitbeck, and a moment later she suddenly commanded: "Take me back to my room. I think I am going to die."

Frank E. Hipple, another son-in-law who lives on the sixth floor, had come down to help his mother-in-law, and he carried her to her room. She collapsed on her bed. In the meantime Janitor James E. Sims had nearly put the fire out with an extinguisher, so Hipple hurried out for a doctor. Before he returned Mrs. Whitbeck died.

Mrs. Burke's small daughter was convalescing from scarlet fever in the apartment where the fire started, but she was got safely to the street.

"I CAN'T BE FITTED with ready-for-service Clothes," says the skeptic. Then he goes on to tell about a long waist or long arms or sloping shoulders or something else that necessitates having Clothes made to measure.

If the skeptic will take the trouble to spend ten minutes in the STORE FOR MEN to-day he will learn his mistake. It once was impossible for such figures to be fitted—not so long ago, either. It is impossible now—unless the right store is selected.

But CORRECT fit for practically every man is readily assured by the scientific designing and tailor work evidenced in Loeser Clothes for men. The alterations —if needed at all—will be less than the average tailor's alterations.

And the Suit will have such style and swing and smartness as can be equaled in few made-to-measure Clothes—because few individual tailors can afford to pay for the designing skill and experience that is devoted to the making of Loeser Clothing.

These statements are not extravagant. They are easy of proof. And we think every man in Brooklyn ought to know they are as true as we know they are—ought to know that he can save time and trouble and money by choosing his spring Clothes here.

For Easter : : A Glove Bargain,
$3 and $3.50 Mousquetaire Real French Kid Gloves at $1.98 and $2.50.

THE HIGH QUALITY OF THESE GLOVES is as noteworthy as the small price. They are perfect in fit, in finish and in the fineness of the French kid leather. They are in the most desirable lengths for street wear. They are values that have not been matched outside this store:
12 button length in tans and black.........$1.98 a pair
16 button length in black only.........$2.50 a pair
Main Floor, Bond Street.

$10 to $16.50 Negligees at $8.98.

SIXTY ONLY—a choice little lot that will attract special interest from Easter brides as well as from women who love dainty wear for the cozy hours in their own rooms.
Some graceful models of plain colored silk, made with little yokes or in loose, flowing lines. Kimono styles of dark and medium colored Japanese silks with short sleeves. Others, particularly lovely for summer wear, of sheer silk muslins and cool, dotted Swiss. A few made house-dress fashion with shirring at the belt line and slightly cut out necks. Rare chances for the woman on the lookout for something extra dainty in Negligee wear, at.........$8.98
Second Floor.

$1 Jeweled Necklaces, 69c.

THEY ARE AS PRETTY as if they cost twice the price—thirteen pendants suspended from fine link gold-plated chain. Stones are round and pear shapes connected with small links. Colors are the favorites—amethyst, coraline and turquoise. Spring ring catch on each.
A bit of extra good fortune to get them at 69c. apiece.
Main Floor, Front.

$15 Cut Glass Bowls, $4.98

FIFTEEN DOLLARS WOULD BE COUNTED a modest price anywhere for Cut Glass Bowls of this size and with the same fire, brilliance and beauty of design.
To-day's price will be $4.98 apiece.

3 MORPHINE FIENDS TAKING A NEW CURE

Physician Demonstrating Remedy Says It Will Restore Victims in 72 Hours.

EXPERIMENT IN BELLEVUE

Enough of Drug to Kill Seven Normal Men Given to Patients Before Corrective Is Administered.

Dr. C. C. Langsdorf, who has been studying the treatment of morphine cases for a number of years, started in Bellevue Hospital yesterday a demonstration of what he asserts to be a cure for the habit.

Dr. Langsdorf has already given the formula for the physic which he believes will cure morphine victims to Dr. Hastings, the visiting physician, and Dr. Kearns, the house physician, of the alcoholic and drug ward of the hospital. His demonstration was begun on condition that in the event of its success the formula is to be given out for general use, for the sake of that part of humanity which has become addicted to the habit.

Yesterday morning three cases of the apparently hopeless type of morphine fiends were assigned to Dr. Langsdorf for treatment. They were all white men under 30 years of age. One of them, with the mendacity typical of morphine fiends, had stanchly declared himself cured of the habit, and was about to leave the hospital when he heard of the experiments about to take place. Weak as he had been in forfending the craving for the drug, he asked to be allowed to undergo the treatment, and was added to the two patients already chosen.

Gave Each Patient Seven Grains.

The three patients chosen were such confirmed victims of morphia that each of them was given seven grains of the drug before Dr. Langsdorf administered his first corrective dose. One grain of morphine will kill an ordinary man, but the systems of these three were so saturated with the drug that they had reached the state, called tolerance by scientists, which permitted them to take seven grains each without risk to their lives.

Dr. Langsdorf explained that he desired the patients to have their full accustomed measure of the drug, so that there would be no condition of collapse from lack of it while his potion was at work.

The patients then took the dose of the "cure" provided by Dr. Langsdorf, and were put under watch for the night. This morning they will receive their usual portion of morphine just as if they were not under treatment.

"It will require seventy-two hours to effect a cure," said Dr. Langsdorf. "At the end of that time the three men under treatment will find themselves in the same physical conditions in which they were before they took their first dose of morphine. The formula I have prescribed for them awakens and gives back life to the secretive and excretive powers that have been partially paralyzed by the use of the drug. While this is the first public demonstration it is not the first experiment. I have cured many morphine fiends, and only one of the lot has fallen after being cured.

"I have nothing to gain personally by the development of this cure. I am giving it freely to humanity, and before I left Bellevue to-day I gave the prescription to the physicians who witnessed the demonstration and the beginning of the treatment. At the end of seventy-two hours I will give it to the public, and any victim of the drug may use it and cure himself.

Many Physicians Drug Users.

"There are a great number of morphine fiends who are at present hopelessly in the grasp of the vice. Twenty per cent. of my own profession use the drug. They do it because of their trying hours of work and because of their familiarity with the use of the drug and its temporary effects. They never believe they will become victims of morphine, and take a little of it to induce sleep, and finally fall into the habit, as do others. I have a patient now, a physician, who has become a victim of the drug in this way."

Dr. Langsdorf was asked if the appetite for the drug was entirely destroyed after the use of his "cure."

"I merely put the victim back on his feet," he replied. "I put him in the same condition in which he was before he ever touched morphine. There is human perversity to count on, and no physic will build moral character or moral strength. But my cure will leave the morphine fiend where he no longer needs the stimulant and where his system no longer demands it. If he goes back to its use, it is because he does it deliberately and through perversity."

Dr. Langsdorf, Dr. Hastings, and Dr. Kearns will examine the three patients to-day and continue the experiment until to-morrow morning, when there will be an end to the administering of the morphine and a demonstration of the success or the failure of the new treatment.

TRYING TO SAVE GILLETTE.

Governor Will Hear Recital of Alleged New Evidence To-day.

ALBANY, March 27.—Gov. Hughes will take testimony to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock in connection with the application of John P. Dugan, a local attorney representing the Gillette family, for a respite for Chester Gillette, under sentence of death for the murder of Grace Brown.

The appeal for a respite will be based upon alleged newly discovered evidence to show that Grace Brown fell from the boat in an epileptic seizure. Mr. Dugan told the Governor that he would submit the evidence not in the form of affidavits, but of actual witnesses. They are said to be two women and a man, none of whom appeared as witnesses at the trial.

If a respite is granted, it is stated that the alleged new evidence will be presented to a court in support of a motion for a new trial.

Mr. Gillette and his sister, the father and aunt of the condemned man, called at the Executive Chamber this morning only to learn that Gov. Hughes was not in the city. Mrs. Gillette is also in Albany.

AUBURN, N. Y., March 27.—When not engaged with his spiritual advisers, the Rev. McIlvary of Little Falls and the Rev. Cordello Herrick, chaplain of Auburn Prison, Chester Gillette has busied himself since informed that Gov. Hughes would not interfere in his case in preparing a statement which is to be issued to the public before he is put to death next week.

Once Rich, Dies a Pauper.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 27.—Louis F. Wadsworth, once worth $300,000 and a graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., died a pauper at the Plainfield Industrial Home to-day, a victim of drink. He was 83 years old and was a native of Hartford. His father was a wealthy New England merchant. Wadsworth became identified with Tammany Hall and obtained a lucrative position in the New York Customs House. In 1873 he moved to Plainfield. He took to drink, and although he maintained his political position for many years his fortune dwindled away. In 1898 he was admitted to the Industrial Home after swearing that he was unable to support himself.

SENT HOME $300,000,000,

Immigrants Could Be Induced to Invest Savings Here.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 27.—Information concerning immigration into this State for the past few years was given out from the State Department of Agriculture in connection with a bill introduced in the Assembly yesterday by Mr. Merritt of St. Lawrence. The measure proposes a State department for the collection of such information, both industrial and agricultural, as would be of benefit to the immigrant.

According to the statement, 1,076,463 immigrants took up their residence in New York State for the time being, at least, during the past three years. It is asserted that in 1907 they sent to their native homes savings estimated at $300,000,00, which, had they been informed of conditions in this country, it is contended, would have remained and been invested here.

Through this traffic, the statement says, about 2,000 illegal banks are being operated in Greater New York, a large proportion of them in direct violation of the State banking laws, which prohibit the use of the word "bank" to any but duly authorized banking houses.

It is asserted in the statement that 55,000 former immigrants were induced to emigrate from this country during the last few months, carrying with them sums variously estimated at from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000.

"The State of New York is capable of sustaining an additional agricultural population of 2,000,000," continues the statement, "and the placing of large numbers of these immigrants upon the cheap farms of the State would more than double the valuation of the agricultural lands of this State."

Dr. Goodwin Head of Packer Institute.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 27.—Dr. Edward J. Goodwin, Second Assistant State Commissioner of Education, has accepted the Presidency of the Packer Collegiate Institute of Brooklyn. His resignation takes effect September 1 next.

Schmidt Voted for Race Track Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 27.—Through a confusion of names it was announced this morning in THE NEW YORK TIMES that Assemblyman Philip J. Schmidt of the Bronx had voted against the amendments to the Percy-Gray law and the bill amending the Penal Code. Mr. Schmidt voted in favor of the bills.

To Open Erie Canal on May 5.

ALBANY, March 27.—In a statement issued to-day by Supt. F. C. Stevens of the State Department of Public Works it is announced that the Erie Canal will be opened for navigation on or about May 5.

JACKSON AGAIN BEATEN.

Appellate Division Refuses Appeal in the Oriental Bank Fight.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court put a final quietus yesterday upon the efforts of Attorney General Jackson to remain a factor in the Oriental Bank situation by dismissing his motion for leave to appeal from the decision handed down unanimously last week, in which the court discharged the temporary receivers and approved the plan of liquidation whereby the depositors of the Oriental are being paid by the Metropolitan Trust Company. With the decision, costs of $10 are assessed upon the Attorney General.

Mr. Jackson had nothing to say yesterday on the court's decision.

MORE KNICKERBOCKER CASH.

Steady Stream of Deposits and Conditions Now Normal.

The second day's business of the Knickerbocker Trust Company since the reopening began with only three depositors in line at the paying teller's window at the 66 Broadway office, and with normal conditions at the two other branches and at the main office.

All day there was a steady stream of deposits, and though no announcement was made at the close of business of the relative amount of deposits and withdrawals, the day's results, President Keep said, were more than satisfactory. "The Knickerbocker has ceased to be a source of news," he said.

COMPLAIN OF NEW HAVEN.

Three Lines Allege Road Discriminated in Withdrawing Terminal Facilities.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The complaints of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Philadelphia & Reading, and the Baltimore & Ohio against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad were heard by the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day.

Some time ago the New Haven Road abrogated all through routes and joint rates with the complainants at the New York and Harlem terminals of the New Haven line, but continued to afford such facilities to other lines, including the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley.

The New Haven Road maintains that it could not physically carry the traffic offered to it through Jersey City and Harlem terminals without disadvantage to itself. It maintains its right to make such arrangements with other lines as it may see fit.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Openwork Hosiery Not "Lace Wearing Apparel"—Other Decisions.

The Board of United States General Appraisers decided yesterday that openwork hosiery cannot be classed as "lace wearing apparel." The protestants were Lindeke, Warner & Sons of St. Paul, who imported the hosiery, and who asked that instead of being assessed at 60 per cent. it should have been dutiable at a lower rate as "hosiery fashioned and shaped." The Collector's decision was reversed.

Mandel Brothers of Chicago filed a protest regarding woven fabrics in which each yarn is composed of flax and jute. The merchandise was assessed for duty at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem as fabrics in chief value of flax. It was asserted that duty should be assessed either as jute fabrics or at 45 per cent. ad valorem as "manufactures in chief value of jute." The Collector's decision was sustained.

Protests were sustained in the case of the Howard Brothers Manufacturing Company and Castle, Gotthell & Overton of Boston; F. B. Vandergrift & Co. of Philadelphia, and L. Heller & Son of this city.

Cases in which the decision of the Collector was affirmed included W. H. McEllven of Niagara Falls and Winters & Reineke of Philadelphia.

AMBULANCE CHASERS TO HAVE A GAZETTE

The Amputation Bulletin Will Keep Them Posted on Accidents in All States.

LAWYERS DON'T LIKE IT

Many Declare New Sheet Is Designed to Foster an Inductry Already Too Active.

Henry Remington has come to town from Chicago, and has taken desk room in the offices of the Aluminum Rawhide Artificial Limb Company, at 215 Second Avenue. In this small space, surrounded by cold and uninspiring legs and arms, Mr. Remington is now publishing The Amputation Bulletin, of which he is editor as well as owner.

Editor Remington was not in his office yesterday, but a man with curly mustache who was acting editor said that while the publication was in its infancy it was strong.

The Amputation Bulletin has nothing to do with the supplying of artificial limbs to those who may stand in need of them, despite the location of its office of publication. It is the latest thing in specialized journalism, and it is built on the striking idea of the Chicago founder that there is room for the nationalization of the business of ambulance chasing. In fact, according to the announcements sent broadcast through the thousands of law offices of New York, it is a plan for marshaling the hordes of ambulance chasers of the country and establishing for them a clearing house for the information they obtain.

"The list of all amputation cases, names, addresses, and particulars of accident from the first day of January, 1908, in your State will be given you free with first order," is one of the inducements offered by the literature of the infant journal of accidental dissection. That Editor Remington does not intend to bother with small cases such as dislocated jaws, barked shins, and stumped toes is made evident in this announcement at the top of his letter-head:

> Amputation Information Bureau—Covering the earliest obtainable information of names and addresses of persons whose arms, legs, hands, or feet have been amputated.

The journal is to be issued three times a week at a cost of $5 a month or $50 a year. Reputable lawyers of New York are protesting vigorously against this innovation. Editor Remington has sent out his alluring circular letters regardless of the ethical standards of the profession of the law, and here is one of his arguments to desired subscribers:

"We cover the United States on amputation information, from which any good, live attorney can surely get twenty-five or fifty cases a year—each case with a value of $5,000 to $25,000—and, as these cases are taken on a basis of 50 per cent., the income an attorney can obtain from this information is, far greater than the salary of the President of the United States."

One lawyer who received the suggestion that there was a means of raising his income to more than that enjoyed by the President protested yesterday against what he called a plan to unite the ambulance chasers. He declared that there were already too many ambulance chasers in existence, and that this class of law business had developed to such an extent that almost every lawyer who took a case to recover for personal injuries was looked upon with suspicion.

"It is to be regretted," he said, "that the matter cannot be taken up by the police authorities."

An effort to get from Editor Remington's assistant information as to how the amputation news was to be gathered in such bulk that it would pay subscribers to buy the journal proved unsuccessful.

"You'll have to see Mr. Remington," he replied, "and he's in Paterson to-day."

The editor was not at home last night, and his wife said she did not know when he would be back.

SAY DEVERY'S SHOTS MISSED.

Neighbors Declare the ex-Chief Fired at a Burglar Who Got Away.

Although ex-Chief of Police Devery wouldn't admit it last night, his neighbors are certain that it was he who fired three pistol shots out of the window of his home at 574 West End Avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, at a fleeing burglar, and—didn't hit him. Others said there was really no burglar to hit.

Whether there was or not, the big burglar alarm on the wall of Miss Ellen H. Rainey's home, at 325 West Eighty-eighth Street, around the corner from Mr. Devery's residence, rang, and neighbors popped their heads out of their windows when the three pistol shots sounded a moment later. They came from the Devery home, but no one could see who fired them.

Policeman Embe said afterward that he saw a man run down the street, but feared to chase him for fear of the marksman whose bullets perforated the big billboard across the street from the Devery home. Nothing was stolen from Miss Rainey's home.

CITY RAILWAY AND POLITICS.

Untrue That Men Are Employed for Party Reasons, Says Root.

Oren Root, Jr., General Manager of the New York City Railway, characterized yesterday as "absolutely untrue" the statement made by a TIMES reader in a letter to the editor, printed yesterday, that politics entered largely into the employment of men as conductors on the surface cars.

"The statement," said Mr. Root, "is absurd and ridiculous. There is no traction company in the country as free from that sort of thing as ours, and everybody who has had much to do with the company knows that. Politics are never even thought of in connection with the hiring of men, and this fact is easily verified.

"Of course, we are compelled to turn away many men who feel that they should have been engaged, but the statement that politics is the reason for rejecting them is not worthy of serious consideration."

BIG SEAS SWEPT MAJESTIC.

One Wave Invaded the Second Cabin and Frightened the Passengers.

The White Star liner Majestic, which arrived yesterday, encountered hard weather along the North Atlantic lane. The sea on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday was particularly rough, and on Saturday waves constantly swept her decks.

That evening a big wave rushed a partly opened door leading into the second cabin. Some damage was done, and the passengers were greatly excited. The passengers passed resolutions praising the officers of the vessel for bringing them safely to port.

Among those arriving was Miss Rose L. Fritz, who was returning after winning a championship typewriter contest at the Olympia, London. She lives at 193 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn. She made a record of 111 words a minute, for fifteen successive minutes. She also made a record of 265 words in two minutes.

Others arriving were Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Hale, Thomas S. Jameson, Mrs. H. S. McCormick, Mrs. J. F. B. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. Shelford, and Mr. and Mrs. George F. Wright.

McCLURE'S LOSES LIBEL SUIT.

Refrigerator Company, Accused of Accepting Rebates, Gets $15,000 Verdict.

Fifteen thousand dollars was the solace awarded to Emanuel L. Phillips, President of the Union Refrigerator Transit Company of Milwaukee, by a jury before Judge Hough in the United States District Court yesterday against the S. S. McClure Company for libel contained in three articles written by Ray Stannard Baker and published in McClure's Magazine in November and December, 1905, and January, 1906. Mr. Phillips complained that the articles attributed to him the acceptance of rebates from railroads.

EX-RAILWAY AGENT TURNS ON JEROME

Investigator for the Metropolitan Says He Tried to Tell District Attorney of Jury Fixing Plot.

BEARS OUT TILLINGHAST

And Describes a Dispute Between McCabe and Bagg Over Paying the Professional Juror for His Services.

Louis E. Julian, who used to be the chief investigator for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and was at the head of the bureau which handled all matters relating to cases in the Supreme Court from 1894 to 1904 was called to the stand yesterday in the hearing before ex-Justice Andrews on the charges filed against District Attorney Jerome by the King committee of Metropolitan Street Railway stockholders. Julian is now under indictment. Like the professional juror Tillinghast, he came into conflict with the District Attorney's office after he had joined the ranks of those who were attacking the Metropolitan Street Railway. He is charged with circulating false statements about the company, the complainant being Lawyer Quackenbush of the New York City Railway.

Julian's testimony, covering things he said he told Assistant District Attorney Smyth in the Fall of 1905, directly connected the name of Ambrose F. McCabe, formerly first assistant to Henry A. Robinson in the City Railway's law department, with the jury-fixing plan as described by Tillinghast at the first hearing in the investigation on Thursday. The first charge against Mr. Jerome, on which evidence is now being taken, is that he did not produce the evidence that was in his possession against McCabe when the latter was examined before Justice Seabury on the matter of jury fixing in the Winter of 1906, but acted as though he were trying to shield the street railway and its officials.

Julian Tells of Jury Fixing.

At the outset yesterday, Julian told how he organized a bureau for the investigation of cases in the Supreme Court, while Stanley Bagg, another investigator, who, according to the testimony of Tillinghast, paid him for jury service, got up a similar bureau for City court cases. Franklin Pierce, who is handling the case for the King committee, asked Julian if he had ever heard any conversation about jury fixing in McCabe's room in the year 1904. Julian said he had, and was told to tell what he heard.

"It was on a Saturday, just before noon," said he. "I fix the date as May 14, 1904, because Stanley Bagg owned a thoroughbred horse that was going to run that afternoon at Morris Park, and we were all going up to see it. I remember it also because the Eichner case against the company in the Supreme Court, to which some of the conversation related, was prepared in my department and had been tried on May 12.

"McCabe was sitting at his desk, and Bagg came in and said something about the payment of a juror in the Eichner case. I didn't pay particular attention until Stanley Bagg got mad and said: 'Now he's delivered the goods and you want to throw him down.' McCabe had said: 'This fellow has done pretty well, but I think $25 is enough,' and Bagg wanted to give him $40 or $50. They finally compromised on $40, and Bagg went out, coming back a few minutes later with a voucher blank. There was some further talk, and finally McCabe wrote on a piece of yellow pad, '$40. O. K. A. F. McC.,' and Bagg filled in a white voucher with ink for $40."

"You had some business of your own there?" Mr. Pierce asked.

"Yes, I had some witnesses that I wanted to have paid for their lost time while they were in court, and that was usually fixed up on Saturday."

"Could you or Bagg or ay one else have got money except in that way by voucher?"

"Only on the O. K. of Mr. Robinson or of McCabe, who was in charge under him."

"Did you know who the juryman was that Bagg referred to?"

"I didn't want to know," replied Julian.

"When did you first hear the name of Tillinghast in connection with the matter?" Mr. Pierce asked.

"I first heard of Tillinghast from Bagg on July 7, 1905. Bagg was sore because they had let him out, and he came to my office at 138 Liberty Street, where I was running a private detective agency, and began to talk."

The witness produced then two much-creased sheets of yellow paper which he said contained the original memoranda of Bagg's confessions to him at that time. Mr. Jerome interrupted the examination to ask:

"Is it charged that any of this material was every communicated to me?"

"I gave you all that you would listen to," rejoined the witness with some show of heat. Then the recital went on:

"Bagg told me of some of the tricks that he had turned, and asked me if I was surprised. I said, 'No, I suposed that you'd been monkeying with jurors all the time.' 'Why,' he said, 'we went down there [into the City Court] and brought our own jurors with us.' He said that they had a party in the City Court when they had a case on—he was not on the panel—and the Clerk would call him and he would be put in the box. I said I didn't believe it, and he said he'd prove it.

"Then he said he'd give me some memoranda of fake jurors," continued Julian, as he referred to the memoranda on the yellow paper. "There was the Eikenbrock case against the company, tried by A. F. McCabe Jan. 16, 1902, with a verdict of $190. He said that there was a 'ringer' juror, as he called it, in that case. Then there was the Lowenbein case against the company, tried by A. F. McCabe on Jan. 15, 1902, in which the jury disagreed, standing eleven to one for the plaintiff. There was a 'ringer' juror in that case. And there was the Flannery case, tried Jan. 21 by A. F. McCabe, with a verdict for the defendant, in which Bagg said that there was a 'ringer' juror.

"Then he mentioned the name of Tillinghast to me and said, 'Why, he was in your Eichner case.' That was tried before Justice Blanchard, and I personally wasn't on it. Bagg told me that Tillinghast was paid $40 at the Sinclair House by Netter for his work in that case and others on the Supreme Court panel. See, Mr. Pierce, I put down the initial 'N'," said the witness, turning to counsel. "I said, 'That's what the row was about in McCabe's office that day,' and Bagg said 'Yes.'

"The next day he came to me and mentioned that this man Tillinghast sat as a 'ringer' juror in the case of King versus Gossell in the City Court, where a verdict was given for King, and then I wrote down that the Clerk alleged by my informant to have done the job in the City Court was John Foley—I used the name 'informant' because Bagg wanted his name kept off the memorandum.

"I saw Bagg frequently thereafter, and told him that he ought to come out and lay the whole matter before the District Attorney. Bagg didn't want to do this, and finally I took it to the office of a morning newspaper."

"Why didn't Bagg want to go to the District Attorney with it?" Mr. Pierce asked.

"I don't care to say unless I am ordered to," replied the witness.

Mr. Jerome declared that he had no objection, and then Julian went on:

Jerome Charged With Favoring Railroad.

"Bagg said that there was no use in taking the matter to the District Attorney, and said that the only result would be that Jerome would combine with the Metropolitan Street Railway officials and make trouble for him. He said further that Jerome and the Metropolitan people were hand in glove with each other, and had been since 1902. And he also called my attention to the fact that soon after Jerome went into office he procured the dismissal of certain indictments against me and others."

Julian said that he then went to the office of the morning newspaper in question, and subsequently Mr. Jerome's campaign headquarters at the Gilsey House, where he saw John A. Henneberry, chief clerk of the District Attorney's office, who was at that time running Mr. Jerome's campaign for re-election. Henneberry introduced Julian to Assistant District Attorney Smyth, who had been designated to take up the matter by Mr. Jerome, and Julian then gave up the retainer that he had accepted from the morning newspaper to investigate the whole matter and expose the conditions. Julian said he had several conversations with Mr. Smyth, all of which were taken down by a stenographer, and he professed at this date not to be able to separate the statements he made at different interviews, but only to be able to cover the general subject matter of the conversations.

"We talked over many matters," said Julian. "I told him about the case of Harry Kaufman—in the Green case—and I told him who the person was who had sent Kaufman to see the juror."

"Who was it?" asked Mr. Pierce.

"The counsel who tried the case," replied the witness. "I told him that Kaufman had been fined $250 by Justice O'Gorman, and that the money had been repaid by McCabe through somebody in the office. McCabe wanted me to handle it, but I wouldn't touch it. I also told him about the Wempheimer case in the Supreme Court, where there was a colored man on the jury, and Bagg sent his colored man to see him. Abraham Elkus, the lawyer for the plaintiff, got wind of what was up and complained to the court, who ordered the matter to be taken before a referee. The case was heard, and subsequently I heard that the railway people went into court and consented to have the verdict set aside."

This was as far as Julian got in his testimony yesterday, but his story will be taken up again to-day. Ex-Justice Andrews made it plain at yesterday's hearing that he would not hesitate to call for whatever Grand Jury minutes might be required to show the attitude of Mr. Jerome on insurance matters. This issue came up on the demand of Mr. Pierce for the minutes of the Grand Juries of March and April, 1906, and Mr. Jerome objected that no insurance matters referred to in the charges were before those bodies. Mr. Pierce, however, wanted to see, and Justice Andrews signed the subpoena. However, he also signified that he did not attach must weight to the coincidence that the arrest of Tillinghast on matters that had already been referred to the District Attorney by Justice O'Dwyer of the City Court happened on the same afternoon that he made his statement before Justice Seabury on the jury fixing cases.

Justice Seabury Testifies.

Justice Seabury was himself on the stand yesterday telling about his part in the jury fixing investigation. Mr. Jerome on cross-examination pressed him to find out whether the Justice remembered Mr. Jerome having said that Stanley Bagg had made conflicting statements to him about the case. Justice Seabury had no such recollection. Then Mr. Pierce went on to read in evidence the confession of Stanley Bagg, obtained by Mr. Jerome on Nov. 27, 1900, under promise of immunity, and covering in general the state of facts to which Julian and Tillinghast testified, with other details. This led to another attempt by Mr. Jerome to prevent the names of some of the Metropolitan's trial lawyers being brought into the record, and to a rather warm argument between him and Mr. Pierce. The name of Daniel N. Paterson appeared in the confession.

"Now, your Honor," said Mr. Jerome, "I must interpose the same objection that I interposed yesterday. When my name is alluded to I have no objection to make. But here is the name of a third party, a reputable attorney dragged in."

"I am inclined to hear the testimony," said Justice Andrews.

"But it is the same as that taken before Justice Seabury," Mr. Jerome objected.

Justice Andrews, however, allowed the reading to go on, covering also the case of King versus Gossell, on which Mr. Jerome again objected, saying that the matter was "immaterial and scandalous." Justice Andrews, however, persisted in taking the testimony. The Bagg confession contained, among other things, the statement that the Metropolitan people always made Christmasp resents to many court clerks and gave orders for hats to the court officers.

TWO ROADS SHOW INCREASES

Lake Shore and C. I. & S. Made Gains in Earnings Last Year.

Two more of the New York Central's subsidiaries—the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the Chicago, Indiana & Southern—issued yesterday their reports for 1907. The gross earnings of the Lake Shore were $44,953,475, an increase of $2,409,096, and its net earnings $10,415,013, an increase of $546,436. "Other income" showed an increase of $1,562,914. After the payment of $6,925,810 in dividends compared with $4,946,650 the previous year, the surplus for the year was $460,405, against $1,539,962 in 1906.

The report shows that the Lake Shore sold during the year 1,000 shares of East Chicago Belt Railroad stock and 5,000 shares of Indiana Harbor Railroad. There were purchased during the year $7,059,600 additional common stock of the Big Four and 1,800 shares each of the common and preferred stocks of the Chicago, Kalamazoo & Saginaw as well as some other stocks.

The Chicago, Indiana & Southern showed gross earnings of $3,004,482, an increase of $671,751 and net earnings of $1,061,353, an increase of $580,429. The surplus for the year was $223,180, compared with $258,304 the previous year.

D., T. & I. Committee Formed.

At the request of stockholders of the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, a committee has been formed, consisting of W. V. King, President of the Columbia Trust Company; Evans R. Dick, and E. L. Oppenheim, to act for the stockholders. The Columbia Trust Company will act as depository.

BROOKLYN SUBWAY TO BE BUILT AT ONCE

Estimate Board Approves Whole Brooklyn Route, Mayor and Metz Opposing.

CAN'T BE DONE, METZ SAYS

City Hasn't the Money, He Declares, and Will Not Certify Contracts —Coler Wins Stiff Fight.

By a vote of 10 to 6 the Board of Estimate approved yesterday the Public Service Commission's plans for all six sections of the proposed Fourth Avenue Subway in Brooklyn, to the dismay of the Mayor and the Controller, neither of whom, evidently, had any idea that the other members of the board would vote against them.

The meeting was one of the most exciting that has been held in the City Hall for some time. A big crowd of Brooklynites interested in the subway attended. The vote was a distinct triumph for Borough President Coler of Brooklyn. It was taken by the politicians about the hall as indicating that Senator McCarren was not included in the peace pact made between the Mayor and Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall, and that the latter had thrown his strength to Coler, who is making primary fights against McCarren in Brooklyn.

At the previous meeting a special committee reported in favor of the building of only one section of the line, that extending from Nassau Street to Willoughby Street. This, according to the report, would cost the city only about $1,750,000, and that amount was available from the city's funds and well within the debt limit.

As soon as the report and the resolution for its adoption had been read, Mr. Coler said that he thought it would be fatal to the plans for the subway to authorize only one section. Such property as would have to be bought, he said, could be acquired more advantageously now than later, and he offered a resolution approving all six sections of the route and requesting the Public Service Commission to advertise for bids immediately.

Neither the Mayor nor the Controller regarded Mr. Coler's proposition very seriously. Borough President Ahearn of Manhattan, however, gave some of those present a clue to what was coming, by moving an amendment to the effect that the Public Service Commission be requested to be ready to accept bids for the proposed Broadway-Lexington Avenue route within sixty days. Then came the vote.

The Mayor answered "No" loudly and so did the Controller. President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen, next in order, was absent and his place was filled by "Little Tim" Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan voted "Aye" and the Mayor turned sharply while the Controller jumped out of his chair in astonishment. Then Presidents Ahearn, Haffen, Bermel, and Cromwell all voted "Aye," and it was very apparent that the Mayor and the Controller were very much in the minority.

At this point the Mayor tried a parliamentary move. "The resolution is not carried," he said. "This is new business and as such requires twelve votes in the affirmative to be recorded for it. There are but ten 'Ayes' and the resolution fails."

Just for an instant the opposition was stumped. The Board of Aldermen, however, has given Mr. Sullivan some good training. Almost instantly he moved to reconsider. With the same number of votes as before, that was carried.

In the meanwhile, however, there had been hisses at the opposition and the Mayor had to announce that the room would be cleared unless order was restored. As soon as the Coler resolution was first passed there was a lively wrangle. Controller Metz was very angry.

"I shall refuse to certify these contracts," he announced angrily. "I shall not certify a single one of them. I can't do it and I will not do it. We want this subway, but if this method is pursued we will not get it for five years. Let the matter go back to the Public Service Commission. Why don't you wait for legislation at Albany? We haven't got the money now and I can't certify the contracts."

The original resolution to accept the report of the committee was voted down. Then Mr. Ahearn withdrew his amendment, and the decks were cleared for the Coler resolution, the reconsideration of which, without the Ahearn amendment, was taken up. It passed by the same vote, President Haffan of the Bronx not voting until called up by the Mayor, but voting in the affirmative nevertheless.

"Killed! Killed by its professed friends," shouted Mr. Metz. Mr. Coler smiled, the Mayor looked stern, and some few in the crowd giggled.

The Ahearn amendment was then taken up separately, but went over for a week on the technicality raised by the Mayor.

"The courts are going to get this matter sure," said the Controller after the meeting. "It will be taken to the Court of Appeals, and the proposition is tied up for five years."

"Nothing to it," said Mr. Coler laconically when told of the Controller's statement.

Later in the day the Controller issued a statement declaring that for some time to come he would be in the "I told you so" class, and asserting that, had the committee's report been accepted the dirt would have begun to fly very soon. It was the desire to sell real estate and not to build subways, he said, that moved the opposition. He wanted to build the subway but he did not intend to let his desire run away with his judgment. He asserted that he had tried to save the city from embarrassment and that "if the Brooklyn Rapid Transit or the Interborough really wanted to kill the Fourth Avenue Subway, no better opportunity could possibly have been given them than the course which had been pursued."

It is understood that both the Mayor and the Controller will issue a statement early next week explaining their positions on the question. On good authority it was said, too, that the tying up of the city's funds would probably result in a cessation of improvement work of all kinds, should an effort be made in the courts to compel the Controller to certify the contracts.

The Public Service Commission announced after the Board of Estimate meeting, that the advertisements for the construction of the Fourth Avenue Subway would be ready for publication as soon as the Corporation Counsel approved the form of contract. The hope was expressed that it would be possible to open the bids within sixty days.

Should any of the bids be found satisfactory, the commission will call upon the Controller to certify the contract. In all probability, if he refuses, a taxpayers' suit will be begun to compel him to do so.

SUBWAY HURTS N. Y. CENTRAL.

Suburban Traffic Diverted Both to the Subway and New Haven Road.

The Subway has cut into the New York Central Railroad's suburban traffic, according to evidence given yesterday by the Public Service Commission.

C. L. Bardo, Superintendent of the Grand Central Station, testified yesterday that the 6:38 train in the evening was ordered to stop at the Bronx stations. In the six nights after March 21, he said, this train had carried only 93 passengers altogether to stations in the Bronx, and the company had, in the same time, lost 48 of its Mount Vernon passengers.

Mr. Bardo said the receipts from the Bronx stations dropped from $68,000 in 1905 to $36,000 in 1907, due to competition of the Subway. The local train service on the New Haven, he said, had increased 70 per cent. in the last six years.

MARCONI WIRELESS REPORT.

Assets of $6,000,000 Shown in Balance Sheet of Jan. 31.

The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America issued its balance sheet yesterday, as of Jan. 31, showing cash on hand and in bank amounting to $1,757, accounts receivable, $17,947, and stocks of apparatus on hand valued at $16,854. The cost of stations and experimental work, less depreciation, is put at $126,969, and the value of patent rights, contracts, and good-will at $5,491,855. Deficit account and organization expenses cover $422,422, and furniture and unexpired insurance is figured at $1,611.

The capital stock is $6,044,800, and notes and accounts payable and legal expense account of the London company add $34,645 to liabilities, bringing the total up to $6,079,445.

U. P. BONDS 4 PER CENTS.

The Proceeds Are to be Used to Pay Off Floating Debt.

The proposed new bond issue of the Union Pacific, it was stated yesterday, will be made a 4 per cent. bond, in keeping with the policy of issuing only low interest bearing obligations to provide for the road's requirements. The floating debt which will be liquidated with the proceeds of the bonds has been incurred in connection with new construction and with the purchase of additional equipment.

The Union Pacific, as the holder of $28,000,000 of Illinois Central, will have subscription rights to a large amount of the new Illinois Central stock, but it was said yesterday that it had not been decided whether the Union Pacific will subscribe or sell its rights.

LAWSON GOLD STOCK BRINGS OUT BUYERS

Heavy Orders from the Public in Hands of Brokers for Execution To-day.

CURB EXPECTS A BOOM

700,000 Shares to be Sold—The Boston Man to Launch a Copper Company Next.

Curb brokers left their offices last night prepared for a rush of business at the opening of the Broad Street market this morning which will compare with the heaviest days of the mining boom of 1906.

The Lawson advertisements announcing the sale to-day of 700,000 shares of the stock of the Guggenheim's Yukon Gold Company brought more inquiries yesterday into the offices of the outside brokers and of Stock Exchange houses having Curb connections than any stock not listed on the Stock Exchange called forth since the height of the Nipissing boom.

H. Content & Co., who are the advertised Lawson brokers in the campaign, refused yesterday to tell how they have provided for the distribution of the shares at the advertised prices of from $5 per share up to and not over $7.50 in the face of what brokers were agreed yesterday would be a demand for much more than the amount of stock for sale.

The selling orders have been distributed among several of the Curb market strong men, who will be able to stand up against the opening scramble, according to the gossip after the close of trading yesterday.

William Gallagher, who is physically one of the biggest of the outside brokers, is said to have received orders to sell the stock in 5,000 share lots at every half point up from an opening at $5 to $6.50. At $7 he is to put out 10,000 shares and at $7.50 100,000. This order would account for only 130,000 shares.

Speculators on the Curb yesterday who were willing to take a chance of fighting their way to the sellers at the opening this morning and getting some of the offerings at low prices bought and sold Yukon Gold at prices ranging between 7⅛ and 8¼; 10,500 shares were reported sold "when, if, and as issued" at these prices. These brokers took it for granted that the Boston advertiser was acting in good faith and would put stock out at the advertised prices. No one seemed to doubt that there would be demand enough from the public to run the price up.

Representatives of the Guggenheim interests repeated their denials yesterday that they had any share in the Lawson campaign. W. B. Thompson, who is said to have taken from the Guggenheim interests the stock advertised for sale, was not at his office, but it was said by his secretary that the 700,000 shares are Treasury stock of the Yukon Gold Company, recently issued when the outstanding capital of the company was increased from $14,000,000 to $17,500,000.

The copper company whose stock Lawson talks of marketing after the gold shares are disposed of is said to be the Consolidated Copper Company, a $50,000,000 corporation, of which W. B. Thompson is President. The stockholders of this company have been asked to authorize an increase in its capital to $60,000,000, and to change its name to the Copper Mines Company. The officers of the Consolidated Copper Company, besides President Thompson, are James Phillips, Jr., Vice President; T. L. Herrmann of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, Secretary, and F. W. Holmes, Treasurer. W. J. Palmer of Trippe & Co., of which firm Mr. Thompson is a member, is a Director. The two other Directors are Ralph C. Lupton and W. H. Smith.

The company now owns two properties, the Ely Mines Company and the Willard-Ely Copper Company. It has been repeatedly said that the $60,000,000 concern would be a medium for the consolidation of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company, the Cumber & Ely Copper Company, and the Utah Copper Company, all three of which are known as Guggenheim properties.

It was said at the offices of the Guggenheim interests yesterday that they had made no plans for turning their holdings of these stocks into Mr. Thompson's holding company. Both W. B. Thompson and James Phillips, Jr., are large stockholders in the three companies named.

French Line Pays 5 Per Cent. Dividend

The French Line's preliminary report for 1907 has been received here. The company had a very prosperous year, but owing to the falling off in travel during the latter part of the year it was decided to leave the dividend at 5 per cent. The surplus has been put in the construction of new steamers, of which there are eight either inservice or on the point of completion.

HOPPE WINS FROM VETERAN CHAMPION

VICTOR SCORES 2 TO 1

Brilliant Open Play by Youthful Winner Feature of Remarkable Contest at Madison Square Garden.

William Hoppe, the boy champion at billiards, won the most remarkable victory of his remarkable career in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden last night, when, in a challenge match for the world's championship at eighteen-inch balk line billiards, two shots in, he beat the former champion and veteran player George Sutton of Chicago by a score of nearly two to one in 500 points.

The game was one of the most remarkable in the series of contests by the most expert billiard players in the world through the Winter in New York. About 2,000 keenly interested spectators crowded the hall and watched the contest with enthusiastic delight at the singular skill of the young victor. Hoppe, as challenger for the title and the trophy which Sutton has held for two years, made his second effort within a year against Sutton under the conditions called for in the two shots in game.

Sutton beat him rather easily in the first match nearly a year ago, and in renewing the challenge Hoppe was compelled to accept the champion's conditions and play off the full match in one evening in spite of his wish to divide the contest between two nights, which he believes would give a better test in a championship match.

With the old conditions for the championship ruling, however, and apparently in Sutton's favor, Hoppe still won a signal victory, running out the 500 points called for in the match in twenty-four innings, to a total score of 272 by the veteran player, whose title the boy wrested from him by his triumph. Hoppe's victory was the more impressive in the fact that practically through all the contest he played an open game, seemingly careless of the control of the balls, but satisfied with the results which he scored by the brilliancy of his open play. Sutton, on the other hand, still was master in the control of the balls, and in the first part of the match made a good contest of it, but in the final stages of the championship Hoppe simply ran away from him.

The match, carrying the champion's title with it, was for a prize of $1,000 and a wager of $500 a side, and included the emblem of the championship, which Sutton already had held for two years, and which, under the conditions of the gift, would have become his property permanently had Sutton been able to hold it a year longer.

DEMAREST IS CHAMPION.

Chicagoan Wins National Amateur Billiard Title—Breaks Record.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Calvin Demarest of Chicago to-night won the National amateur 14.2 billiard championship, and at the same time established a new record for the high run, making 202 in his tenth inning. His opponent was H. A. Wright of San Francisco, who played badly and was only able to collect 22 in his twelve trials. Demarest's average was 30 10-13 and Wright's 1 10-22.

Bradley Ahead in Pool Tourney.

In a game requiring nine innings to decide, W. Bradley defeated H. Goldman last night in the pool tournament at John T. Doyle's academy, by 50 points to 21. It was probably the most interesting game in the tournament. Up to the sixth innings they were tied at 20 to 20. Then Bradley made his high run of 18 and followed this by 19 points, which completed his string. The score:

Bradley—0, 8, 2, 6, 0, 4, 18, 1, 11—Total, 50; high run, 18; scratches, 1.

Goldman—0, 5, 8, 1, 5, 1, 0, 1, 0—Total, 21; high run, 8; scratches, 0.

Miss Curtis Buys Schooner Tyro.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., March 27.—The champion 22-foot schooner Tyro has been sold by William Joyce, her owner, to Miss Helen V. Curtis of New York, who will race the boat this Summer at Isleborough, Me. The Tyro was designed by B. B. Crowinshield and proved a wonderfully fast boat, and her repeated successes practically killed the 22-foot restricted class in Massachusetts Bay. She has a fine cabin with good cruising accommodations for a boat of her size. The new owner of the Tyro is a clever skipper for a woman, and is able to hold her own against many good amateurs. She has owned and sailed boats for a number of seasons.

COLLEGE FENCING HONORS.

West Point, Annapolis, Columbia, and Cornell Qualify for Finals.

Six college teams gave an excellent exhibition of spirited fencing last night in the gymnasium of the New York Athletic Club, the competition marking the preliminary bouts in the annual intercollegiate fencing championship. The teams were divided into three squads of six men each, and the two teams securing the lowest number of victories were eliminated. It fell to the lot of Yale and Massachusetts Institute of Technology to fall by the wayside. The members of the other four teams—West Point, which won 11 bouts; Columbia and Annapolis, 9 each, and Cornell, with 8—will meet this afternoon and evening at the New York Athletic Club in the final contests for the team and individual titles, which will be a round-robin competition.

The teams and summaries:

Annapolis—H. F. Burdick, E. R. S. Brandt, and H. E. Knauss.

Cornell—W. E. Harries, W. Howard, and H. W. Corey.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology—F. J. Lange, M. Loring, and J. W. Nickerson.

Columbia—C. G. Amend, F. J. Byrne, and C. B. Miller.

"POLY PREP" CHAMPION.

Interscholastic Hockey Honors Stay in Brooklyn.

"Poly Prep's" right to be considered the champion of the Interscholastic Hockey League cannot be questioned this year as it was in 1907, when the Brooklyn boys gained the title by default. Last night, in the closing game of the series, they defeated the team of Groff School, their most formidable opponents, by a score of two goals to one, at St. Nicholas Rink.

Froeb made the only goal in the first after a hard scrimmage near the cage, but in the second half honors were even, each team placing a goal to its credit. The summary:

| Groff, 1. | Position. | "Poly Prep," 2. |
|---|---|---|
| Henderson | Goal | Thayer |
| Farrell | Point | Brooks |
| Gross | Cover point | McAlvty, (Capt.) |
| Carlhart, (Capt.) | Centre | Hayward |
| Morrison | Rover | Loughran |
| Durand | Right wing | Bailey |
| Stiles | Left wing | Froeb |

Goals—First half—Froeb. Second half—Morrison, Hayward. Referee—George E. Harmon, Hockey Club of New York. Assistant referee—M. E. Keefe, Hockey Club of New York. Time of game—Twenty-minute halves.

COLUMBIA SET BACK.

Harvard Defeats Morningside Team in Fast Game of Soccer.

Harvard defeated Columbia at "soccer" yesterday afternoon in a game played on South Field by the score of 1 goal to 0. By losing this game the blue and white will very likely loose its chance for the intercollegiate championship, as the tie with Haverford is broken in the latter's favor.

The summary:

| Harvard, 1. | Position. | Columbia, 0. |
|---|---|---|
| Waters | Goal | TallantVoskamp, |
| Monroe | Right back | Carpenter |
| Pell | Left back | G. Dwyer |
| Grant | Right half back | Hartung |
| Brooks | Centre half | Ferguson |
| Newhall | Left half | Kistler |
| F. Leland | Right outside | Billingsley |
| D. Leland | Right inside | Smith |
| Chadwick | Left outside | O'Brien |

GIRLS IN ROUGH GAME.

Handicapped by the loss of two of their best players, the Normal College basket ball team went down to defeat last night before the crack five from Dr. Savage's School of Physical Culture by the score of 26 to 14.

The line-up:

| Savage, (26.) | Position. | Nor. Col., (14.) |
|---|---|---|
| Miss Cuno | Forward | Miss Christie |
| Miss Christiansen | Forward | Miss Munson |
| Miss Gefvert | Centre | Miss Lane |
| Miss Dresdner | Guard | Miss Rosenblad |
| Miss Watson | Guard | Miss Klotz |

Field goals—Miss Christiansen, (7,) Miss Cuno, (4,) Miss Munson, (4,) Miss Christie, Miss Gefvert, (2,) Miss Lane, (2.) Referee—George Bellows. Umpire—John Wendleken. Timekeeper—Frank M. Rogers. Time of game—Twenty and fifteen minute halves.

Intercolegiate Gymnasts Meet.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 27.—The tenth annual meet of the Intercollegiate Gymnastic Association was held in Brokaw Gymnasium here to-night. Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Columbia, New York University, and Rutgers were represented. There were more than 100 competitors. First place for the team championship counted five points, second place three, and third place one. E. W. Mecabe of Princeton and H. S. Schoonmaker of Columbia, the individual champions of 1906 and 1907 respectively, were among the competitors.

At a meeting of the Intercollegiate Gymnastic Association, held this afternoon, Z. F. Evans of Harvard was elected President; F. F. Bradford, Pennsylvania, Vice President; G. Lunt, New York University, Secretary, and A. L. Spaeth, Haverford, Treasurer. The summary:

Horizontal Bar.—Won by H. L. Dowd, Princeton, 69 5-10 points; E. W. Mecabe, Princeton, 63 5-10 points, second; J. F. Bradford, Pennsylvania, 56 3-10 points, third.

Side Horse.—J. Fernandez, New York University, and W. H. Wheeler, Columbia, tied for first place with 69 5-10 points; H. B. Griffin, Yale, 67 5-10 points, third.

Club Swinging.—F. A. Morrison, Rutgers, first; H. O. Phillips, New York University, second; C. F. Thompson, Rutgers, third.

C. W. Watson's Horses Again First.

Seventh Regiment Games.

Hundreds of followers of the Seventh Regiment will gather in the regimental armory to-night to witness the annual Spring athletic games. Among the events for members of the Seventh the 400-yard run promises to prove the sensation. Paul Pilgrim of the New York Athletic Club is on scratch and will make a big effort to eclipse the armory record. He is sprinting very fast, but will find good competitors in Hayward, Storms, Werneken, Scudder, and Toole. Two Amateur Athletic Union events have been listed to insure a fine evening's sport. The one-mile roller skating handicap is well filled, and some of the best local distance racers will run in the three-mile run special.

Americans Lose at Chess.

VIENNA, March 27.—After a day of rest the players engaged in the International Jubilee Chess Tournament at the local club in this city resumed play, when the fourth round was contested. The Viennese crack, Perlis, was engaged against the American, Marshall, and beat the latter by a fine sacrifice, while the other American, Johner, suffered also defeat at the hand of the Russian, Alapin. The other results were as follows: Leonhardt lost to Duras, Swiedrski to Schlechter, who thus maintains his lead; Reti went down before Maroczy, while the game between Rubinstein and Cohn was adjourned greatly in favor of the former. Drawn games: Tartakower-Misses, Spielmann-Teichmann, Salwe-Berger, Bardeleben-Suechting.

NEW YORK A. C. WINS RELAY RACE IN TANK

CHICAGO TAKES POLO GAME

Columbia Men Easily Beaten in Tank—Bath Beach Also a Loser—To-day's Programme.

One new record, that for the 400-yard relay race, was made in the Amateur Athletic Union swimming competition, held at the New York Athletic Club last night. The crack quartet of the Mercury Foot organization, swimming in fine form, easily distanced their opponents in the event at the Ceneral Park South clubhouse, and, as there was no previous mark on the books for the event, the performance of last night will stand as a record until surpassed under similar conditions.

The summary:

400-Yard Relay Race, Senior.—Won by New York Athletic Club first team, composed of G. South, L. B. Goodwin, C. D. Trubenbach, and C. M. Daniels; University of Pennsylvania team, composed of G. C. Sylvester, J. Graham, J. H. Dalrymple, and J. K. Sryock, second; New York Athletic Club second team, composed of E. E. Wenck, Jr., J. A. Ruddy, N. C. Manley, and J. W. Lawrence, third. ## GIANTS, 6; DALLAS, 3.

New York Bunches Hits in Third and Eighth Innings.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, March 27.—Although Dallas earned a two-run lead in the first two innings of to-day's game with the New York Nationals, the Giants got busy with their bats in the third round and rapped three runners around the sacks. The next four innings were blanks for each side, but the Giants added another group of three runs in th eighth inning, while the Texans scored one. The Giants had splendid practice, and never needed to extend themselves to win. The score:

RUBIO'S GRAND NATIONAL.

American Discarded Horse Wins Famous English Steeplechase.

LIVERPOOL, March 27.—The Grand National Steeplechase of 3,000 sovereigns, including a trophy valued at 125 sovereigns, on the Grand National Course, distance about 4 miles 856 yards, was won to-day by Major F. Douglas-Pennant's Rubio. William Cooper's Mattie Macgregor was second, and P. Whitaker's The Lawyer III. finished third. Twenty-four horses ran.

Rubio was bred by James B. Haggin in California, and came from America two or three years ago. He was once purchased for $90, after he had broken down under training, and was driven to a trap. It was some time before his jumping qualities were discovered.

NEUR'S WILDNESS COSTLY TO YANKEES

Atlanta Takes Advantage of Erratic Pitching and Scores a 4 to 3 Victory.

SCHOPP A PUZZLE IN BOX

Southern Leaguer Wins Another Game—Stahl and Ball New Yorkers' Best Batters—Play Athens To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 27.—For the second time this season the New York Americans were defeated by the Atlantas. To-day's game was won by the Southern League champions in a ninth-inning rally, the final score being 4 to 3.

Neur's wildness was responsible for the loss of the game. He pitched for five innings and passed seven men to first base. Schopp, another left-hander, who officiated in the Yankees' first defeat two weeks ago, started the game for Atlanta, and during the five innings he officiated had the big leaguers guessing. The Yankees go to Athens to-morrow for a game with the University of Georgia. The score:

IN THE SUNDAY TIMES

THE most informing light that has yet been thrown on Japan and her enormous naval and military programme, comes direct from Tokio, and under the very recent date of March 1. Writing from the Japanese capital Mr. Thomas F. Millard, THE TIMES'S special correspondent in the East, compares the expenditures which Japan made while preparing for her war with Russia, and her present programme for naval and military increase. The figures show that forty per cent. of the national revenues are now being devoted to this purpose. The correspondent has made special efforts to discover the purpose of this enormous outlay, and his article, to be printed in THE SUNDAY TIMES, is of unusual interest and importance.

THE SUNDAY TIMES IS ALWAYS SOLD OUT EARLY.

NEW YORK CITY has had many opera seasons that have been notable, but in some respects the season just closing is the most remarkable of them all. More than thirty thousand persons have passed in the doors of the two houses each week. An article in THE SUNDAY TIMES will tell of the season and what it has meant financially. Included is a table of the weekly expense at the Manhattan prepared for this article by Mr. Hammerstein. It is an article full of interesting information that will appeal not only to opera goers and opera lovers, but to the general reader as well.

THE SUNDAY TIMES IS ALWAYS SOLD OUT EARLY.

CONDUCTING the affairs of one of the most important departments of the national government and at the same time supervising all the angles of his boom for a nomination for the Presidency, William H. Taft is a busy man these days. But not until one reads in THE SUNDAY TIMES the amount of work the Secretary of War is going through these days may he realize how busy a man Mr. Taft is. The writer of the article passed a day close to the desk of the Secretary in the War Department. What he saw is interesting and instructive. And it is told in an enjoyable manner.

THE SUNDAY TIMES IS ALWAYS SOLD OUT EARLY.

THE wonderful progress going on in and about this wonderful city has had a good example in the week now closing. The fourth of the Pennsylvania railroad tubes under the East River has been opened. Here is not one tunnel, but a quartette of tunnels. For THE TIMES, Stephen Bonsal has made the journey through the new opening. Mr. Bonsal's graphic description of his experience is well worth reading. One gets on good terms with the "Sand Hog"—that human mole to whom this city owes so much—and obtains good knowledge as to the new tunnel and the manner of its building.

AND SECTION DEVOTED TO REVIEW OF BOOKS.

THE EMBASSY AT BERLIN.

There is no reason to suppose that the misunderstanding about the appointment of Dr. DAVID JAYNE HILL to be Ambassador at Berlin is the result of anything more serious than a series of indiscretions. These have been grave enough, however, to warrant an expression of the hope that they will not be repeated or persisted in, and of the further hope that communications upon this subject between Washington and Berlin will promptly be restored to their only proper channel, the State Department.

Matters of this nature are always delicate, and may at any time become of international importance. There is no occasion for that in the present instance. Our relations with Germany are exceedingly friendly, and the desire that they should continue so is upon both sides too sincere to permit friction to arise without cause. At the same time the public discussion of the fitness of the diplomatic representative designated for a post of this importance is always to be regretted, since it involves obvious risks to good understanding.

The injustice to Dr. HILL is no less plain. For a quarter of a century or more we have been endeavoring step by step to build up something comparable to the diplomatic service already well established in other countries, a service in which qualification and experience lead to steady advancement, and which men enter with the willingness and the expectation to devote to it at least a considerable part of their lives. Dr. HILL has had experience, his reputation is established, and he is amply qualified for the Embassy to which it was supposed he was to be appointed. Now comes this misunderstanding or hitch, or whatever one may be pleased to call it, and for days and days conjecture busies itself with the possible grounds of Berlin's objection to him as an Ambassador before even it has been made clear that Berlin does object. Even the Foreign Office's denial is received with a qualified credence. That Dr. HILL's standing in the service suffers through all this gossip; that he has been placed in a false position by his own Government or by somebody in Berlin, and that his eligibility for continuance and promotion in the service may conceivably be impaired through no fault of his own, but only through the indiscretions of others, must be evident to all who are familiar with the history of previous incidents of this kind.

Men who by reason of their attainments and character are acceptable in the Diplomatic Service of the United States have a right to demand that they be not made the sport of the personal indiscretions, of the whims, the caprices, or the indecision of those to whose official keeping their professional fortunes are intrusted. Upon other occasions of late the personal element has been somewhat too freely exhibited in respect to our diplomatic representatives, and not at all to our advantage. The only safe rule is to leave to the State Department all matters concerning our relations and our representatives abroad.

LICENSING UNLAWFUL ACTS.

There is a parallel between the State legislation which the Supreme Court has just condemned and the proposed Federal legislation now pending. One of the cruel and unusual punishments which falls under the ban of unconstitutionality is the enactment in sundry States of laws providing that railways could not do business without a license, and that the license would be withdrawn for going into court to test the lawfulness of the law. These were the so-called "outlaw" acts, and Alabama's may be taken as an example of several. The Southern Railway made itself liable to a fine of $180,000, and went into the Federal court to test the law. The law required that across the face of the license should be written, "This license is canceled for a violation of the act under which issued, by the removal of a civil cause from the court of this State to the Federal court." This case was not tried through, for the Southern Railway compromised, but the statute is among those now to be tried upon their merits, following the Supreme Court's declaration that such unreasonable and confiscatory laws are unconstitutional.

At Washington also the anti-railway campaign sought to evade the appeal to the courts, and it now proposes to require a license to do inter-State business. There is no analogy to the requirement, for example, of a peddler's license. That is sold to any reputable applicant across the counter upon demand. The proposal is that a license shall be issued not by a Ministerial but by a judicial official, that is, by one exercising discretion, and withholding the license unless satisfied that it should be granted. The license, of course, is not to do an unlawful thing, but to do a thing which should be lawful without the license. The right to regulate inter-State commerce does indeed rest indubitably with Congress, but it does not follow that Congress or its delegate has the exclusive right to admit to, or to exclude from, inter-State commerce. The proposition is as unpermissible as that an appeal to the courts cancels civil rights. The right to trade among the States is a basic constitutional right, and has been claimed by some to be a natural right, broader than even the Constitution itself.

The root of the trouble is Congress's assumption to forbid reasonable restraints of trade, approved by ages of experience. Instead of retracing steps along this forbidden path, it is now proposed that reasonable restraints of commerce shall remain forbidden, but that there shall be exemption from the operation of the law by concessions of special privileges, by a process new to our institutions. This is a poor substitute for the right of every American, by virtue of his citizenship, to engage in whatever commerce is lawful for any one.

MR. IVINS'S PLAN.

The physical and the psychological problems involved in getting for the city the transit lines it needs are such that Mr. WILLIAM M. IVINS, special counsel of the Public Service Commission during its investigation, expresses his belief that the city must build them itself. It must not only build them, but equip them, renting the operating privilege to that company, which, after reserving 5 per cent. on its "unwatered" working capital, shall agree to pay the largest fraction above one-half its profits to the city.

In his address last night at the Exhibit of Congested Population in the Museum of Natural History, Mr. IVINS gave reasons for this belief. The physical difficulties are of a kind that "the more passengers certain of the surface lines carry the worse they are off." That is:

> Passengers cease to be a blessing even to a railroad company when they are so many that it is physically impossible to collect the fares, and electric motive power ceases to be economical when the streets are so jammed and traffic so impossible of regulation that nothing is gained in speed or comfort, and the trucks and motors and track are ruined by the strain to which they are put.

The psychological difficulties are even greater. It is his belief that the public and the employés of the companies are bent upon ruining the business, while the companies are bound not to serve the public except upon extortionate terms. Mr. IVINS hardly credits the surface company's statement of a 10 per cent. annual loss on its gross earnings through the dishonesty of conductors, but his own observation teaches him that "it is not at all improbable that the loss should amount to 5 per cent.," while a portion of the public aids and abets and shares in the dishonesty. Private builders, on the other hand, "will not build and own on any terms that the people will endure." In order to get the present Subway equipped by private capital the city has had to sacrifice nearly a million a year in taxes.

Mr. IVINS has investigated the transit situation. His plan is qualified for the best consideration.

ANOTHER BANK RESUMES.

It is not only in Manhattan that the banking situation is proving itself better than it once seemed possible to believe. Application is to be made to-day for the discharge of the receivers of the Borough Bank of Brooklyn, upon an appraisal of assets made to the court through the Superintendent of Banking. The difference between book value and appraisers' value is $55,674. This is surely an inconsiderable shrinkage upon a business exceeding four millions. There is a larger loss in the single item of demand loans through shrinkage of collateral. In other words, unindorsed loans have proved better than secured paper, through the contribution of a so-called "restitution fund," or provision of security upon demand when the storm broke. Surely such an outcome as this is the best reply to all the superheated denunciation of all concerned which followed the crisis and its disclosures.

Included in the account are credits from several banks, each of which is taken at its face. This could not have been done a little while ago. In other words, just as one failure produces another, so one resumption helps another. It is odd that the severest panic we have ever felt should be characterized by an exceptionally high quality of assets, and an exceptionally low proportion of individual dishonesty.

REPUBLICANS AND NEGROES.

There was a lot of exaggeration at the meeting of negroes on Thursday evening called to influence the action of the Republican Party in the approaching campaign, and though that is a fault not confined to any race it is worth noting. The fervent orators who declared that they represented 10,000,000 of negroes overlooked the fact that there are in the United States, according to the census, only 4,359,265 males of voting age who are either negroes or the descendants of negroes. Here is a little deduction of 57 per cent. to make at the start. Fully three-fourths of these negro males of voting age live in States where it would make no difference which way they voted for Presidential Electors. This reduces the possible constituency for which these orators can claim to speak to less than 2,000,000 at the most, supposing that they really speak the sentiments of all the negroes in possibly Republican States. It would be in certain conditions a goodly number, but it is not 10,000,000. In this State the speakers asserted that they spoke for 46,000 negroes. Again, according to the census, there are in the State only 31,425 colored males of voting age. The total colored population is not 100,000, and the actual number of votes cast by colored voters is probably not over 25,000. A good many of these, we are sorry to say, are likely to vote as they are paid to vote. Of the honest remainder not all by any means agree in the denunciation of Mr. ROOSEVELT, a still smaller number agree in the denunciation of Mr. TAFT. The result of which simple figuring is that the menace made by the meeting, and especially by the speakers, is much less formidable than appears on the surface.

Nevertheless it may prove to be formidable. If the State is close as between the two parties, 10,000, or even 5,000, votes might be decisive if they were cast directly for the Democratic candidate. And there are other States in which the margin of safety for the Republican candidate might be cut away by the negro vote. Should that happen it would be not without its element of political justice, for there is nothing in the history of the Republican Party more revolting and disgraceful than its treatment of the negroes. Nothing in the career of any party has shown less true statesmanship or more sordid and cynical selfishness than the Republican manipulation of the colored race. Nothing, not even the indulgence by the whites of the South of the inbred race prejudice against the negroes, has done so much to retard the progress of the race toward self-support and independence as the use the Republicans have made of them for political ends. At the same time, much as the Republicans deserve to be abandoned by the negroes, it is impossible to see how the latter can now hope to profit by the accession to power of the Democratic Party under Mr. BRYAN. To aid in bringing that about would be trying to jump from the frying pan into a very, very hot fire.

QUEER PRAYING.

"We would not forget, O Lord," the Rev. J. S. FRANCIS of Springfield, who opened the Republican State Convention of Illinois with prayer, is reported to have said, "to pray for the success of our own favorite son, 'Uncle Joe.'" Mr. FRANCIS doubtless knew his audience, and did not expect it to be shocked by this tone in addressing the Almighty. He knew the statesman whose fortunes he brought in this temper to the foot of the Throne of Grace, and expected no objections in that quarter. It is purely a matter of taste, and taste is a direct product of custom. Given sincerity and essential humility, there is no reason why the language of prayer should be strictly conformed to the stately simplicity, the perfect dignity, the beautiful reverence of the King JAMES version of the Christian Scriptures. In a sense it is an accident of history that the solemn and tender religious utterances of the times of JESUS, and of the race from which He sprang, should have been rendered into English at the moment of the supreme flowering of that language, a moment when it was the most perfect instrument for the expression of the noblest thought and feeling of the human nature.

But multitudes of men and women in our land look on that accident as a manifestation of Divine kindness, and the spirit of the Bible, thus transmitted, has become inwrought in their hearts. To them, and to many who do not quite share their beliefs, the introduction of colloquial terms in prayer is regrettable, if not offensive. In this instance it is not less so because it cannot but suggest a habit of speech more blasphemous still with which the veteran statesman of Illinois is only too much associated. We fear that any supernal aid the Rev. Mr. FRANCIS is likely to secure through his curious petition will hardly offset the disadvantages of this sort which Mr. CANNON invites.

OPERA IN OTHER CITIES.

While Philadelphia is now assured of a handsome new opera house, in which Mr. HAMMERSTEIN's artists are to illustrate every Winter the highest development of contemporary drama, combining musical, histrionic, and pictorial expression, and the Borough of Brooklyn's splendid new Academy will soon form a third abiding place for grand opera in New York City, Boston is preparing to have a new opera house of its very own, with a director of its own, too, and sixty performances yearly. The new theatre in the Back Bay will be somewhat similar in size and style of architecture to the New Theatre on Central Park West. Mr. EBEN D. JORDAN will build it, and Messrs. WHEELWRIGHT and HAVEN are the architects.

The Boston Opera Company has been incorporated, and subscriptions for the boxes, already guaranteed, will provide an annual income of $92,000. The capital of the company is, we understand, to be restricted to $150,000, which will be required for equipping the house with scenery, costumes, and properties, and meeting the preliminary expenses of organization. The cost of the house, including the land, will be about $700,000. Mr. HENRY RUSSELL, now manager of the San Carlo Opera Company, will be the director. Performances will be given four times weekly for fifteen weeks.

The owners of the building will demand only a low rental from the opera company. They have not gone into the scheme with the expectation of large profits. The burdens of the stockholders will not be heavy, and they will have the first choice of seats. The plan promises well. If it succeeds it will benefit not only Boston, but the development of musical art all over the country. Eager competition is as good for art as it is for trade.

Mr. HAMMERSTEIN's intention to build a Philadelphia opera house, in his own rapid-fire manner, (nobody doubts that the theatre will be ready at the appointed moment,) is a gratifying indication of the measurable pecuniary success thus far of his operatic venture. But the Boston plan is the beginning of a new and healthful artistic movement which we hope will extend to other cities.

Not Candy, but Scarlet Fever.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg to call your attention to the injustice, not to mention the grave injury, done to an important National industry by such an article as the one on the first page of to-day's issue, entitled: "Dead of Candy Poisoning. One Child Succumbs and Her Brother Is Dying After Eating Colored Sweets." Both the children mentioned in this article, in my opinion, died of malignant scarlet fever, which at the present time is quite prevalent in New York City. Every textbook on diseases of children mentions the fact that such cases are frequently ushered in by great prostration and persistent vomiting, occurring from one to three days before the scarlatinal rash appears. Unfortunately, the early symptoms of many children diseases are quite obscure, and it is simply confounding the "post hoc" with the "propter hoc" and catering to a common prejudice to at once ascribe such symptoms to the ingestion of sweets, while in all probability these symptoms were altogether produced by the poison of some impending infectious disease.

Says They Are Anemones.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your recent editorial on "The Easter Lily," you quote the familiar text in Matthew, or its opening words: "Consider the lilies of the field." Probably nine-tenths of your readers, including many Sunday school teachers, when they read these words, suppose they refer to our lowland meadow lilies, or possibly their cousinly neighbors, the scarcer wood lily. But the flower that was in mind was not a lily of any variety whatever. The flower pointed out was really a large and glorified anemone, which grows in great profusion in Palestine, and which is very beautiful, having very rich velvet-colored petals.

When you look at one you can easily see that Solomon in all his glory was not so arrayed.

He Is Skeptical.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Whenever I read (as I do to-night) pessimistic views expressed by Mr. J. J. Hill, I recollect that just previous to the great corner in Northern Pacific common stock several years ago there were statements issued by the (then) President of the Northern Pacific Railway stating that the outlook for crops that year was so poor that it was probable the company would have to suspend dividends on its preferred stock.

But, as you recollect, this gloomy view was followed by the common stock advancing from 40 to 1,000 and Mr. Hill and his friends largely interested.

As a consequence I am skeptical occasionally.

Utilities Commission and Telephones.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will your Albany legislative correspondent kindly advise your regular readers on this point?

What are the influences in the way of extending the public service jurisdiction over telephone companies as well as transportation, gas, electric, and other utility corporations?

There is evident need of this authority being thus vested, and the public should know why it is withheld.

Usage of "Ilk."

In Annie Nathan Meyer's reply to Mrs. Catt in your issue of the 23d inst. I find these words: "The trouble with Mrs. Catt and her ilk is." What does Mrs. Meyer mean by "her ilk"? Ilk never refers to persons but to places, and definite places. If the owner of an estate and his estate have the same name, as for instance Calhoun, he is spoken of "Calhoun of that ilk." That is, "Calhoun of Calhoun." It is never used in any other way, and is peculiar to Scotland.

"Brower," Not Browes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The suggestion that there should be a "Big Sister" movement was made not by Mary A. W. Browes, but by MARY A. W. BROWER.

A Kaiser's Revolver.

From The London P. T. O.

Emperor William II. is never without his revolver, and he is extremely skillful in the use of the weapon. It is inspected and freshly primed every morning, so as to make sure it is in perfect working order. Firmly convinced that he is going to die by the hand of an Anarchist, this fate having been prophesied for him long ago, he is determined to make a stern fight for his life, and to have, at any rate, the satisfaction, if he falls, of inflicting some injury upon his assailant.

A VERNAL MORNING.

The vernal morning is a-thrill with presages,
Elusive tokens and evasive messages
The thrall hiemal smitten and rent asunder.
Hark to that bubbly whisper! Tender cresses
Anon will know the water's cool caresses.
List to that lyric rapture! All the reaches
Of wakening woodland—maples, birches, beeches—
Will soon make echo, alto, bass and treble;
A gloss will glint upon the moss and pebble
By yonder fluffy catkin dimly hinted;
And O the blossom-coinage to be minted
Where that long meadow upward slopes in umber!—
Riches for treasure-seekers without number.

How we have waited for this rathe allurement!
Now we behold it—the divine assurement—
The hour ecstatic—how shall we employ it?

CHILDREN'S FRIENDS TO HONOR MRS. WARD

3,000 Invited to Dinner for English Novelist, and 500 Have Already Accepted.

DUCHESS TO MAKE A SPEECH

Former Consuelo Vanderbilt Will Talk on Women's Responsibilities—Mrs. Ward to Speak.

Under the auspices of the Playground Association of America, a large dinner will be given in honor of Mrs. Humphry Ward, the English novelist, on Tuesday night, at the Waldorf-Astoria. Over 3,000 invitations have been issued for the event, and already 500 invited guests have sent acceptances.

Richard Watson Gilder will preside at the dinner, and among those who will speak are the guest of honor, Mrs. Humphry Ward; the Duchess of Marlborough, who will speak on "The Responsibility of Women"; Miss Jane Addoms of Hull House, Chicago; Jacob Riis, who is an officer of the association; Robert W. De Forest, Dr. W. H. Maxwell, Superintendent of Education, and Dr. Luther H. Gulick, President of the society.

Mrs. Ward is much interested in the work, and will speak of its progress in England.

There will be a reception from 7 to 8 o'clock, preceding the dinner. The Reception Committee will be Dr. Luther H. Gulick and Mrs. Gulick, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Riis, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, and Miss Addoms.

Being a National institution, the guests invited are from various parts of the country, and include many people prominent in social and public life.

Among those who have accepted invitations are:

Robert Garrett of Baltimore, ex-Gov. Henry Roberts of Connecticut, Gen. George Wingate, Charles Scribner, Robert C. Ogden, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Henry Villard, the Hon. James Logan, Mayor of Worcester, Mass.; Col. George B. M. Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Scribner, President J. H. Finley of the College of the City of New York, President Henry C. King of Oberlin College, W. Seward Webb, Mrs. J. Andrew Swan of Newport, Miss Anne Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., Col. J. J. McCook, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

The Playground Association of America was organized for the purpose of securing for children in all cities their natural birthright—that of play under natural conditions and elevating leadership. The association aims especially to reach the children of the tenement districts.

GERMAN THEATRE PLANS.

Many New Plays to be Produced Next Season in Its New Home.

The plays to be produced in the German Theatre, so long in Irving Place, which will open in its new home uptown on Oct. 1 under the management of Dr. Maurice Baumfeld, will include, next season, Goethe's "Faust" and "Egmont," Schiller's "Wilhelm Tell," "Kabale und Liebe," and "Die Raeuber"; Grillparzer's "Weh dem der luegt" and "Des Meeres und Der Liebe Wellen"; Friedrich Hebbel's "Siegfried's Tod," and Heinrich von Kleist's "der zerbrochene Krug."

Much attention will also be devoted to contemporary drama, and there will be a special Ibsen cycle, including "Pillars of Society," "An Enemy of the People," "The Wild Duck," and "John Gabriel Borkmann." New works by Hermann Sudermann, Gerhart Hauptmann, Ludwig Fulda and Ernst von Wildenbruch will also be presented.

In addition to the regular dramatic season of twenty weeks, eight weeks will be reserved for productions of German operettas and opera comiques. Arrangements for this part of the plan have not yet been definitely completed. A company will be engaged, consisting exclusively of actors from the leading German theatres in Europe, and from time to time prominent stars who have never been seen in America will be specially presented. Among those retained to supervise the scenic effects of the various leading productions are Profs. Roller, Leffler, and Mucha.

Subscribers will be guaranteed the opportunity of seeing twenty different productions, and, to make this possible, the subscriptions will be limited to twenty weeks, though the season will last for thirty weeks. The subscriptions may be for the Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday evening performances or for the Saturday matinées. Subscribers will have the right to see all the stars who may be engaged and to attend performances for which special prices may be charged. The price of subscription for seats in the first ten rows of the orchestra has been fixed at $40, and for the next five rows $30. Subscriptions will also be received for ten boxes situated in the middle of the house, at $300 each. Subscriptions for the opera season will be received separately, but subscribers for the twenty weeks of the regular dramatic season may have their privileges extended on conditions that will be announced later.

PLANS FOR SCHOOL REPAIRS.

Board to Go Ahead While Mr. Metz Finds a Way to Get the Money.

The calendar was temporarily suspended at the Board of Estimate meeting yesterday when Egerton L. Winthrop, President of the Board of Education, came before the board to ask for $3,000,000 for repairs to twenty schools that Superintendent of School Buildings C. B. J. Snyder has declared to be dangerous.

"We are anxious to get at this work as soon as possible," said Mr. Winthrop after the Mayor had suggested that the matter be referred to the Controller.

The Controller asked whether the $3,000,000 was in excess of the $11,000,000 school appropriation asked for. Mr. Winthrop admitted this to be so, and the Controller said that, in order to give this sum, it might be necessary to cut down the other school appropriations.

"You may have to give up a new school or two," said Mr. Metz.

"That would be very disastrous," said Mr. Winthrop. "The Board does not want to put more pupils on half time."

"Well," said the Controller, "the matter is referred to me. Go ahead with your plans, and then come and confer with me and we will do something as soon as possible."

FOR MONUMENT TO LEE.

Ferris of Oklahoma Wants One in Washington to Cost $100,000.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—A resolution appropriating $100,000 for the erection in this city of a monument to the memory of Gen. Robert E. Lee, Commander in Chief of the Confederat Army of the United States, was introduced to-day by Representative Ferris of Oklahoma.

Dewey Not to Welcome the Fleet.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Admiral Dewey, it is understood, has decided not to go to the Pacific Coast to participate in the welcome to the Atlantic battleship fleet when it reaches San Francisco. He has so informed his intimate friends, and unless he sees some reason for changing his present intention will adhere to this decision.

Taft to Speak Here Memorial Day.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—A committee from U. S. Grant Post No. 327 G. A. R. of Brooklyn, N. Y., called on the President and Secretary Taft to-day and invited the Secretary of War to deliver the Memorial Day oration, May 30, at Grant's Tomb on the Hudson River, New York. Secretary Taft accepted the invitation.

GALLERY NOTES.

Exhibitions at Knoedler's Window for Historical Society Building.

At the Knoedler Galleries are an interesting collection of Whistler's etchings and a few of his lithographs. Among the former—to choose at random from a list each item of which appeals to the admirer of Whistler's art—are such early examples as "La Mère Gérard" in the state after the background shadow and inscription have been added; the impressive "Street at Saverne," with its superb breadth of light and shade; the "Thames Police," with its multitudinous and finely wrought detail; the "Kitchen" and the "Rag Gatherers," the "Rotherhithe," with the long scratch which Duret says came from the etcher's quick dodging of a falling brick while working on his plate; the "Landscape With a Horse" in two states, the one corresponding to the title and the one in which it is a landscape with two horses, both states showing clearly enough Whistler's mastery of drawing in the rise and dip of the meadow, the sense of solidity in the land, the crisp treatment of the foliage. "Greenwich Park" is there also, with its handsome trees, and "Annie," and the imposing "Finette." The "Maude, Standing," is there in two states, one with and one without the fur tippet. On one of the prints is considerable work in white paint, indicating changes in the figure and reduction of the work on the gown and arms, with the effect of bringing the form out more definitely under the draperies. Among other plates shown are the "Lord Wolseley," an impression in brown ink; "The Little Hat," which is not in Wedmore's catalogue, but is in the supplement, and "The Model" and "The Mantle," both of which are in the Grolier Club catalogue, but are neither in Wedmore nor the supplement. The exhibition is one to absorb the attention of amateurs of prints.

In the upper gallery at Knoedler's are two portrait exhibitions, one of four portraits of Englishmen, by Ernest Moore of London, the other of portraits of the Chief Justices of the United States Supreme Court, by Albert Rosenthal. Mr. Moore's exhibit includes a freshly painted, vivacious likeness of the Right Hon. James Bryce, Ambassador to the United States. Mr. Bryce wears his Oxford hood, and his clear, bright color, his hawk-like eye and keen profile combine with the pictorial dress in a brilliant effect. The painting is direct and vigorous, having been executed in six hours. The portrait of Irving, by Mr. Moore, shows the actor as he looked some eight years ago, not yet disclosing many signs of age or of ill-health. He is in ordinary dress and stands with his hands clasped behind his back. Mr. Moore has indicated the refinement and dignity of his face, but has hardly given the characteristic flexibility of the features. In the portrait of the grave gentleman wearing the Lord Mayor's chain of office there is sharper characterization, and the general effect of the rather pale head against the oak wainscoting is striking. Among the portraits by Mr. Rosenthal that of Judge Henry B. Brown is the most interesting on the technical side. The veiled brilliancy of living flesh is remarkably well rendered in the painting of the face, there is vitality and expression in the hands, although in these the looseness of the brushwork and rather disagreeable color impair the pleasantness of the impression, and there is a unity of feeling and tone throughout that gives to each detail its proper value as part of a closely interrelated scheme.

⁂

To commemorate Henry Hudson's discovery of Manhattan Island, the Daughters of Holland Dames of New York have had designed and executed a memorial window for the New York Historical Society's new building. The window which is now on view at the Gorham Company's building was designed by Frank J. Ready, and is the result of careful research as to the probable location, setting, &c., of the Halve Maen, Hudson's yacht, upon her first appearance in the bay. It was late in the afternoon of Sept. 11, 1609, when the Halve Maen dropped anchor off the island, and the artist has used the coloring of an Autumn sunset as his key, giving with much success the misty purples that dim the glow of the sky at that time of year. The details of the vessel have been studied from models of boats built in the year 1600, and she is represented as carrying full colors, as the date is prior to the striking of standards at sundown. A border of scrolls symbolizing rolling water surrounds the picture. Above the central panel is a cresting with the arms of the Netherlands, under whose grant Hudson sailed. Fruit and flowers in two smaller panels represent Autumn in a land of plenty, and below are the arms of Old and New Amsterdam. At the base in the left panel is the insignia of the Dutch Trading Company, which fitted out the Halve Maen, the seal of the Daughters of Holland Dames is in the central panel, and in the right panel the seal of New Netherlands. Thus of historical suggestion the window is all compact, and will make an agreeable decoration in the building for which it is designated.

CATHEDRAL STATUES RECUT.

Gutzon Borglum Now Satisfied with the Reproductions of His Models.

The work of remodeling the many pieces of statuary already set in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights, will be completed to-day. Gutzon Borglum has the commission for all the figures to be put in the niches, both inside and outside the cathedral. He has done much of the recutting himself. Mr. Borglum was not satisfied with the original work of the stonecutters on the statues and protested against the figures being set.

After a long controversy between the Cathedral Committee, the contractors, and the sculptor, Mr. Borglum won his point, and it was decided to recut the statuary. Expert cutters of Mr. Borglum's own selection were hired and entered upon the task, with the famous sculptor working side by side with them every day. The smaller pieces were finished several days ago.

Directly under the arch of the chancel wall of the Belmont Chapel facing Morningside Avenue is a figure of "The Child." Underneath it are arcnangels, and lower down, Simeon, and the Virgin and Zacharias. All these were among the pieces that had to be recut. Mr. Borglum finished Zacharias yesterday and will complete the Virgin to-day.

There remain to be completed the Twelve Apostles, nine feet tall, and other figures. Simon, Matthew, Thomas, Jude, James, Andrew, Peter, Bartholomew, Philip, John, James the Less, and Paul are to stand in niches along the outside of the choir. Many of them are nearly finished, although Mr. Borglum has yet to mold the clay model of Paul. The unfinished figures stand in a row in a long shed back of the cathedral, with the model for each at its shoulder. Everybody is working in harmony now it was said yesterday.

HAMMER SALE BRINGS $4,354.

Many German Friends of the Dead Artist Bid for Samples of His Work.

The closing sale of the John J. Hammer pictures at the American Art Galleries last night brought $2,339, and with the proceeds from the previous evening a total for the 165 canvases of $4,354. Many Germans have been present at both sales, friends of the artist or interested in the German scenes he painted.

The highest price last evening was paid for "Alsfeld Obersessen." There was a warm competition between two would-be purchasers, but Phillip Corell, who has been the largest buyer at the sale, put in a last bid and took the picture for $155. He also purchased a large canvas, "East Gloucester, Mass.," for $100, and "Approaching Storm," another large picture, for the same price. "Morning in Besigheim" went to Mr. Corell for $87.50.

Four of the pictures of the previous evening were resold, all but one bringing higher prices than at the first sale.

WORK, AND YOU'LL WIN SAYS MR. CARNEGIE

SOME MARRIAGE ADVICE

Better Give One's Daughter to a Good Workman Than a Worthless Duke, He Says.

Andrew Carnegie talked to the graduating students of the Pratt Institute evening schools at their closing exercises at 215 Ryerson Street, Brooklyn, last night, and told them that the best way for young men to get on in life was to go a little earlier to work and stop a little later than any one else in the same house, and some day they would get a chance to distinguish themselves in the eyes of their employers. He knew a case of a young man who did this, and in due course rose to be the trusted manager of the concern, so that he was left in charge when his employer went to Europe.

"On his return," said Mr. Carnegie, "the manager waited upon him and handed in his resignation, to the intense surprise of the employer. At first the young man would not give his reasons for resigning, but in the end he admitted that he had fallen in love with the boss's daughter.

"'Have you spoken to my daughter about this?' sternly demanded the old man. With tears in his eyes the manager said that he had not.

"'Well, Robbie,' said the employer, kindly, 'and why haven't you? You are the kind of man I want for a son-in-law.'

"They were married," continued Mr. Carnegie, "and lived very happily together. How much better is it for a man to give his daughter to a man who has risen by his own merit than to throw her away on a worthless duke! [Laughter.]

"You can work with your hands, but you must also use your brains, and when you find that you can do more work with your brains than with your hands do it.

"An old motto says, 'Obey orders if you break owners,' but that is a foolish precept for a young man to-day if he wishes to get on. If you see your employer doing a foolish thing tell him so, don't be afraid.

"Of course," said Mr. Carnegie, "he may be a bit cross at first, but stick to your guns, and from that time you will be a marked man in his sight. If he does not promote you look around for a man who is making millions and promoting his employes.

"Do not be afraid of the future or of the Republic. In ninety-nine cases out of one hundred it is a young man's own fault if he does not get on. All honor wounds are self-inflicted. Remember that nothing on earth can cheat you out of an honorable career unless you cheat yourself. Don't do it."

Frederick Pratt, son of the founder of the institute, made the opening speech and introduced Mr. Carnegie.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Controller of the Currency William Barret Ridgely handed in his resignation to-day to the President in order to take charge of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City.

The position will be given to Lawrence O. Murray, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor. The President will make this nomination as soon as he knows exactly when Ridgely wishes to retire.

Mr. Ridgely called at the White House this morning and held a lengthy conference with the President.

Mr. Murray has been ill with grip for several weeks. He is now recuperating at Atlantic City.

The next Controller of the Currency is as young as any man in President Roosevelt's Administration, and is personally a favorite at the White House. His skill in tennis was a factor in the warm friendship that has sprung up between the President and himself.

Mr. Murray was born in 1864 at Addison Hill, Steuben County, N. Y. In 1885 he was graduated from the Addison Academy. For two years he attended Niagara University, and then obtained the degrees of LL. B. from the Metropolitan Law School, L. L. M. from Georgetown College, and D. C. L. from the Catholic University of America.

He has been Chief of the Organization Division of the Treasury Department and Deputy Controller of the Currency. For a time he was connected with the Trust Company of America and the Central Trust Company of Illinois. He was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor in 1904.

MAJ. GEN. GREELY IS RETIRED.

Arctic Relief Expedition Commander Reaches the Age Limit.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Major Gen. A. W. Greely, of Arctic relief expedition fame, having reached the age of 64 years, to-day was transferred to the retired list in accordance with law. He was recently relieved of command of the Department of the Lakes at Chicago, and is now traveling in the Orient on leave of absence.

Brig. Gen. Charles B. Hall, commandant of the General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., has been appointed a Major General vice Greely retired, and Col. John B. Kerr, commanding the Twelfth Cavalry at Fort Oglethrope, Ga., has been oppointed a Brigadier General vice Hall promoted.

WORK IN BRONX COMES HIGH.

Bills for Cleaning Public Buildings Aggregate $175,056 in Six Years.

Cleaning the municipal buildings in the Bronx comes high, judging from testimony given yesterday at the Haffen inquiry being held by the Commissioners of Accounts. E. W. Stewart, chief examiner for the Commissioners, testified that it had cost $175,056 to clean the Bronx city buildings in the last six years. Previously expert cleaners had submitted estimates which, compared with the figures put in by Mr. Stewart, indicated that Mr. Haffen's department paid nearly ten times as much as was necessary.

It developed, also, that the Bureau of Public Buildings had engaged watchmen to watch public baths not in use, and that there were unexplained expenditures for repairs to these baths. It was shown, too, that two men at least had been paid for time when they were not employed, and that an effort had been made to change the time book so that it would agree with the facts.

One witness, Claude A. Briedenbach, gave Commissioner Mitchel a lot of trouble through his inability to remember what had occurred at a conference he had with the Superintendent of Buildings, A. Liebenau, 24 hours previously. The witness was told that the case would be referred to the District Attorney, and was asked whether he knew what perjury is, but still he couldn't remember.

The hearing will go on to-day.

Musical Director—Maestro Campanini.

A final new production was made at the Manhattan Opera House last evening, the night before the close of the season, when Giordano's opera "Andrea Chénier" was given. It was not the first performance of the work in New York, for it was given twelve years ago a few times at the old Academy of Music, when Col. J. H. Mapleson was carrying on there the last season of opera he was destined ever to give in New York. The revival last evening would have been a curious one, considered as a part of a manager's policy, for a repetition of the performance so near the end of the season is, of course, impracticable.

It was announced, however, as a performance complimentary to Mme. Campanini, the wife of Mr. Hammerstein's distinguished conductor. Mme. Campanini had not sung before at the Manhattan Opera House, but she is not entirely unknown to New York as a singer. As Eva Tetrazzini—she is the sister of the coloratura soprano whose accomplishments have occasioned so much recent excitement—she appeared at the Academy of Music in the Spring of 1888, when Italo Campanini made his unfortunate attempt to be an impresario, and give the first American performances of Verdi's "Otello." Mme. Tetrazzini was then the Desdemona and Cleofonte Campanini conducted.

The occasion was made to do honor to Mr. Campanini as well as to Mme. Campanini. The conductor, when he first appeared before the orchestra, was greeted with a fanfare by the players that was enthusiastically seconded by the audience. Then, after the second came more tokens of esteem for Mr. Campanini, when a table piled high with gifts from the artists of the company was brought upon the stage and presented to him, with innumerable wreaths following; handshakings without number, all in the midst of admiring applause from the audience, and finally the presence of Mr. Hammerstein, who certified publicly to the greatness of his conductor. And again, after the third act, Mr. Campanini was most liberally included in the demonstration for his wife.

"Andrea Chénier" is likely to create somewhat less stir in the operatic world to-day than it did twelve years ago, when it was first given here. Then the new Italian school was known chiefly by hearsay, and Giordano's work had many elements of novelty, many effects that seized the unaccustomed ear; the quickly pulsing, voluble, and often violent utterance of the contemporaneous Italian school was not yet a common operatic speech. But Giordano's opera, even to those whose ears have become accustomed to the manner that once seemed so strange, mordant, subtle, and telling in harmony, eloquent in melody, is to-day a truly interesting and musically substantial work, to be prized in the modern repertory. It is far and away the best of Giordano's operas, putting "Fédora," with its flimsy construction and still flimsier ideas, beneath comparison, and surpassing "Siberia" in spontaneity and amplitude of specifically musical inspiration.

Giordano had plenty to say in "Andrea Chénier," and said it with skill and with a sure command of effect. He had the advantage to begin with of an excellent libretto, which was described in last Sunday's TIMES—a libretto with a truly dramatic interest, rising to points of emotional climax, and of dramatic effectiveness. The variety, expeditiousness, and quickly shifting color of the orchestral treatment characteristic of the newer Italian style, is present in this opera, but the composer has allowed himself ample and frequent opportunities for the development and enlargement of his thought in a lyric vein, and for the attainment of points of climax. This has not been always the case in recent works of this school. The orchestral part is continuous, picturesque, and pointedly expressive, bearing on its rapid flow the suggestion of the dramatic incidents taking place on this stage.

It is skillfully, often brilliantly, scored. The melodic view of "Andrea Chénier" is considerably richer than that from which Giordano has worked in his later operas; and there are a number of striking passages that produced a real impression last evening. The charming shepherds' song in the first act, the address that Chénier makes in the ballroom scene, then an impassioned soliloquy he delivers in the second act, the song that Maddalena sings there, and then their long duet avowing their mutual love, are admirable specimens of their kind.

The finest passage in the opera, however, is Gérard's powerful monologue as he stands alone in the tribunal chamber in the third act, and the subsequent scene there with Maddalena, in part a foreshadowing of the similar situation in "Tosca," but with a different outcome and more effectually characterized by the music.

All this is perhaps not strongly original in substance and partakes of a general family resemblance to much of the music of the contemporaneous Italian school. But it is written with impressive sincerity and directness. Giordano treats skilfully in music the effects of animated throngs, as in the ballroom scene of the first act, and especially the scene of the meeting of the Committee of Public Safety in the third, are skilful passages of this sort of writing. In this last the opera reaches perhaps its highest point of theatrical effect.

There are the committee, the accused Chénier his denouncers, his betrothed, the throng of sans-culottes, then the irruption of Gérard attempting to withdraw his denunciation, the vehement protests of the crowd, the final report of the committee, death! The librettist has utilized the elements of the situation with skill, and Giordano reveals here a strongly dramatic instinct. At several points in the score there are melodies introduced of the revolutionary times, the "Ca Ira," in the second act; the "Carmagnole," the "Marseillaise."

In the performance were enlisted Mr. Bassi as Chénier, Mr. Sammarco as Gérard, Mme. Campanini as Maddalena, Mlle. Giaconia as Countess de Coigny, Mme. Zeppilli as Bersi, Mme. de Cisneros as Madelon, and Mr. Crabbé as Fouquier de Tinville. Mme. Campanini made a highly creditable impression in her impersonation of the heroine.

She is an actress of skill, experience, and manifest sincerity. Her voice is, naturally, not in its first bloom, but it is more than the beautiful remains of one. It is a soprano not without power and dramatic quality, and she made of the character an attractive and truly sympathetic figure. In the scene with Gérard she gave a true denotement of the tensity of the emotional crisis. Mr. Sammarco made one of his most notable achievements in the part of Gérard.

He sang the music with real splendor and beauty of tone, with poignant dramatic expression, and most notably in the great scene he has in the Tribunal chamber in the third act. In nothing he has done here before has he risen to such a pitch of power; in few operas has he a greater opportunity. It was his moment, and he plucked from it all the opportunity offered.

Mr. Bassi's Andrea Chénier was acceptable, and he brought zeal and understanding to its presentation, though neither strongly individual dramatic characterization nor truly fine singing in the real sense of the words are to be expected of him.

The chorus did remarkably well, sang with great vigor, and presented the unruly mob of Parisian revolutionists with increasing animation. Mr. Campanini conducted with all his tireless energy and filled the performance with dash and spirit—and sometimes completely overwhelmed the singers with the vehemence of orchestral sound.

The opera was given on the whole with uncommon zest, though it was, by no means one of the most finished performances that have been given at the Manhattan, and bore some traces of hasty preparation. The scenery, most of it adapted from other representations, was adequate, and the picturesque and varied costumes of the period added brilliancy and piquancy to the stage.

The audience was large, and found numerous occasions for liberal and sometimes vociferous applause. And the wonder was that operatic managers have recently busied themselves so much with the less important works of Umberto Giordano and have neglected this brilliant, and, in its way, powerful work.

PHILADELPHIA OPERA PLANS.

Hammerstein's New House to Have Many Innovations.

Oscar Hammerstein confirmed last night his announced intention to build an opera house in Philadelphia. Ground will be broken for the new structure on Monday, and the impresario expects to give opera there next Winter.

"It will be one of the largest opera houses in the world, seating nearly 4,000 persons," Mr. Hammerstein said last night. "I did not submit my plans to the Building Commissioner at Philadelphia, merely my ideas, which he approved. Now a New York architect is working these out. The new structure will not resemble in any way the Manhattan Opera House. The boxes are to be arranged in the form of a horseshoe so that they all can be seen, and each box will have a private parlor.

"The seats in the topmost gallery will be like those on the first floor, and there will be foyers for all the floors. There will be no class distinctions in my new theatre. My son Arthur will leave for Philadelphia Monday and will have the pleasure of spending the Summer there, while I go to Europe to engage artists. While I have not decided how often I shall give opera in Philadelphia, of course it will necessitate my having extra people, and I shall maintain a chorus and orchestra there and interchange principals between Philadelphia and New York.

"I discovered last week when I took Tetrazzini to Philadelphia that there was a large metropolitan musical public there which was willing to pay for the best opera, and next year I shall make an attempt to satisfy that public."

CONRIED DECLINES BANQUET.

Ill Health Prevents Him from Accepting Theatre Manager's Invitation.

Heinrich Conried sent this letter yesterday to Daniel Frohman, representing the Theatrical Managers' Association, who wished to give the impresario a dinner:

> My Dear Mr. Frohman: Your letter and the kind expressions it contained, in view of my approaching retirement from the Directorship of the Metropolitan Opera House, have touched me deeply, and I regret that the present state of my health compels me to decline the offer of a banquet. My physician fears that any undue exertion at this juncture may retard my progress toward recovery, and I feel myself that the pleasure and excitement might overtax my strength.
>
> I beg you, therefore, to express my heartfelt thanks to my fellow-members for the thought that prompted this mark of esteem, and to assure them that I hope at a later date to be able to express my gratitude in person. Yours, very sincerely, HEINRICH CONRIED.

It was announced at the Metropolitan last evening that Mme. Eames would positively sing Gounod's "Gallia" with the chorus at the concert next Sunday evening.

PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY CLOSES.

Audience Enthusiastic at Last Concert of the Season.

The People's Symphony Society, assisted by three soloists, two extra conductors besides Franz X. Arens, and the United German Singing Societies, packed Carnegie Hall to the walls last evening. The stage was so full of performers that persons could scarcely move about, and some of the members of the orchestra, when they wished to leave the stage, were obliged to drop from the front of the platform to the floor. There was barely room for the piano in the centre of things, and when its top was raised it obtruded itself between the conductor's baton and half of his orchestra in the playing of the concerto movement. But every one was good natured, the audience was extremely enthusiastic, and the eighth season of these educational concerts at popular prices ended with glory.

Calude Cunningham, the baritone soloist, had a severe cold, and as a result his air from Weber's "Euryanthe" was omitted. However, he sang his part in the Grieg "Land Kennung" with the German Singing Societies. Henrietta Michelson played the first movement of the Tschaikowsky B flat minor piano concerto. Henry P. Schmitt, violinist, played the "Meditation" from "Thaïs," and the orchestra, under Mr. Arens, performed two Wagner excerpts. The choral societies were heard in several numbers, and sang with volume and earnestness, and usually with good effect. They were conducted in turn by Julius Lorenz and Carl Hein.

Eames and Caruso in "Il Trovatore."

"Il Trovatore" was repeated at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The cast included Mmes. Eames and Homer, and Messrs. Caruso and Stracciari. Mr. Ferrari conducted.

Hippodrome's Professional Matinee.

The first professional matinée ever given at the Hippodrome took place yesterday afternoon and drew 3,000 player folk. Members of the Metropolitan and Manhattan Opera companies, as well as principals and chorus people from all the regular musical and dramatic productions in town, were on hand to see the spectacles and the circus features.

THE LATE RABBI ISAAC M. WISE

Memorial Services to be Held To-day in Temple Emanu-El.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman of Temple Emanu-El will preach this morning on the subject, "Is Man Immortal?" and in his sermon he will pay a tribute to the memory of his teacher, the late Rabbi, Isaac M. Wise, the founder of the Hebrew Union College of Cincinnati, and the organizer of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Dr. Wise died on March 26, 1900, and the anniversary of his death is generally observed by the reformed Hebrew congregations throughout the United States, on the Sabbath following the date.

SOCIALIST THEATRE STARTS BUSINESS

Presents Three Plays with the Familiar Doctrine to an East Side Audience.

NOT AN ELABORATE PLACE

But the Playgoers Eagerly Take to Theatre, Plays, and Doctrine—Management Hopes to Extend.

The Socialists began a propaganda through the drama last night in a little, low ceiling hall in Third Street, between Second and Third Avenues. Three plays were presented, and despite the fact that the stories told were grewsome and in parts revolting, an audience that filled the theatre followed the lines with rapt attention.

The stage settings were crude, and in most instances the actors appeared to be amateurish. But they displayed no amateurish unfamiliarity with their lines. Two children, Corinne Malvern and Helen McMahon, completely captured the audience with their natural, unaffected acting.

Little Corinne Malvern appeared as the spoiled daughter of a rich doll manufacturer, who would not love her doting father, (Julien Barton,) unless he brought her a doll daily. Helen McMahon was the starved daughter of a starving working woman, (Muriel Hope,) who sought aid at the hands of the rich manufacturer, only to be accused of stealing one of the dolls.

The scene wound up in a denunciation of the manufacturer by the starving woman, rendered with surprising vigor in view of the starving lady's condition.

This play was written by Julius Hopp, who manages the theatre, especially for the Socialist Sunday School of the Eighth Assembly District. The second play was "Their Daughters," a satire on modern society by André Tridon. It told the story of a wronged mother and her scheming daughter. The last play was entitled "The Moral Demand," from the German of Otto Erich Hartleben, and told the story of a vaudeville intrigue.

The performances will be repeated this afternoon, when the children of the Socialist Sunday schools will be invited. Manager Hopp said last night that an effort would be made to make the theatre permanent.

A TRIUMPH FOR CAMPANINIS.

Ovation for Conductor and His Wife on Her Return—Hammerstein Kissed.

The "Cleofonte Campanini night," of which Mr. Hammerstein is evidently intending to make an annual feature, brought its usual quota of excitement to the Manhattan Opera House last evening. Incidentally, Oscar Hammerstein was kissed. After the second act of "Andrea Chenier," the conductor and his wife, who made her return to the stage in this opera, were called out many times, while the audience applauded wildly.

Finally, when the curtain rose, a table was disclosed, and on this table reposed countless gifts—clocks, vases, field glasses, every thing that one finds on a Christmas tree. These were presents from various members of the company to the popular conductor.

Jacques Coini, the stage director of the Manhattan, made the presentation speech, but he was so much excited and spoke in so low a tone, and the audience was so much excited and made so much noise, that not much of what he said was caught.

However, the words "popular with artists and public" floated through the auditorium. Then one of the men of the orchestra passed an enormous wreath over the fotlights and the pages on the stage rolled in several more, like so many hoops. It was quite overwhelming to the maestro, and amused and excited the audience to another pitch of the brand of enthusiasm which is met with only in this opera house.

Finally Mr. Hammerstein was discovered by some one and dragged out, and he stood in the centre of the stage with Mr. Campanini for a full half minute, while the crowd shrieked its delight. When there was a moment's lull, he said:

"The greatest conductor in the world. I know it as well as any one else."

At this the Maestro Campanini, quite overcome, seized his impresario and kissed him on either cheek, and the curtain went down while they were enfolded in each other's arms.

Mme. Campanini's turn came after the third act, when, after several recalls, the chorus marched in, each with a basket or bouquet of flowers, and these they banked around the soprano, while the audience continued to cheer. This time the Maestro kissed his wife.

FREAKS BACK TO THE CIRCUS.

It Just Can't Do Without Them, After Leaving New York.

The freaks are to rejoin the circus after all. They, however, are not to be seen in New York, either because the circus has begun to outgrow the quarters at the Madison Square Garden or because New Yorkers are too hardened to freaks to be astonished by any the circus has. The management when interviewed last night said it would be best to leave that an open question.

Cheap Railroad Fare for Actors.

The Seaboard Air Line and the Southern Railway have both announced their intention of charging a rate of 2 cents per mile per capita for parties of ten or more. The decision will be of benefit to theatrical companies.

New "Merry Widow" Scores Success.

Lina Abarbanell made her first appearance as Sonia in the New York production of "The Merry Widow" at the New Amsterdam Theatre last night. Though her appearance contrasts strongly with that of the actresses already seen here in the part, she scored an undeniable success. She and Donald Brian also introduced some innovations into the pantomime of the famous waltz.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

James C. Williamson, the Australian theatrical manager, has acquired all Australian rights to Belasco's "Girl of the Golden West."

Mrs. Hardin Burnley will give a dramatic recital at the Hotel Plaza on Monday evening, April 2, assisted by Raphael Cisn, violinist.

Henry W. Savage has completed the cast for the London production of "The College Widow" at the Adelphi Theatre, on April 20, and Mr. Ade is planning to go to London for the premiere.

Beatrice Morgan will hold a reception on the stage of the Harlem Opera House after the matinee to-day.

Joe Weber's burlesque of "The Merry Widow" will have its one hundredth performance on Monday night.

Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt's Mother Will Return from Abroad.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., March 27.—Arrangements are under way at Harborview, the Summer residence of Mrs. F. O. French, the mother of Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, to open the estate immediately.

Mrs. French, who has been abroad for the past two years, is expected home soon to arrange final details for the wedding reception and breakfast of her granddaughter, Miss Pauline Leroy French, and Samuel Wagstaff, which has been set for May 5.

Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt will be here for that occasion, and may accompany her mother from New York upon her return from Europe.

Alfred Vanderbilt was expected at Oakland Farm to-day from New York, but he did not arrive.

CARNIVAL BY THE ARTS CLUB.

Oriental Entertainment in Costume—Arabian Nights Tales in Pantomime.

An Oriental carnival will be held this evening in the galleries of the National Arts Club, 15 Gramercy Park, by the Arts Club. There will be dancing, and the 250 guests are to wear a variety of Eastern costumes, and the amusements are to be those described in the Arabian Nights, so far as possible.

There will be a Prince Schah-riar and a Princess Shehere-zade, who will give the plots of Arabian stories, and immediately after each a group of guests, illustrating the action of the story, will pass in pantomime. There are to be eight of these groups, and in them will be singing, dancing, and juggling.

The club rooms are to be beautifully decorated. At one end there is to be a Buddhist Temple in which incense will be burned, and at the other a bazaar and street scene.

There is to be also dancing by Nautch girls, and Oriental dances by Mrs. Lou Mae Moore and Bonnie Maud.

WEDDING PLANS.

F. H. Linington and Miss Alva G. Shepherd Choose Their Attendants.

Plans have been completed for the wedding of Frederick Howe Linington, son of Mrs. R. A. Linington of Port Washington, L. I., and Miss Alva G. Shepherd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Shepherd of 322 West Twenty-second Street. They will be married in Trinity Chapel at 8 o'clock in the evening of Easter Monday, April 20. The Rev. Dr. Ritchie of Trinity will officiate.

Mrs. Henry L. Delano of Montclair, N. J., a cousin of the bride, will be the matron of honor, and Miss Marjorie Greenfield of Cedarhurst, L. I., another cousin, will be the only bridesmaid.

W. W. Lockwood will be best man, and the ushers chosen are E. H. Lockwood and Beeckman Delatour.

Only immediate members of the families will be invited to the reception, which will be held in the Holland House.

The Panama liner Finance made port yesterday from the Canal Zone. She had on board Col. J. H. Willard of the United States Marine Corps, retired; the Rev H. B. Bryan, Archdeacon of Garden City, L. I.; Mrs. Slifer, wife of the manager of the Panama Railroad at Panama, and twenty American workmen home on furlough.

PLANS OF THE SZECHENYIS.

Countess Will Be Introduced to Magyar Society in May.

VIENNA, March 27.—Count Laszlo Széchényi has written to his friends in Hungary, from Palermo, where he and the Countess are now staying, that he will not arrive in Hungary before May.

The Countess will be introduced officially in aristocratic Magyar circles after the May season. The Count and the Countess will then proceed to the Széchényi Castle at Vermeyoe, in the Zemplin district.

Society Notes.

Mrs. Cornelia Van Rensselaer Erving Pruyn and Hamilton Louis Hoppin were among those who secured marriage licenses yesterday at the City Hall. Their wedding will take place on April 6 in St. Thomas's Church.

Miss Edith Smalley is visiting Mrs. Everett Colby at Oldstead Lodge, Llewelyn Park, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay will close their town house about the middle of April and go to Harbor Hill.

Mrs. Dandridge Spotswood, who is in Europe, will visit relatives in Germany before returning in August, when they will go to Narragansett Pier.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Snow of Tuxedo Park are at the Gotham.

A. H. Sabin, Miss Harriet Sabin, and Miss Ruth M. Sabin of Williamstown, Mass., who arrived in town yesterday, are at the Buckingham.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Dick of Chicago, who arrived at the St. Regis yesterday from Pass Christian, Miss., will leave to-day for Boston, where they will spend Sunday.

The tenth anniversary concert and ball of the Hungarian Relief Society will be held to-night at the Waldorf-Astoria. Baroness Hengelmuller, the Countess Laszlo Széchényi, and Mrs. A. G. Gerster are among the patronesses.

Mrs. Mackay did not occupy her box at the Metropolitan Opera House last night owing to the death of her aunt, Mrs. Duer. Mr. Mackay's guests were the Duchess of Marlborough, Miss Marjorie Gould, Mrs. Charles Carroll, W. E. Fitzgerald, and District Attorney William Travers Jerome.

F. Louis Soldan Dead.

ST. LOUIS, March 27.—F. Louis Soldan, Ph. D., for twelve years Superintendent of Public Schools of St. Louis, died suddenly this afternoon on the street here. Apoplexy or heart disease is supposed to have caused his death. Mr. Soldan was born in Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, in 1842. After studying languages in Berlin he came to America and located in St. Louis in 1863. In 1896 he was selected by the School Board as Superintendent of the St. Louis schools.

EXTRA CONCERT BY THE PHILHARMONIC

A Programme Made Up of Works by Tschaikowsky the Offering.

MME. CARRENO THE SOLOIST

A Notable Performance of the Concerto Awoke Enthusiasm—Concert Is to be Repeated To-night.

In accordance with a recent custom of the Philharmonic Society, a pair of extra concerts is given this season outside of the subscription, the first of which took place yesterday afternoon and the second, with the same programme, will take place this evening. When these extra concerts were begun, in the period when foreign conductors were invited to direct the society's concerts, the object was to give opportunity for the exploitation of their powers in music which they were supposed to interpret with especial authority. Such was the object in projecting these extra concerts for Mr. Safonoff; and as he is supposed to exercise such authority in Tschaikowsky's music, the programme was made up entirely of his works, which have long been familiar to this public and deeply admired.

It comprised the fantasy overture "Romeo and Juliet," the first piano concerto in B flat minor, played by Mme. Teresa Carreño, and the Sixth Symphony. Mr. Safonoff's ideas of this music are well known, and he has made some of his greatest popular successes in the performance of the symphony. The best playing was done in the "Romeo and Juliet" overture, in which not only the outlines were drawn with a bold and resolute hand, but also much of the finer detail was represented, and the effect was of dramatic power and poetic suggestiveness. Unfortunately, the orchestra played not a little out of tune, to the serious detriment of an otherwise excellent reading. In the symphony, Mr. Safonoff sought all the emphasis, all the contrast of color and dynamics, that the letter of the score would allow. Nothing louder than his fortissimos can possibly be imagined, nothing softer than his pianissimos; and on the closing chord he dragged the sound out into nothingness for some little time after the audience had ceased to hear anything at all. Unfortunately, the finish of the finer effects in this performance was not all that it might have been. But it was found very impressive, and roused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

Mme. Carreño is at her best in Tschaikowsky's concerto, which she had already played once here this season. She seemed yesterday to put into it more than ever her Amazonian power, her fire and tempestuous energy, her smoldering passion. It was a notable performance, and the audience would not be content till it had recalled her time after time.

The Sunday Times' Pictorial Section.

¶ The leader in the motor car race from Times Square to Paris has accomplished the first stage of its journey and is now on its way to Alaska. Before reaching San Francisco, in the latter days of its journey, the car had many interesting experiences. These will be shown in the Pictorial Section of the Sunday Times in a series of photographs that will give a good idea of what these plucky sportsmen are going through.

¶ Residents of New York City have little or no knowledge of what the interior of the splendid new library building at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street is to be like. A page in the Pictorial Section of the Sunday Times will show the present condition, the progress of the work and much of the beautiful detail of the interior.

¶ Another page in the Pictorial Section—and one of uncommon attractiveness—will present a large picture of Miss Katherine Elkins, in whom there is an international interest at present, and the same page will carry perfect reproductions of photographs of several young women who are prominent in the social life of New York City. There will also be the always enjoyable page of photographs of well-known young women who are identified with stage affairs, and the subjects this week combine to form an unusually interesting page.

¶ For the lovers of art there will be included in the Pictorial Section several examples of the paintings shown in the exhibition of the "Ten American Painters," now being given in this city. These canvases possess a general as well as an artistic interest, and they will be reproduced in a perfect manner.

¶ The new buildings which are to aid in making the United States Naval Academy all that it should be will be shown on another page, and accompanying these photographs will be views showing the interior of the Japanese Embassy at Washington. There will be other pictures in the Sunday Times well calculated to entertain.

BANKS GAIN CASH ON WEEK

Supplies from Interior More Than Offset Government Withdrawals—Loan Question.

After a morning session in which prices did little more than hold the ground gained by them in the late afternoon of the previous day, yesterday's stock market turned strong, and upon an enlarged volume of buying rose steadily to the close of the day, when quotations touched their highest points. There was very little in the day's news to account for this further rise, where the speculative element, at least, had been looking for a rather sharp reaction, but the short selling based upon the reaction theory has been heavy and provides in itself a partial explanation of the continued rise. The manipulative appearance which the trading has borne for a number of days was less striking, although it could hardly be said that outside buying made up any great part of the day's business. Unconfirmed reports regarding the use to which the money to be obtained by the Union Pacific through its forthcoming bond issue was to be put had something to do with the advance in that stock, and the strength of the copper and smelting shares, which was a feature of the late dealing, preceded or set afloat the familiar stories concerning schemes for the combination of these two properties under one management. Copper metal prices rose again. For the first time in a number of days Washington failed to provide its usual budget of developments. Some interest was manifested, however, in the progress of the Aldrich bill, which appeared certain of acceptance by the Senate after the close of Wall Street's business day.

While the local banks early in the week suffered a heavy drain in the shape of the withdrawals of United States deposits, it being estimated that no less than $6,000,000 had been paid to the Sub-Treasury on this account, preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week as compiled yesterday foreshadowed a cash gain by these institutions. The money to offset the Government withdrawals has come from the interior, which is shipping funds this way with relative freedom upon the eve of the usual crop planting demands. As for to-day's bank statement the loan item will determine its character, and it will be recalled that where the average statement of condition on Saturday last disclosed a small increase in this item, the actual figures of condition at the week's end revealed a reduction of over $3,000,000 in the loan account. In other words, the statement was made up upon a falling average in this respect, and this will presumably have some effect upon to-day's return.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

COPPERS GO UP AND DOWN

Recent Leaders of Curb Activity Fall Off in Volume of Trading—Lawson Gold Shares Sell in Advance.

Curb stocks, after a promising opening yesterday, fell off under selling pressure by professional traders who apparently were of the opinion that the reaction from the recent rise was overdue. The failure of the market to respond readily to the bear operations brought about a recovery late in the day which made prices rule strong under active trading at the close. The price changes as a result of the day's operations were inconsiderable, and at the close many of the active issues were at the opening levels. The copper shares which were the market leaders earlier in the week were much less active yesterday. The interest of the brokers was concentrated on the possibilities to come out of the new Lawson campaign, and trading was active in the Yukon Gold stock, which the Boston advertiser is to sell to-day. Ten thousand shares were sold between 8¼ and 7½, much of the trading being in odd lots at 7¾, which was the closing price.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28. — The most prominent feature of the local market to-day was the heavy trading in the Tonopah stocks, the two issues contributing over 17,000 shares. Tonopah Mining was very strong, advancing 1½ points, closing practically at the top. Reading and United States Steel were less active. Lehigh Navigation was lower. The close was steady to firm.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Still the Market Advances.

Before the market opened yesterday morning the woods were full of bears, but it was a question whether they had not changed their habitat and their market attitude before the close. Throughout the greater part of the session the market simply displayed an underlying strength, but in the last hour a few stocks were taken in hand and marked up in such a fashion as to bring something akin to fear to the minds of those who have been expecting a big recession. It was all very well for the average trader who was short of stocks or was not in the market to say that it was manipulation; that the market was artificial; that it was entirely contrary to conditions, and all that, but while it lasted there was little solace in the figures and not very much in theorizing. It is curious that brokers, as a rule, advise extreme conservatism on the part of their customers, and many professionals absolutely refuse to make extended commitments on the long side. Nevertheless, the market advances, an object lesson of something. Just what the object lesson is it is difficult to determine, but some influence is back of the upward movement, and the result is obvious.

Arguments of the Other Fellow.

Those who would demonstrate that the stock market is artificial have two or three things to point to as logical reasons for the faith that is in them. First of all, there is the general condition of business. They are primed with statistics to show that there is really no material improvement in business; that there is not likely to be any for some time to come, and that the advance in the market is entirely contrary to fundamental conditions existing in the business world. Without doubt, it is easy enough to find figures to sustain this theory, but at the same time the average professional, if he be in sympathy with the movement, will pooh-pooh figures and snap his fingers at facts. The political situation is another reason offered, and the uncertainties of the election are pointed to as completely offsetting any new conciliation on the part of the Administration toward business interests. These are just samples of the arguments that are offered, but the market moves along more or less, irrespective of gossip, argument, logic, and everything but the propelling power of the manipulative machinery.

Amalgamated a Feature.

Amalgamated Copper was a conspicuous feature of the market yesterday, and one of the influences credited with the general stimulation in other stocks. All sorts of talk concerning the possibilities of Copper were heard. So far as dividend declarations on Amalgamated Copper and its allied stocks are concerned, the general talk was that there would be, at least, no reduction. No reduction is expected in Amalgamated Copper, and it is specifically stated that the Anaconda dividend will be the same as at the last declaration. The metal quotations were sufficiently firm to emphasize the talk of improved conditions, and the gossip had to do with all sorts of improvements. Naturally, there is always a budget of gossip when a market movement is on in any particular stock, and at the moment the Amalgamated Copper enthusiasts are giving themselves plenty of scope in promulgating information. This is not unusual, nor could it be said positively that some of the statements made are not accurate, but even the friends of the stocks concerned smilingly admit that some of the enthusiasm has a basis only in the imaginative. This applies, of course, only to the character of some of the gossip.

Evils of Overconservatism.

"So far as I am concerned, I have made up my mind that it is a waste of words to preach conservatism in a bull market, no matter whether it is obviously manipulated, based on sound fundamental factors or anything else." That is the way one broker expressed himself yesterday, after he had been reproached by one of his customers who was desirous, a few days ago, of purchasing a block of one of the stocks on the board which was active and strong in yesterday's market. "I told him just what I believed myself," he continued, "and he heartily agreed with me; but now that my position has been proved to be overconservative, he comes back and reproaches me for giving him bad information. Usually a broker who is carefully watching his customers' interests will lean to the conservative side, but I doubt whether he gets into more trouble by being radical than by being too conservative. However, it is more or less of a habit with me, and I suppose I shall stick to it, irrespective of the trouble it occasionally brings me."

Many Factors Ignored.

Very little attention was paid to the ordinary developments of the day, and even the much advertised Lawson propaganda on the Curb did not excite any great amount of attention in the average brokerage office. Undoubtedly, the stock had its own following and provided interest for many, but as a general market factor or as an influence among traders in the stock market there was little to be said. Those who sought an explanation of the advance in the market and were not in sympathy with it said that the fine Spring weather had to be considered as much as anything. If that should prove to be the case the gossip dispensers in the financial district would undoubtedly become weather prophets. The gain in cash by the banks, as indicated by the preliminary estimates, was ignored, being regarded as a small favorable influence in a situation in which the influences already were sufficiently favorable. Railroad earnings are not referred to except by the opposition element, and, consequently, until the market turns and shows a tendency to recede they will not be accepted as potent factors.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Reports that the drougth in Kansas and Oklahoma had been broken reduced prices yesterday, the market closing heavy. Much of the time it was very dull, reflecting hesitation among all classes of operators, owing to the conflicting advices as to crop conditions. Early dispatches from the Spring wheat sections said conditions were the most favorable in several years; later reports were of a blizzard raging in South Dakota. Export business consisted of about 8 loads, all at outports. The seaboard clearances of wheat and flour footed up 261,000 bushels. Except for Budapest, which closed 1¼@1⅜c net lower, foreign markets showed little change. Cash wheat in New York closed as follows: No. 2 red, $1.01, elevator, and $1.02, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.14, and No. 2 hard, Winter, $1.12, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The market was a narrow affair all day. Clearances were a little larger at 312,000 bushels, and interior receipts aggregated 500,000 bushels. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted 75½c, elevator, and 69c, free on board, afloat; other grades nominal.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Weak and Irregular—Closes Net Unchanged to 13 Points Down.

Cotton was nervous and irregular yesterday, with prices generally lower, notwithstanding encouraging reports from Southern spot markets. The close was at a net decline of 5@13 points on old-crop months; new-crop months net unchanged. Sales for the day were estimated at 200,000 bales. Receipts continued light, and exports for the day were larger.

Supt. King's weekly total crop movement figures follow: Port receipts 7,342,308 bales, against 9,004,593 last year; overland to mills and Canada 575,478, against 1,006,821 last year; Southern mill takings 1,596,000, against 1,715,000 last year; stock at interior towns in excess of Sept. 1 367,885, against 358,541 last year; brought into sight thus far for season 9,881,171, against 12,084,955 last year.

The total crop movement is for 209 days this season, against 210 last season.

| | High. | Low. | Close. | Thurs. Close. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| May | 9.44 | 9.35 | 9.40@9.41 | 9.51 |

The local market for spot cotton was quiet, with prices 10 points lower at 10.40 for middling upland and 10.65 for middling Gulf. Sales, 4,000 bales, delivered by contract.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee was less active yesterday, and after opening unchanged to 5 points higher showed very little change, the close being steady net unchanged to 5 points higher, while sales were reported of only 8,500 bags.

European and Brazilian markets were unchanged, and the movement showed no fresh feature, while there was no news bearing upon the new crop outlook.

Spot coffee was unchanged; 6c for Rio No. 7. The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 27.—The local market was much firmer to-day, particularly the transactions in bonds. Western Maryland first 4s advanced 1¾ on the strength of the court's order for the payment of the April interest. Seaboard Air Line 4s were up ¼, and the common stocks ⅝. Union Railways issues were all fractionally higher. Houston Oil common lost ⅝. The close was firmer, but dull. Shares, 393; bonds, $51,000.

Two-Cent Rate by Southern Railway.

The Southern Railway, it was announced yesterday, has decided to issue party tickets at the flat rate of 2 cents a mile for parties of ten or more persons. Similar rates have been put into effect by other Southern lines.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

John Borg, formerly with the Stock Exchange house of Williamson & Squire, will go into the curb business on his own account next Monday, with offices at 42 Broadway.

Officials of the Tennessee Copper Company have been advised that their stock will be listed on the London Exchange on Monday. Arrangements have been made for a special settlement day in sixty days.

The members of the New York Cotton Exchange voted yesterday to close the Exchange on Good Friday and the Saturday following. Good Friday and Easter Monday are holidays in the London market.

At the annual meeting of the American Ice Securities Company William A. Tucker and Louis G. Boissevain were elected Directors, succeeding Isaac Guggenheim and Charles M. Schwab. Other Directors were re-elected, as were the officers.

Representatives and correspondents of the banking house of Spencer Trask & Co, making up a party of about thirty-five, will leave town on Sunday morning to visit Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, and Milwaukee, to look over properties in which the firm is interested. They will familiarize themselves particularly with the properties of the Detroit Edison Company, the Milwaukee Electric Railway & Light Company, the Milwaukee Light, Heat & Traction Company, and the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Happenings of a Day in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, March 27.—Money was in moderate supply in the market to-day, but the demand was brisk. Discounts were firm.

With the satisfactory completion of the settlement the Stock Exchange wore a cheerful aspect, and the prospects of cheaper money, coupled with the expectation of modification in the proposed Government measures, induced speculation as well as investment buying. Consols rallied well, and home rails ruled quite buoyant. American securities started easy. The proposed Union Pacific bond issue had a depressing effect, but the market soon rallied, and with bear covering and continued buying the early losses disappeared. New York alternately sold and bought. In the afternoon the market fluctuated irregularly, but became strong with late trade and closed firm. Canadian Pacific was a feature and sold at 155¾.

Money, 2¾@3 per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2¾@2⅞ per cent.; for three months' bills 2¾ per cent.

PARIS, March 27.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 10c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 13½c for checks.

BERLIN, March 27.—Prices on the Boerse to-day generally were steady, but trading was inactive. American securities showed a downward tendency on the advices from New York.

Discount rates—Short bills, 4¼ per cent.; three months' bills, 4⅝ per cent.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Although the leading commercial weeklies agree that the first week of Spring has seen an expansion of business, their correspondents report that conservative buying keeps trade below normal.

Bradstreet's says:

The first week of Spring has seen an expansion in retail trade and an enlargement of operations in building lines, especially at the West. Conservative estimates of actual needs govern buying, and replacement of broken stocks is the chief source of jobbing and wholesale demand. Trade in the primary branches is therefore quiet, and operations in industrial lines below normal. Fall trade is backward. Weather conditoins have favored crop preparation.

Industrial conditions are still very irregular, and short or reduced time is practically universal. The textile trades are still depressed, with short time and wage reductions common. Fear of a coal strike has subsided, and buying is less active in this line. Collections show slight improvement, are, on the whole, very backward, and requests for extensions are numerous. The price movement is irregular. Live stock generally is at the highest price of the season at Chicago. Cotton has eased further, but the proportions of the late decline render reaction possible.

Dun's review says:

Retail trade in Spring goods has made further progress, and the conservative buying by dealers in preparing for current distribution, is now providing a good supplementary demand from wholesale and jobbing houses. In the leading industries there is evidence of gradual increase in contracts, many plants preparing for greater activity on April 1, while proposed reductions in wages have produced no threats of strikes. The best news of the week as to manufacturing conditions comes from the leather industry. New business is gradually appearing in all departments, from hides to the finished product. Dispatches from the West and South are most favorable as to the general commercial situation, a few cities reporting the volume of business fully equal to last year's.

NEW YORK, March 26th, 1908.

TO THE PUBLIC:—

Pursuant to an order of the Supreme Court providing for the termination of the temporary receivership, and with the approval and consent of the Superintendent of Banks, the Knickerbocker Trust Company will reopen its main office and all its branches on Thursday, March 26th, 1908, at noon.

The new money paid in by the stockholders and the action of the depositors who assented to the plan for resumption place the Company in a strong position where it may fairly claim the full confidence of its patrons. The following is a summarized statement showing the Company's condition at the opening of business March 26th:

Assets:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cash on hand and in Banks | $14,045,507.82 | |
| Demand Loans | 11,189,670.85 | |
| Time Loans | 14,947,469.49 | |
| Bonds and Mortgages | 2,725,513.78 | |
| Investments | 5,456,663.50 | |
| Real Estate | 2,050,000.00 | |
| Accrued Interest due to the Company | 984,644.04 | |
| | | $51,399,469.48 |

Liabilities:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Capital Stock | $1,200,000.00 | |
| Surplus and Undivided Profits | 13,263,393.31 | |
| Due Depositors | 35,701,516.21 | |
| Reserve for Taxes and Expenses payable | 253,818.44 | |
| Reserve for Receivers and Counsel Fees | 400,000.00 | |
| Accrued Interest due by the Company | 580,741.52 | |
| | | $51,399,469.48 |

In the foregoing statement the Company's assets are in no case carried at a higher valuation than that placed upon them by the Superintendent of Banks after thorough examination, upon which he based his recommendation to the Court that the Company resume business. The amount written off is believed to be more than sufficient to cover all losses of every description.

The following have been selected by Henry C. Frick, Myron T. Herrick and Lewis Cass Ledyard, Voting Trustees, to constitute the new Board of Directors of the Knickerbocker Trust Company:

G. Louis Boissevain,
Franklin Q. Brown,
Dumont Clarke,
Charles F. Hoffman,
Hinsdill Parsons,
Herbert L. Satterlee,
Frederick G. Bourne,
Edward H. Clark,
J. Horace Harding,
Charles H. Keep,
Samuel T. Peters,
William A. Tucker,
Payne Whitney.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company takes this opportunity to thank publicly the assenting depositors for their co-operation and assistance in bringing to a successful issue the plan for resumption of business. It is proper to point out that the interest of every assenting depositor is now identical with that of the Company's stockholders; both have direct pecuniary interest in assisting the future growth and development of the Company.

On and after noon, Thursday, March 26th, 1908, the Knickerbocker Trust Company will be prepared to transact business with all the facilities of a thoroughly organized Trust Company. It asks the confidence and good will of its former depositors, and respectfully solicits new accounts.

KNICKERBOCKER TRUST COMPANY,
CHARLES H. KEEP, President.

Knickerbocker Trust Company

Depositors who assented to the plan for resumption of business are again notified that in order to get their certificates of deposit and Surplus Certificates "Series A," and in order to make checks against their credit balances good, it is a condition precedent that they should send to the Company, by registered mail, the receipt issued to them by the depositary trust company of either of the re-organization committees, or bring such receipt in person. If their deposit is represented by certificate of deposit, the receipt above mentioned should be accompanied by the certificate properly endorsed. In case a depositor never received a receipt, or has lost or destroyed the receipt which he received, he should call in person to execute the papers prescribed by counsel before he can receive his special transferable certificate of deposit and Surplus Certificate "Series A," and draw against his balance.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

ALFREDO FRAGANO. — Alfredo Fragano, jeweler, 107 Mulberry Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,399 and no assets.

SPIES PIANO MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—Judge Holt has appointed Henry P. Butler receiver in bankruptcy for the Spies Piano Manufacturing Company, 3,489 Third Avenue, with a bond of $1,500. The assets are estimated at $2,500.

SEYMOUR J. SCHLOSS.—Seymour J. Schloss, a salesman, 1 West 106th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $1,934, of which $1,225 is an unexpired lease, and no assets. The debts were contracted as a partner in the firm of Schloss & Simmons, belt manufacturers, in 1907.

BURGOYNE HAMILTON.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Burgoyne Hamilton, stock broker, 43 Exchange Place, by these creditors: John H. Tonyes, $1,356; Robert Gomez, $157, and Alex Straus, $1,154 for balance due on stock transactions. It was alleged that he is insolvent and made an assignment on March 19, and is believed to have left the State.

RUBIN GROSS.—Rubin Gross, a shoe dealer at 345 East Houston Street, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Nov. 12 last, has failed to file his schedules. Morris Klein, a creditor, filed a list of four creditors with claims aggregating $720 yesterday, and stated that Mr. Gross cannot be found. The only possible assets in sight are a fine of $375 imposed on Max Schwartz for contempt of court, which may or may not be collected.

ANDREW J. THOMAS.—Andrew J. Thomas, a clerk living at Midland Avenue, Bronxville, formerly a builder, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $27,130 and possible assets of $6,000, surplus money growing out of the foreclosure sale of real estate at 179th Street and Fontaine Avenue, which Mr. Thomas had conveyed to J. Charles Weschler as trustee, for creditors. Mr. Weschler said that some mechanics' lien creditors also claim this surplus money, and the question would have to be fought out in the bankruptcy court. Among the creditors are Thomas Haldane, $3,448; Kertscher & Co., $3,198; B. Bowne & Son Company, $2,284, and Charles Schneider, $1,675.

LOUIS A. MOSSLER.—Judge Holt has appointed Philip A. Carroll receiver in bankruptcy for Louis A. Mossler, a whisky dealer, living at 189 West Forty-first Street, and fixed his bond at $500, on application of David B. Brown of Youngstown, Ohio, a creditor for $800. Mr. Brown stated that on Oct. 9, 1906, he bought five whisky certificates for five barrels of whisky each, in bond at a distillery in Louisville, Ky., for $1,170. He has received only five barrels on one certificate, and has been unable to get any more. The certificates were signed Belle of Maryland Distillery Company by L. A. Mossler, who used this as a trade style.

A. ANZELEWITZ & CO.—A meeting of creditors of A. Anzelewitz & Co., (corporation,) wholesale jewelers, 154 Canal Street, was held yesterday at the Jewelers' Board of Trade. Stroock & Stroock, representing the corporation, made an offer to pay 100 cents on the dollar, with interest, in six, twelve, eighteen, and twenty-four months, the business to be carried on under the supervision of three Directors from the creditors until liquidated. The liabilities are $54,000, and the nominal assets are over $100,000 in merchandise and accounts. The offer was unanimously accepted. Mr. Gleason, of Hastings & Gleason, and Mr. McLoughlin, the receiver, verified the figures on the statement.

Out of Town.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 27.—A schedule in the bankruptcy proceedings in the case of Otis S. Neal and Company, bottlers, was filed this afternoon, showing liabilities, $53,605.60; assets, $81,428.82; unsecured claims, $47,937.20; secured, $5,000.

BOSTON, March 27.—Creditors' petitions in bankruptcy were filed against two concerns of which George L. Richards, now abroad, was the promoter. They are the Richards Publishing Company and the Agnew Auto Mailing Machine Company, both of which went into receivers' hands in January.

In the case of the Richards Publishing Company the petitioner is W. F. Ulman of Brookline, who alleges that the company at various times transferred sums of money to George L. Richards with intent to hinder, delay, and defraud.

Six creditors appeared on the petition against the Agnew Mailing Machine Company.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

SUPREME COURT—Ninth Judicial District—Westchester County.—In the matter of the application of The City of New York to acquire certain lands at Mount Kisco, Westchester County, under the charter of New York City, and Chapter 428 of the Laws of 1907.

Public notice is hereby given that it is the intention of The City of New York, through its Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, to acquire certain real estate at Mount Kisco, Westchester County, New York, for the purpose of maintaining, preserving, and protecting from pollution the water supply of The City of New York, and for the purpose of enabling The City of New York, by its Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, to acquire such real estate in and about the Village of Mount Kisco as may be necessary in order to carry into effect any agreed plan for the caring for the sewage of the Village of Mount Kisco, and to protect the Water Supply of The City of New York, pursuant to Chapter 428 of the Laws of 1907.

Further notice is given that a map of lands proposed to be taken for the above-mentioned purpose has been prepared by the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, and has been approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York. A copy of the map so prepared, with the certificate of the adoption thereof, signed by the Mayor of The City of New York and the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, has been filed in the office of said Commissioner, and is open to public inspection at his office, No. 13-21 Park Row, in The City of New York. A copy is also on file in the office of the Village Clerk of the Village of Mount Kisco.

Further notice is given that prior to the final adoption of such map a public hearing will be given by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York, in order to afford all persons interested a full opportunity to be heard respecting such map and the acquisition of the real estate shown thereon. Such public hearing will be held at Room No. 16 in the City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 10th day of April, 1908, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated March 11, 1908.
BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, By JOSEPH HAAG,
Secretary.

The City of New York, Department of Taxes and Assessments, Main Office, Borough of Manhattan, Hall of Records, January 10, 1908.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, as required by the Greater New York Charter, that the books called "The Annual Record of the Assessed Valuation of Real and Personal Estate of the Boroughs of Manhattan, The Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond," comprising The City of New York, will be open for public inspection, examination and correction on the second Monday of January, and will remain open up to and including the 31st day of March, 1908.

During the time that the books are open for public inspection, application may be made by any person or corporation claiming to be aggrieved by the assessed valuation of real or personal estate to have the same corrected.

In the Borough of Manhattan, at the main office of the Department of Taxes and Assessments, Hall of Records, No. 31 Chambers street.

Corporations in all the boroughs must make application only at the main office in the Borough of Manhattan.

Applications in relation to the assessed valuation of personal estate must be made by the person assessed at the office of the Department in the borough where such person resides, and in the case of a non-resident carrying on business in The City of New York at the office of the Department of the borough where such place of business is located, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 2 P. M., except on Saturday, when all applications must be made between 10 A. M. and 12 noon.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The weather continues cold in the North and warm in the South. There has been snow in the upper and thunder showers in the lower lake region.

A barometric depression, central to-night in Iowa, will move northeastward during the next twenty-four hours, causing rain and snow.

Temperatures will continue abnormally high in the middle and south Atlantic States during Saturday, but a fall is indicated for Sunday night or Monday.

Fair weather is probable Sunday generally east of the Rocky Mountains.

Steamships departing Saturday for European ports will have fresh and variable winds, mostly southeast, and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SUNDAY:

Eastern New York.—Rain Saturday; Sunday partly cloudy and colder, increasing east to south winds.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.—Rain Saturday; Sunday partly cloudy and colder, fresh south winds.

New England.—Rain Saturday; Sunday probably fair, increasing east winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as folows:

| | 1907. | 1908. | | 1907. | 1908. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 3 A. M. | 42 | 58 | 4 P. M. | 56 | 67 |
| 6 A. M. | 44 | 57 | 6 P. M. | 51 | 67 |
| 9 A. M. | 46 | 57 | 9 P. M. | 47 | 62 |
| 12 M. | 56 | 67 | 12 P. M. | 46 | 50 |

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature ysterday was 66; for the corresponding date last year it was 50; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 41.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 56; at 8 P. M. it was 63. Maximum temperature, 75 degrees at 2:30 P. M.; minimum, 56 degrees at 8 A. M. Humidity, 82 per cent. at 8 A. M. and 69 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The sellers acquired the property two years ago from James Bailey and made extensive alterations to the houses. The corner is opposite the church of the Paulist Fathers.

Lease in Hudson Terminal.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased for the Hudson Companies a large part of the eighteenth floor of the Cortlandt Building to the Barber Asphalt Paving Company.

The Ruland & Whiting Company has rented for A. A. & Frank Healy the building 7 Ferry Street to John Finnigan & Co.; the store at 84 Nassau Street for D. J. Lalor to R. Wehman; the third and fourth lofts at 41 and 43 Warren Street for the Taylor estate to G. S. Dayton & Co.; the third loft at 33 Spruce Street to the North American Leather Company, and the store and basement at 86 Fulton Street for Daniel E. Seybel to Landsberg Brothers.

Denzer Brothers have leased for a term of years for August Oppenheimer the second loft at 91 and 93 Fifth Avenue, to Hyman Bauman; also, for the Marks estate the store, basement, and two lofts at 26 West Houston Street; also, for M. L. & C. Ernst 5,000 square feet in 11 West Twentieth Street, and for the estate of Jacob Kamholz, the store at 43 West Twenty-first Street.

West 50th Street Purchase.

Upper Fifth Avenue Flats Sold.

H. Reinheimer has sold for Albert Freund to Louis Holzwasser 1,359 and 1,361 Fifth Avenue, between 113th and 114th Streets, two five-story double flats on plot 50 by 100.

Thomas L. Reynolds has sold for Philip Rosenberg to Julia Brown the six-story tenement 108 and 110 West 138th Street, on plot 50 by 100.

Sale of Chrystie Street Tenement.

Philip & Harry Bachrach have bought 168 and 170 Chrystie Street, two five-story tenements, with stores, on plot 49.9 by 82.

Bronx Properties Change Hands.

Smith & Phelps have sold the vacant plot on the north side of Eighth Street, beginning 355 feet east of Avenue C, and running through to the south side of Tremont Avenue. Smith & Phelps report that they were the sole brokers in the sale of the plot at 149th Street, Prospect Avenue, and Southern Boulevard to William Ebling.

A. Troeller has sold for Minnie Kieger to Lawrence Kreappel the four-family frame house 315 East 153d Street.

Deal for Brooklyn Dwelling.

The Lewis H. May Company has leased for Henry C. Friedman 5 and 7 South Summerfield Avenue, Arverne, L. I., to Minnie Cohn, for a term of years. The premises will be used as a hotel.

Developers Buy in New Jersey.

S. Lowenthal has bought, for improvement, a tract of twenty lots at Keyport, N. J.

Company Buys Long Island Tract.

The largest and most important sale of the year in Queens Borough has just been consummated by the McKnight Realty Company in the purchase of the Moore tract of fifty acres at Elmhurst. The Elmhurst South Realty Company, subsidiary to the McKnight concern, has taken title to the property.

This, the latest development of the McKnight Realty Company, is reached by three trolley lines from Brooklyn, two of which connect with the elevated and operate over the Brooklyn and Williamsburg Bridges. There is one trolley to Long Island City at the present time, which will connect with the Blackwell's Island Bridge and the Belmont tunnel. Two branches of the Long Island Railroad stop within three minutes' walk of Elmhurst South. Extensive improvements are to be made on the property at once, and plans have been completed for the erection of a large number of brick houses. An interesting point in connection with the property is that the title was held in the Moore family for ninety-two years.

Bastress, Vought & Co. report the following sale of lots at Liberty Heights, adjoining Woodhaven, L. I.: Two lots on the west side of Gherardi Avenue, between Sutter and Dalrymple Avenue, to Ann Haggen; two lots at the northeast corner of Dalrymple and Woodhaven Avenues, to William Budd; two lots at the southeast corner of Liberty and Bigelow Avenues, to Gustave F. Meyers; three lots on the east side of Canal Avenue, between Sutter and Dalrymple Avenues, to Samuel Deverox, and four lots on the west side of Woohaven Avenue, between Sutter and Dalrymple Avenues, to Muriel Brubaker.

A Period of Sober Reflection

The Lawyers Mortgage Company is the only Mortgage Company that limits its mortgages to those on improved income-producing business or residence property within the limits of New York City. It rejects the extra risk involved in lending on vacant land and on special utilizations, such as theatres, churches, factories, etc.

It is the only Mortgage Company which limits it profits to one-half per cent. per annum. In Europe such limitation is required by law, and removes the temptation to accept doubtful loans in order to make greater profits.

MOB DECREES DEATH TO MISSING BANKER

Pati's Victims Proclaim Publicly That He Will Be Killed if He Returns.

NOT A CENT IN THE BANK

Receiver Opens Safe While Ugly Crowd of Depositors Surges Against the Doors.

The big iron safe in Pasquale Pati & Sons' banking house, at 240 Elizabeth Street, was opened yesterday by the receiver, Achille Starace, while a crowd of several hundred Italians in the street pressed as closely as they could to the barred windows and peered inside.

Not a cent was in the safe. Nor was a cent found anywhere in the banking house. All the money had been carried away by Pati when he fled with his family in the dead of night, leaving a notice on the doors of his bank, saying he was afraid of being assassinated by Black Hand agents if he remained in town.

Not a negotiable paper was in the safe. All that was found by the receiver was a little pile of cash books, ledgers, and journals, and in some of these the entries seemed to have been partly erased and altered. When this became known to the crowd outside a howl went up. One voice rose loud above the rest.

"If Pati ever comes back he will get what he deserves—death!" shouted the owner of the voice, and the sentiment was taken up by a hundred men and women who had money deposited with Pati.

"All that talk of Black Hand threats was rubbish," continued the man with the big voice. "It was only an excuse to get away with our money. He has robbed us of our savings, and we want revenge. Shall we have it?" he yelled.

"We will!" cried the mob in the street.

"We will!" echoed up and down the block, and then the crowd again surged toward the doors of the banking house and had to be fought back by a squad of policemen.

At least $150,000 in unpaid deposits is represented on the books examined yesterday by the receiver. He also learned that two-thirds of the total deposits had been paid out, and that a large part of the remainder was tied up in real estate. About 2,000 depositors in the Pati banking house, most of them Italians in New York City, Staten Island, Long Island, and near-by New Jersey points, are losers by the banker's disappearance. The other depositors, numbering about 5,000, had succeeded in withdrawing their funds before the banker fled and the closing of the banking house.

Receiver Starace, who was appointed by Judge Holt, said yesterday that the police might be appealed to to bring Pati and his two sons, Salvadore and Albert, back to New York. A charge of grand larceny and misappropriation of funds will, in all probability, be lodged against Pati to-day.

Miss Anna Christensen, who was in charge of the Post Office sub-station in Pati's bank, said her accounts showed that Pati owed the Government a little less than $200.

Check Swindler Guilty.

Leopold B. Untermeyer of 14 Fountain Avenue, Brooklyn, was convicted yesterday in Special Sessions of passing bogus checks. He would telephone to a liquor store asking the proprietor to send a bottle of whisky and change for $5 to his address. When the bearer of the whisky arrived Untermyer would give him a bad check and take the change.

CITY BREVITIES.

Members of the New York Legislature have been invited to inspect the congestion exhibit this afternoon under the guidance of a special committee, and a meeting will be held at which W. C. Phillips, Dr. Walter Laidlaw, Ogden H. Hammond, Dr. Luther H. Gulick, H. C. Parsons, A. T. White, Charles Loring Brace, Mrs. Florence Kelley, and Miss Sadie American will speak.

The Charity Organization Society acknowledges an anonymous contribution of $50, which has been credited, as requested, to "Hudson," and which is to be used for the general work of the society.

It has been decided to change the name of the Kruger and Firemen's Memorial Fund to the Firemen's Memorial Fund of Greater New York, as the fund is for a monument to all firemen. The fund reached $28,512.88 yesterday, and after the benefits of the St. Nicholas Rink last night and Brown's Athletic Association to-night, it is expected that it will exceed $30,000.

WOULD OUST BANK RECEIVERS

They Are a Burden to Suspended Institutions, Says Kings Grand Jury.

The March Grand Jury of Kings County in its presentment to County Judge Fawcett yesterday commended the activity and success of District Attorney Clarke and his assistants in ridding the county of the criminal classes. The work of the City Magistrates in Kings was also commended as was the zeal and success of Fire Marshal Beers and his assistant, Deputy Marshal Thomas Brophy.

Referring to the recent bank disturbances, the Grand Jury made this suggestion:

"The suspended financial institutions of this county are a sad blow to the depositors, and to add to the misfortune the receiver steps in—not to add one dollar to the assets, but in some instances to require a microscopic vision to reveal the balance left for distribution by the patriotic receiver after he receives his enormous commission. We would therefore recommend to our Legislature the urgent necessity of relieving such suspended banks from the enormous expense now prevailing."

FIGHT FOR BATTERY BASIN.

Boatmen Object to Federal Government Driving Them Off.

The contemplated $250,000 Government improvement at the Battery, consisting of the erection of a four-story stone building back of the Barge Office, involves the acquisition of the forty-foot boat basin just to the west of the Barge Office bulkhead and used by the Battery boatmen. Initial steps were taken yesterday to fight the encroachment on what the Battery boatmen consider their property.

William Quigley of Brooklyn will lead the fight. There is but little prospect that Congress will appropriate the money for the new improvement this year, and so it is probable that the boatmen will simply strengthen their political connections and await the formal request from the Government to the city for the property.

Want John M. Burke's Sanity Tested.

Application was made yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Hendrick by John B. Stanchfield for the appointment of a commission to inquire into the mental condition of John M. Burke. Mr. Burke, who is 95 years old, is the donater of the $4,000,000 Winifred Masterson Burke Foundation. He has lived the life of a recluse at 18 West Forty-seventh Street.

D. Le Roy Dresser Set Free.

The charge of the larceny of $4,000 brought against Daniel Le Roy Dresser, ex-President of the Trust Company of the Republic, and a brother of Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt, by W. S. Andrews, was dismissed yesterday, as the statute of limitations operated.

THE IMMORTAL.

By ELLEN GLASGOW.

SINCE my soul and I are friends,
I go laughing on my road;
Whether up or down it wends,
I have never felt my load.

For the winds keep tryst with me,
And the stars share in my joy;
Meadow, hill or sky or sea
I create and I destroy.

Hope or fear or bliss or woe
Flits a shadow on the sod;
Life and Death perpetual flow,
Underneath them I am God.

Smaller than the smallest part,
Larger than the moving Whole;
One in the divided heart
And the Universal Soul.

Neither curse nor creed I know,
Doubts that darken, faiths that shine;
Time and space are empty show,
All that ever was is mine.

Silent, deathless, centred fast,
Ancient, uncreated, free,
I came not to birth at last,
Universes are of me.

—In Harper's Magazine for April.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

IN a day when no reputation is so sinister but some one can be found to give it at least a literary rehabilitation, it will be surprising if no gifted author gives the world a new Capt. Kidd, founded on certain papers contained in Volume VIII. of the "Report on the Manuscripts of the Duke of Portland," just published by the British Historical Manuscripts Commission. It is beyond dispute that Kidd was sent out in the ship Adventure mainly at the cost of the Earl of Bellomont, Governor of Massachusetts, and of several members of the home Government; that he returned to Boston of his own free will; that the conduct of his distinguished partners in the Adventure became a political question, and that Kidd was executed in London after a trial which was distinguished for its unfairness. The collection of the Welbeck papers includes two copies of the actual articles of agreement, dated Oct. 10, 1695, between the Earl of Bellomont of the one part, and Robert Levingston and Capt. William Kidd of the other part. This Levingston is described elsewhere as a person of good repute in the colony, who introduced Kidd as a likely man to carry out the special instructions which had been given to Bellomont for the suppression of the buccaneers who were infesting the West Indian Islands. Other parties to the agreement, it appears, included Lord Orford, (First Lord of the Admiralty,) Lord Chancellor Somers, and Lord Romney, (Secretary of State,) all of whom are mentioned in a protest and appeal drawn up by Kidd for presentation on his arrivel as a prisoner in England. This demand for a fair trial, which is preserved among the Welbeck papers, affords interesting reading. The writer gives the distinct impression that the undertaking—on which, he says, he entered much against his will, while he was in the port of London with his own trading vessel—was a pure speculation, backed by the King's commission. He, of course, denies all acts of piracy, complains that on his return Lord Bellomont first approved of what he had done and then seized him, and protests that, as all his papers and "instructions" have been taken from him:

> I must be sacrificed as a pirate to salve the honor of some men who employed me, and who, perhaps, if I had been one, and they could have enjoyed the benefit of it, would not have impeached me on that account.

"Eveleigh Nash's" "Leaves from a Life" is hugely entertaining England. It contains nevertheless stories about some of the best known writers and artists of the last half-century, among them Dickens, Cruikshank, Millais, Leighton, Landseer, Shirley Brooks, and Turner. The author was plainly an impressionable girl; when 9 years old she thought Landseer delightful, and received a mock proposal from him; at 10 she "loved" Philip Calderon; Edmund Yates was the "dearest and truest" of friends. Mrs. Yates was tall and adorable; one day the author caught the present Poet Laureate standing on a chair to stick a rose in Mrs. Yates's hair. Mr. Austin one day called to the servant, "Mary, take away yon dush and bruster." Dion Boucicault was to the young author "without exception the most fascinating man I ever saw." Du Maurier was "one of those charming natures which give out hope, life, and amusement to all who come in contact with them." He sang tenderly, and was near weeping aloud over his own sketches, made for "fun," of a little hero. But the best story in the book is this glimpse of the German Kaiser as a lad:

> Would it be lèse majesté to describe the small, fractious, and very naughty little boy who was generally with the Princess royal, and who is now the German Emperor? Well, if it be, I will take the risk. He was a tiny, pretty, delicate little lad, and he utterly abhorred the Highland dress in which he was clad on the special occasion for which he was brought to England, and I fancy the cold wind stung his small knees; anyhow his conduct was awful. Somehow or other the dirk belonging to his costume was not forthcoming, and he was lent one belonging to his Uncle Leopold. The first part of the ceremony he was pretty quiet. It was discovered afterward that he had spent it in picking out the great cairngorm in the dirk handle and then casting it away, and I do not think it was ever found; then he began to fidget; his mother tried to hold him, and at last handed him over to his two uncles, Leopold and Arthur, whose bare legs he bit, while they bore the pain like stoics. I only hope they smacked him well when they got the little ruffian back to the castle. * * *. His sister, little Princess Charlotte * * * used to suffer a good deal at his hands, and I once gave him a good tap on his naughty little fingers when he was pulling her hair; he looked at me for a minute and said nothing.

Whether it is the merest coincidence or whether it marks a widespread awakening of interest at this particular time in certain phases of religious development, the fact that four of the most important books published to-day deal, in fiction and essay, with the future of the Christian Church is at least noteworthy. Two of these books are novels—(Dodd, Mead & Co.)—Rev. Robert Hugh Benson's "Lord of the World," and Harold Begbie's "The Vigil." The first of these predicts certain revolutionary changes in the Christian Church, culminating in the disappearance of Protestantism and the transference of the Roman See to Jerusalem. "The Vigil" is a study of religious experiences somewhat in the line of the "Robert Elsmere" of twenty years ago, making allowances, of course, for the difference that exists between the theology of that period and this. "The Programme of Modernism" (Putnam) presents the issues, theological and otherwise, that appear to have arisen quite recently between the conservative and radical branches of the Catholic Church, while Dr. Newman Smyth's "Coming Catholicism and Passing Protestantism," (Scribner,) contemplates the ultimate union of the two great divisions of the Christian Church.

So intimately was Richard Mansfield connected with the important movements of the drama in this country during the last three or four decades that an adequate biography of him should be the vehicle for a most interesting chapter on the contemporary American stage. Such a biography, it is to be hoped, will be furnished in the life of the great actor and manager which Paul Wilstach is preparing, and which will be published this Fall by Charles Scribner's Sons. Mr. Wilstach was for ten years intimately associated with Mr. Mansfield in business as well as socially. The forthcoming biography has had the co-operation of Mrs. Mansfield, who has put at the author's disposal all her husband's papers and correspondence. Mr. Wilstach's personal relations with Mr. Mansfield, covering the varied phases of the actor's daily life, should furnish him, also, with a great deal of delightful material of unquestioned value for a biography. The book will be fully and finely illustrated.

Following the announcements of the publication this season of the "Life and Letters" of the historian Bancroft, and then of the philosopher, Herbert Spencer, it is interesting to learn that we at last have a volume of letters by no less a personage than Martin Luther. A hundred years ago Coleridge wrote: "I can scarcely conceive of a more delightful volume than might be made up from Luther's letters, especially those from the Wartburg, if translated in the simple, idiomatic, hearty mother tongue of the original." Strangely enough, however, no collection of Luther's letters has ever been made until now. The present volume, which has just been published by the Macmillan Company, consists of letters selected and translated direct from the Latin and from the Old German by Margaret C. Currie, and reveals, possibly as no other publication has done, the purely human side of the great leader of the Reformation.

The Hans Christian Andersen House at Odense, recently arranged to contain memorials of the great writer, will be opened to the public on the 2d of April, his birthday.

FROM THE FAR EAST.

Two First-Hand Books on Conditions in Asia—Putnam Weale Attacks and Prof. Ladd Defends Japanese Policy.

MAGICAL ADVANCE OF MANCHURIA

New Scenes and New Problems Following the Russo-Japanese War.

THE Far East is plainly the region indicated as the scene for the historic happenings of the near future. The great war which has raged in Manchuria has settled nothing beyond the fact that the forces which will grapple in the struggle for the Asiatic continent will be of appalling magnitude. Events transpiring even from day to day forbid the turning of the attention away from this battleground of civilizations. Interest in affairs of the Far East being thus so keen, general satisfaction will be felt at the appearance of two books* giving, each in its own province, most intimate and valuable information bearing on the vexed situation.

"B. L. Putnam Weale" knows the East better than any Western man who has written of it during this generation. Knows, that is to say, the physical facts concerning it. Whether he understand the spirit of the peoples of whom he writes, whether his interpretations of their actions are accurate, and whether his prognostications are well founded or not, Mr. Weale has seen, has recorded, and is able to tell so many tangible facts regarding Eastern Asia that it is a matter of astonishment how one man can have learned it all.

"The Coming Struggle in Eastern Asia" is the fourth large volume which this writer has issued in little more than four years. He began as an admirer of Japan, and as such wrote his first book. A year later, in "The Reshaping of the Far East," he qualified his approval of Japan by an expression of disappointment with the action of Japan in Korea. In his third volume, "The Truce in the East and Its Aftermath," he confessed general disillusionment regarding the Japanese policy and denounced the Anglo-Japanese alliance. The present volume is almost sensational in its warning against Japanese designs. "The writer is convinced that the economic situation which now prevails in the Far East is sufficiently serious to justify the plainest speaking," he announces in his preface, and the 600 pages which follow are indeed filled with plain speech. It is not necessary to go along with Mr. Weale in his deductions and conclusions. His imagination is rather lively, and his judgment is by no means infallible.

While, therefore, the political conclusions of the volume must be taken account of everywhere, its real value lies in the wealth of information and multiplicity of details which it gives regarding Manchuria. The picture given of this territory, of which there is among us so little information and so egregious misconceptions, is certain to open the eyes of any reader. Who among us has had any proper notion of Harbin, the city at which one arrives in a railroad station which reminds one of the monster at Cologne, with miles and miles of sidings, unending platforms, lofty restaurant furnished with great mirrors and costly marble work; of New Harbin, with its vast and palatial buildings, with its broad streets and great squares, a brilliant metropolis, an industrial centre grinding a thousand millions of pounds of grain a year, standing where eleven years ago stretched the unbroken veldt? No Western American city has ever had anything approaching the magically rapid growth of this centre of the vast Asiatic wheat field. Nor have we considered the fact that Manchuria is becoming one of the world's general granaries. During the latter part of the war practically all the supplies for the troops were drawn from Manchuria. Meat came from China and Mongolia, and the Harbin flour mills ground daily enough for the Russian forces. What is happening in Northwestern Canada is happening in Manchuria. The Chinese are pressing northward and westward; they are conquering the Desert of Gobi, advancing into it ten miles each year; Japanese are everywhere, and Russians are more hopeful and energetic than ever before. While the sphere of each is to a certain extent determined for the present, each is reaching out beyond its formal boundaries, which no one regards as permanent. Mr. Weale's book gives an impression of a land overrun with immigrants. It is clearly the case that the peoples of Asia are in flux; never before were populations so fluid, so ready to respond to opportunity.

*THE COMING STRUGGLE IN EASTERN ASIA. By B. L. Putnam Weale, Author of "The Re-Shaping of the Far East" and "The Truce in the East and Its Aftermath." 8vo. Pp. 656. New York: The Macmillan Company. $3.50.

As for Siberia, we are told that already west of Lake Baikal it is another Europe. No transition is felt when one crosses the Ural Mountains. "The Siberia of the story books has already disappeared, never to return." Siberia, then, must be looked upon simply as an exact Russian equivalent of the old American Far West or the new Canadian Northwest. It contains now fifteen millions of people. The birth rate is extremely high. The most enterprising of Russians are crowding into the new land, not so much over the railroad as by the rivers—the Yenesei, the Ob, the Irtisch—for all agricultural Siberia can be reached by steamer from the sea. In ten years there will be thirty millions of them; by 1930 probably fifty millions.

Already the new land is largely self-contained. Manufactures are rapidly growing. The avowed policy of Russian statesmen seems now to be to step aside and allow natural forces to play out the Asiatic drama. The force by which the Russian people are advancing eastward is counted upon to do the work, the part of the Government being only to strengthen the natural movement. The military and political significance of this is immense. Mr. Weale observes:

> The success of this natural onward march of the Russian people, which seems absolutely assured, will mean that Czarism will no longer have to rely for support, in moments of stress in the Far East, on such distant centres as St. Petersburg, Moscow, and Kieff; Tomsk, Omsk, and Irkutsk will soon, in the ordinary course of events, have taken the places of these European centres, and Siberia—placed on the very flank of Mongolia and Manchuria, and stretching out long feelers down the course of the Amur to the rest of the northeastern mainland of Asia—will be as fully competent to forward its own interests as Canada must be at some moment during the first half of the present century. When that time comes, Russia will in no sense have to rely on two slender ribs of steel six thousand miles long to connect her with her Far Eastern possessions. It will then be merely a question of unloosing the masses of men in the regions west of Lake Baikal, which is but seven hundred miles from the Manchurian frontier, and calling on centres (distant at most only one or two hundred hours by rail from the possible battlefield) to feed and arm those masses, in order to make absolute defeat impossible. * * *
> During the late war the Japanese Generals were unanimously of the opinion that the Siberian regiments were the best in the field against them, and that had they been well led, nothing could have broken them.

Mr. Weale's latest book confirms the impression, now probably to be accepted as the truth, that the Japanese were at the end of their resources and the Russians but beginning to bring theirs into play when hostilities terminated. The greatest Japanese victory of the war was won at Portsmouth. This acute observer's analysis of the Russo-Japanese war forces the inevitable conclusion that had war continued Japan would have been crushed by the sheer weight of numbers. The management of the Trans-Siberian Railway is described as magnificent. It is somewhat surprising to be told that the Russian hospital system centring at Harbin was equally remarkable and admirable. The Russian Army in the field was left to shift for itself in sanitary matters, but the author asserts that the Russian ranks were almost entirely free from disease, when tens of thousands of sick Japanese were being sent home. There was no sickness of any consequence in the Russian Army, and the recoveries from gunshot wounds were remarkable, 60 per cent. of the wounded being able to join the ranks within six weeks.

> The Russian behemoth is just as unconquerable as it ever was, and Asia does not contain in all its hundreds of millions more than a fraction of the vital force necessary to subdue it.

One of Mr. Weale's more important contributions to our knowledge of the Far East is his inspection of the Japanese Government. He prints the Constitution in full, and, commenting upon it and calling attention to its practical working, argues that Japan is in no sense a representative Government. He describes the Emperor as all powerful, and the five "Elder Statesmen," Marquis Yamagata, Marquis Oyama, Count Matsukata, Count Inouye, and Marquis Ito, as the general arbiters of the national destiny. He represents the Parliament as having little more authority than the Russian Duma; ridicules it as corrupt and incompetent, and wholly subservient to the Emperor. He declares that the old Daimio system is still in existence in the form of a powerful bureaucracy. In this connection it may be pertinent to quote remarks of Baron Takahira when his attention was called to this chapter of "The Coming Struggle in Eastern Asia" by THE NEW YORK TIMES. The Japanese Ambassador said:

> The forms of government do not, after all, make as much difference as we have supposed. England, preserving the forms of monarchy, is as democratic as America. The genius of a people may be trusted to find its own ways to express itself in this affair of governmental organization. * * * If the present form of our Government does not suit the Japanese, depend upon it they will get one that does suit them. And as a matter of fact the present is considered to suit the present need. Constitutions grow; they are not made in a moment.

Other features of the volume are studies of the Japanese financial situation, of the Japanese industrial outlook, and finally of the situation in China—its internal condition, the advance of the reform movement, the growth of railways and of a real army, and of China's prospects as a market. By 1915, when the treaty between Japan and England will have terminated, Mr. Weale believes that the foreign trade of China will be fully a thousand millions of dollars annually.

The Asiatic problem has plainly got upon Mr. Weale's nerves, and many pages of his book are devoted to solemn adjurations to the white man to awaken. He writes thus:

> The supremacy which Europe attained over Asia in the nineteenth century has no elements of permanency, for the weight of numbers is increasingly in favor of Asia, and Europe's hope can ultimately lie only in Russia and North America. A thousand million Asiatics, who are now increasing more and more rapidly, form a force which is not yet appreciated in the slightest, and only the most cunning diplomacy and the possession of the world's great stores of gold, backed by the fear of that cold and deathless onslaught which the white man alone knows how to deliver, can maintain in Asia during the twentieth century the conditions of the nineteenth.

IN KOREA WITH ITO.

Dr. George Trumbull Ladd, Professor of Philosophy at Yale University, has long been a friend of Japan, and in his new book proves himself a faithful one. Being in the Mikado's kingdom in the Spring of 1907, he was invited by Prince Ito, (at that time Marquis Ito,) who had been charged by the Japanese Emperor with the administration of Korea, to visit the country in the interest of Japan and in an effort to persuade the Koreans of the beneficent intentions of their conquerors.

This task Prof. Ladd undertook. He spent two months in "the Land of Morning Calm." He was engaged chiefly in lecturing on ethical subjects, inculcating the necessity of accepting Japanese assistance in the preservation of the country's peace and the development of its best resources. Prof. Ladd apparently found that the missionaries sympathized with the Koreans rather than with the Japanese, and found it necessary to lecture them, too, in a vein which must have seemed to them either extremely innocent or altogether disingenuous. However sincere the lecturer may have been, it must have struck the Koreans as incongruous that Prof. Ladd should have urged his view of the matter upon them from the rostrum of the building in Söul known as "Independence Hall." However, the description of the population of Korea given by this latest visitor would seem to be ample proof of their inefficiency and treachery, and of the impossibility it would have been for the Japanese to deal with the dynasty reigning in Söul otherwise than they did.

Prof. Ladd's account of the recent history of this people can hardly be accepted as that of a disinterested and impartial student. Undoubtedly honest, sincere, and convinced, his book is nevertheless an ex parte statement of a professed friend of Japan. It is a powerful defense—powerful not so much in its formal argument as in its unpremeditated revelations of Korean character—an illustration of which has just been given here in America in the murderous assault upon Mr. Durham Stevens.

RAMBLING ESSAYS ON "MODERNISM"

R. A. Scott-James, Author of a Book which Discusses Everybody and Everything to Small Edification.

IN the introduction to his collected essays on "Modernism and Romance"* Mr. R. A. Scott-James is at pains to explain that in his use of the first word of his title—a word always of dubious and elusive import—he does not imply any theological meaning. The "modernism" of Mr. Scott-James is not that of Pope Pius X. and M. Paul Sabatier. The book is devoted principally to living authors and, admitting his temerity, the essayist confesses his disbelief in the generally accepted theory that no final estimate of an author's work can be formed until he can be seen in the perspective of time. Mr. Scott-James is sure that we cannot appreciate Aeschylus as well as the Greeks did, or comprehend Shakespeare as clearly as the Elizabethans. The last half of his statement seems absurd. In any true sense the Elizabethans did not comprehend Shakespeare at all. He was only one of their playmakers, and not the best esteemed. As for Aeschylus—well, we are not Greeks. The argument does not hold. Certainly even Mr. Scott-James will admit that the contemporaries of those two great men did not write as much about them as is written in these days.

It is an odd idea of Mr. Scott-James, expressed in this introduction, that while Rudyard Kipling has been "a vital, moving force among us," he is not "moved by the spirit operative among us to-day." The idea has not been expressed hitherto in exactly that way. "The man belongs to the moment, and the moment has passed for Mr. Kipling," who is assigned, along with Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, to "the nineties." This seems to be the very kind of criticism that justifies the theory of the need of the perspective of time.

The author apologizes for omitting from his essays any appreciation of the work of George Bernard Shaw. He is safe from adverse criticism on this score. Mr. Shaw's writing has been amply discussed already—especially by Mr. Shaw. Certainly Mr. Scott-James's list of authors is long enough, if not what one might call comprehensive, and it includes Hardy and Meredith, Robert Browning and Guy Boothby, Jack London and Katherine Thurston, W. B. Yeats and Marie Corelli, John Galsworthy and Upton Sinclair, John Davidson and Gorky, Maeterlinck and Pierre Loti, Stevenson and George Eliot, Emil Reich and Pett Ridge, Joseph Conrad and W. J. Locke, Stephen Phillips and H. G. Wells, Andrew Lang and James Huneker.

Romance, in his use of the word, is not more clearly defined than modernism. It is not the romance of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance—altogether. We gather that each reader must define the word for himself. It includes adventures and emotions, and the essayist's attempts at definition illustrate anew "the almost insurmountable difficulty of expressing simple ideas in language"—which is his own phrase.

We are on somewhat firmer ground when we get to Mr. Scott-James's definition of literary criticism, which is, at least, negatively clear. It is no longer the criticism of Arnold as that "has become the jargon of second-rate reviewers." We fear, though, that here is another illustration of the essayist's own idea that "there are an infinity of experiences which defy the power of language." It is fair to say, however, that the literary critic, in the exercise of his calling, is not required to define criticism. His product itself is sufficient definition of his idea of criticism. He need not, like the boys in Squeers's school, spell window "w-i-n-d-e-r," and then go and clean it, too.

Our essayist holds that it is worth while for the student of books and human nature to examine all types of modern literature, because the two inquiries, What is modern literature? and What is modern life? must go together. He says, very clearly: "The scientific and positive spirit has intruded into every field of modern thought till it has even plundered the sanctuary of imagination and religious belief." This self-evident proposition scarcely needs strengthening by proof, and the proofs Mr. Scott-James offers would not be satisfying if they were needed. The London Daily Mail, which has a million readers, frequently uses terms taken from biology, and the cinematograph is a potent attraction in music halls. Lord Northcliffe's paper also employs the terms of theology and botany, but that proves nothing, while our own observation tells us that when the music hall is darkened for the moving pictures most of the spectators gather their wraps and depart.

These remarks, to be sure, are not literary criticism, but neither, in any practical sense, is much of this big, comely book, which is made up of rambling essays, light in their quality in spite of the formal introduction, and all readable enough. We soon get used to the manner. When we have read as far along as the chapter on "The Pessimism of Thomas Hardy" we are not surprised to learn that "he is not pessimistic about human nature." What else is there on this earth for one to be effectively pessimistic about? The assertion that our own eloquent Huneker has modeled himself on George Moore, and that his stories are autobiographical is at least coherent and something one can nail to.

SOUTH AMERICAN ROMANCE.

Given a heroine who is a royal Princess of pure Maya blood, but educated as the daughter of an American gentleman; a handful of chivalrous Americans, excited by an ingenious tale of a countrywoman held captive as the white goddess of a tribe of savages in the upper mazes of the Amazon River; an unscrupulous Peruvian diplomat roused to implacable though silent enmity by an exciting fracas in the first chapter, and there is ample assurance at the outset of a plentiful amount of interest in Edward Barrons's story, "The Lost Goddess," (Henry Holt & Co., $1.50.)

The speedy fitting out of a yacht by the handful of twentieth century knights who seek the mythical goddess with all the ingenuous valor of centuries long gone by; the gradual unfolding of the ingeniously planned snare into which the wily Peruvian has led the expedition for his own nefarious purposes, and the final scenes of hot battle against treachery leave no quiet moment between the rapidly succeeding situations of peril and excitement. The eventual triumph of chivalry over wrongdoing, and the unfolding of the strangely fascinating character of the Princess lend the last zest of satisfaction to the end of the tale.

A STORY OF THE OZARKS.

In the immense yearly output of American novels perhaps the most frequent is that which gives an intimate local picture—a human record of social life in some particular corner of the country, whether in some metropolitan whirlpool or tucked away in a remote mountain cañon. Taken all in all, these novels present a sort of dissected map of contemporary American life, and they need only to be properly fitted together to produce a complete social panorama of our own times. Picturing with fidelity and not a little charm the life in one of these out-of-the-way corners, J. B. Ellis's "Arkansaw Cousins" (Henry Holt & Co., $1.50) adds its quota to the social map. It deals with the fortunes of the Thornberry family of Core City, Ark., of its wide-spreading ramifications, of the bonds that held the numerous cousins together, and the matters which set them in opposition. It is a sprightly narrative, told with a good deal of humor, especially in its portrayal of character.

ENGLISH SCHOOLGIRL STORY.

"Nina's Career," (Macmillan Company, $1.50,) by Christina Gowans Whyte, is a somewhat conventional but altogether pleasantly written story of English schoolgirl life. A plentiful allowance of descriptive matter, glimpsing London, Paris, and Scotland, is unobtrusively inserted, and there are some amusing incidents; a case of scarlet fever gives opportunity for a house party, while getting lost on a mist-enveloped mountain turns out to be the gayest sort of sport. The brilliant little granddaughter of a statesman, a fashionable physician's numerous family, and the wholly lovable orphan niece of three charming maiden ladies contrive to furnish several hundred pages of readable, youthful fiction. The closing chapters offer a series of simplified love stories, though the heroine is left following valiantly in the path of her chosen career.

SOCIALIST BOOK FROM H. G. WELLS

"New Worlds for Old," a Document Written by Skilled and Graceful Pen—Its Logic Criticised.

MR. WELLS is one of the few writers upon Socialism who are readable. He does not pretend to the profundity which makes Marx's treatise monumental, while it remains with dusty, uncut edges upon the shelves of all but the fewest readers. Neither are Mr. Wells's writings characterized by the trivialities and uncleannesses which offend in the writings of many others upon this disputatious topic. He comes in between, with skilled pen and sensibilities in fullest sympathy with the classes whom he would benefit by revolutionizing our institutions. Mr. Wells has both a ready wit and sharp tongue, and gives a good account of himself in quarrels with his critics which enliven some of these pages. Moreover, his enthusiasm is glowing and infectious, and his book may be recommended heartily to those interested in the subject. It deserves such recommendation, for in writing it Mr. Wells has done harder work, and must expect smaller pay or glory than would have come to him from the production of another such romance as those which gave him his audience originally. For, despite all the praise which is not grudged him, it remains true that there is more of the Blue Book about this document than anything yet appearing from his pen. The statistics are tremendously respectable and convincing, but alas! they are caviare to the general, and not pure literature, however well they enforce a point. Not to put too fine point on it—this book is only literature by courtesy. It is an out and out Socialist pamphlet, of an excellent sort to be sure, and glorified and vivified by the master's touch, it is true, but nevertheless of another class from the popular fiction named upon the title page, which will remain Mr. Wells's surest claim to popularity.

And dealing with the book in its true character, it must be said that it leaves much to be desired. Not that the word painting of an earthly millennium is not among the best of its sort, or even the best which can be done at all. Conceding this, it remains removed from practicability an immeasurable distance. The difference is that between describing a law and drafting a law. The description may command approval, but the accompanying statute may be unworkable. Our own politics at the moment turn upon disappointment with the operation of a statute which labor thought was directed against capital, and which capital thought was directed against labor, and which turns out to include both, to the disgust of both, and to the satisfaction of nobody. After doing its best to enforce the statute the Administration has thrown up its hands, and is proposing to authorize what it has been prosecuting. This tends to the degradation of the law as the embodiment of wisdom and the popular will, and a like fate might be anticipated for what may be described as Wellsism as appropriately as Socialism.

To do him no injustice, it is proper to quote his own words. His first generalization is "that the community, as a whole, should be responsible, and every individual in the community, married or single, parent or childless, should be responsible, for the welfare and upbringing of every child born into that community." The second generalization is "that the community as a whole should be inalienably the owner and administrator of the land, of all raw materials, of all values and resources accumulated from the past, and that all private property must be of a terminable nature, reverting to the community and subject to the general welfare."

Some of the most piquant passages in "New Worlds for Old" are based upon the insinuations which the frivolous have based upon their misconception that Mr. Wells proposes a human breeding farm as the basis of his new society. He makes it very clear that he contemplates nothing inconsistent with affections and morality as now understood among the most highly respectable. His second proposal—that all private property must be terminable, and revert to the community—goes beyond either Marx or George. Marx contended that capitalist ownership of the means of production is robbery. George contended that land ownership is robbery. But Wells claims that all private ownership is a heinous offense. He shrinks somewhat from the rigor of his theory, arguing that "it will not prevent savings or accumulations, if men do not choose to expend their earnings, nor need it interfere with lending." But how much may a man save, and how much usance may he ask for what he chooses to lend? Is the difference between things as they are and as Mr. Wells would have them a mere question of detail rather than of principle, after all?

It is not on such narrow arguments that the judicious will dissent most strongly from Mr. Wells's hypothesis of things as they ought to be. He commits suicide with his own weapons, or at least he places a weapon in the hands of his adversaries which they can turn fatally against himself. His argument against things as they are is based upon a hunt of the slums for the worst human documents civilization can furnish. His argument in favor of Wellsism is limited by nothing except his fancy, and he fancies nothing which is unattractive. The contrasts in colors recalls one of those Turneresque paintings which leave nature struggling after and a long way behind. Human nature nowadays is not so perfect as in the garden before the fall, which is the best epitome of Mr. Wells's cosmogony. If his scheme could be set going forthwith most will think that it would produce human documents as repulsive as any in his gallery of horrors. And if it were to work perfectly so long as Mr. Wells administered it, so soon as he removed his hand it would deteriorate and become a nuisance. Moreover, Mr. Wells underrates the progress which we are making in our own poor way without the help of his itinerary. It is the pitiful cry of the children of poverty which most pierces his heart, and the heart of his critics as well. He would make men and women over for the sake of the children. And yet those who do not forget the children remember also the fathers and mothers. Only a little while ago, as time goes in the lives of nations, the condition of the fathers was worse than that of the children under the factory system. The fathers were not thought even to have souls. They were attached to the soil, like clods or trees, and had as little property as Mr. Wells would allow them in his Utopia. Only a few generations ago girls worked naked in the mines of England, and there was no such outcry as now, when even the salesladies are forbidden to contract for an excessive workday, so sensitive has the popular conscience become. Progress of this sort for a few generations more will advance the cause of social progress more than the most wondrous word pictures of fanciful, impracticable reforms.

A Pocket Book for Politics.

A suggestive volume for a political campaign is published this week by the G. W. Dillingham Company. It bears the title of "Jedge Waxem's Pocket Book," and contains some three hundred "honest and fearless political maxims" by Jedge Wabash Q. Waxem, Member of Congress from Wayback. The maxims in question have been compiled by W. J. Lampton, whose theory in bringing out his book at this particular time, on the eve of a Presidential campaign, is that "no political campaign is complete without a pocket book."

MIND, THE WORLD'S CREATIVE POWER

Prof. Borden Bowne Writes of Conscious Intelligence as the Essential Basis of the Universe.

ALTHOUGH admitting, or asserting, that "a fearful proportion of philosophic discussion is at best barren and often pernicious," and that "probably nine-tenths of the treatises on this subject might be burned up without any great loss to the world and with some gain to the fuel pile," Prof. Borden Parker Bowne has yet added another volume to the endless list. He calls it "Personalism,"* and his effort is to prove that conscious intelligence is the only dynamic, that is, causal, element in the universe, and that everything else, so far as it has any reality at all, has only a relational one and owes that to the creative power of "mind," human and divine.

This rough summary of the book sufficiently indicates that its author is not an experimental psychologist of the new school, but a metaphysician of the old—in other words, that he has little or no interest in the brain as an organ with the power to know and feel among its functions, but that, like the philosophers whom he comes so near condemning en masse for futility, he contents himself with arguing out the meaning of abstract words. That he does it extremely well cannot be denied by anybody who still believes in the possibility of raising a crop on a field where, despite industrious plowing, so little has ever grown.

Of whatever else Dr. Bowne may be accused, he cannot be charged with obscurity. On the contrary, his style is beautifully, even amazingly, simple and lucid, and though of course his chapters are not what is called easy reading, that is the reader's fault, not Dr. Bowne's. It can at least be said that no one sentence or paragraph is a puzzle, and there is never much difficulty in seeing exactly what the author believes and would have others believe. Why he believes it is another matter, and not every link in the chain of his logic is obvious. Not infrequently he says "as we have seen," so and so is the case, when, as a matter of fact, "we" have not seen it at all, but only heard Dr. Bowne say this or that. He is fond, too, of characterizing the theories of other philosophers as the crude productions of unassisted common sense, yet he is even fonder, as a last resort, of appealing to that same authority, or to concrete experience, for the ultimate and conclusive confirmation of his own contentions.

Most readers who have not reached Dr. Bowne's conclusions by another and more direct route will like him better, we suspect, while he is criticising or confuting other philosophers than when he presents the fruits of his own researches and labors. Then, alas! one accepts or rejects his view of dynamic mind with but little reference to the "demonstrations" that have preceded, and at least one class of readers will turn wearily away and refresh themselves with a few facts drawn from the new psychology that does not treat as negligible the physical brain and its directly observed workings. None the less does Dr. Bowne read to those same new psychologists a much-needed lecture on their tendency to treat mere metaphor as concrete reality—to talk, for instance, about "the conscious" and "the sub-conscious" selves as if they were two things, instead of two phases or functions of the same thing. Electricians make a like mistake with reference to their "positive" and "negative" "fluids." The mistake is of no importance as regards making dynamos and running street cars, but it is fatal to clear thinking as to the nature of electricity.

Dr. Bowne emerges from his plunge into epistemology with a Divine Being as the beginning, cause, and explanation of everything. Whether he found this Divine Being there, or whether he took Him along when he made his dive, and only brought Him back, is, it seems to us, purely a matter of opinion. Yet the book is better than merely worth reading, for its temper is wholly admirable, and there are many incidental clarifications of thought on subjects too often discussed with only a semblance of intelligence. Time and space are among the concepts that receive needed elucidation, and even though the reasoning concerning them be held more ingenious than conclusive, it yet serves the purpose of eliminating a delusive simplicity.

SPOOKY.

The ghosts in Mary Harriott Norris's story, "The Veil," (Badger,) are of the liveliest known genus, and altogether they are sensible ghosts, disdaining to twitch bedclothes, or to appear without a reason. The scene is laid within a moderate distance of New York, and the haunted district comprises the whole of an estate upon which are three dwellings—the manor house, the old mansion, and a farmhouse. The disturbances date from the birth of the owner's youngest granddaughter, some twenty years before the story opens, and the houses have long been untenanted. An enterprising New York paper gets the story and writes it feelingly, with the result that the old physician speedily finds tenants. Smith, who rents the manor house, is interested in psychical research, and after a strenuous participation in Spanish-American and Russo-Japanese wars feels the need of seclusion. Jones, after a no less arduous campaign in Wall Street, likewise is inclined to become a recluse, and neither visits the other. Both are intensely interested in the ghosts, whose manifestations are by no means a rarity. Mrs. Taylor has rented the mansion because the mysterious disappearance of her husband makes her desirous of avoiding society. It is when the old physician takes his granddaughter to visit his tenants that things really begin to happen. The story hinges on the reincarnation theory, and while the girl and Smith nearly fall into each others' arms upon their first meeting, both she and Smith have an overpowering antagonism to Jones, and the story develops with mysteriously hidden stairways, subterranean caves and passages, and besides all the regular ghosts there is one who dispossesses a man of his body, altogether a fascinating collection. The ghosts eventually do their work and disappear after some exciting performances and a dramatic climax.

AROUND THE WORLD.

"From West to East" (imported by E. P. Dutton & Company, $4) is a gracefully written account, in diary form, by Sir Hubert Jerningham, K. C. M. G., sometime Governor of Mauritius, of Trinidad, and Tobago, of a trip around the world. Starting from Paris he went through the Suez Canal, visited India, Japan, Manchuria, Korea, then crossed the Pacific and traveled rather rapidly across the United States, stopping only in San Francisco, Chicago, and New York, and visiting Niagara. Six months were consumed in the entire trip, and little more than the sight-seeing of the ordinary tourist seems to have been attempted. The author's descriptions are always gracefully written and are often enthusiastic enough to be vivid, but they reveal only a mind of rather commonplace order, which was content to glance over the surface of things, while sometimes his observation was too hasty to be accurate and his generalizations more picturesque than true.

AIMLESS HISTORY.

THE GROWTH OF MODERN NATIONS. Translated from the French of M. Henri de Tourville by M. G. Loch. New York: Longmans, Green & Co.

It is really difficult to understand the exact object of this compilation. It claims to be a history of the particularist form of society, by which M. Tourville means what is generally known as individualistic commerce, but there is really very little detail of a trustworthy character showing the growth of the great particularist nations of the present day, the Germans, the English, and the Americans. Why it should commence with Odin it is difficult to judge. The absence of any references to speak of prevents any control of the statements of the writer, and the views given are of insufficient importance or originality to deserve reproduction in English. It is fair to add that Mr. Loch has done his work as translator fairly well, quite as well as the original deserves.

"The Story of a Street."

In Harper's Magazine for next month an interesting series of articles by Frederick Trevor Hill is to be started entitled "The Story of a Street." The opening article—"Wall Street in the Days of the Dutch"—tells of some of the curious happenings in the days when Wall Street really was a walled street and when Broadway was nothing more than a weedy trail, albeit of a comfortable breadth that is not often associated with one's idea of a trail. Quaint pictures and old prints accompany this first really authoritative and detailed account of what is undoubtedly America's most famous thoroughfare.

ARTHUR SYMONS AND "SYMBOLISTS"

De Nerval, Rimbaud, Verlaine, Mallarme and Maeterlinck in the Group Celebrated in Republished Essays.

ELEVEN years have passed since Mr. Arthur Symons's essays on those poets and prose writers he prefers to call symbolists were first collected, and the second edition, revised,* which is now at hand, has all the interest of a new book. Of course, to the initiate, it is a wholly charming one. "Without symbolism," says Mr. Symons, "there can be no literature; indeed, not even language." One might almost as well say that without symbolism there can be no life.

Writing of Villiers de l'Isle Adam, one of his symbolists, he says that fundamentally his belief is that common to all Eastern mystics: "Know, once for all, there is for thee no other universe than that conception thereof which is reflected at the bottom of thy thoughts." Similarly one might say that there is little or no common bond between the members of Mr. Symons's group of symbolists other than that conception of symbolism which is reflected at the bottom of Mr. Symons's thoughts. He discovers that they all hold to the creed of mysticism. They include Gerard de Nerval, Arthur Rimbaud, Paul Verlaine, Jules Laforgue, Stéphane Mallarmé, Huysmans, and Maeterlinck.

Students of literature have much to be grateful to Mr. Symons for, and this little collection of essays increases measurably their debt to him. Probably readers to whom the book affords an opportunity to learn all they want to know about Mr. Symons's subject cannot be classed among students of literature. But they may still be worthy folks, seeking to increase their culture by little trips in the bypaths, and we heartily commend the essays to their notice. If they derive from them a desire to read more in Mr. Symons's agreeable apprecations of art and literature, so much the better for them and for the author.

There is not one in this group of symbolists unworthy of at least a passing acquaintance, and nobody can introduce them to readers of English more gracefully and sympathetically than Symons. "Le bon Gerard," vagabond, visionary, and jester, who led by a blue ribbon through the boulevards a live lobster, because it did not bark and knew the secrets of the sea, is not the least of them. Villiers, "the Don Quixote of idealism"; Rimbaud, who had done all his writing by his twenty-first year, and whose life was an Arabian night's tale, and Verlaine, the victim of his own emotions, the lifelong invalid, lingering on the brink of insanity, make up a picturesque trio.

Almost as much interest attaches in these pages to Laforgue, who lived to nearly the ripe age of 27, whose verse was "broken up into a kind of mockery of prose"; Mallarmé, whom Debussy has set to music; Huysmans, the unclassifiable, who died last year—all queer fellows, all men of some genius, not quite measurable. The orbit of Maeterlinck's sphere may touch theirs, (it touches Mallarmé's, certainly,) but it is another sphere.

Some of Mr. Symons's conclusions are worth noting. Our only chance of complete happiness "lies in our measure of success in shutting the eyes of the mind and deadening its sense of hearing, and dulling the keenness of its apprehennion of the unknown." There is a conspiracy among us to forget death. "The fear of death is not cowardice; it is rather an intellectual dissatisfaction with an enigma which has been presented to us, and which can be solved only when its solution is of no further use." The doctrine of mysticism, we learn, includes no guide for conduct, reveals no secret of happiness, but deals with a theory of life which makes us familiar with mystery. And to be familiar with mystery (a familiar mystery is surely a paradox) is to be free from a great bondage.

FOUR BOOKS ABOUT GARDENS

Flower Grouping in English, Scotch and Irish Gardens
By MARGARET WATERFIELD
With 56 illustrations in full colour by the author..........Price, $6.00 net.
Some of the gardens described in this book were planted over a generation ago, but with such excellent judgment that succeeding years have brought no necessity for change, the beds of perennials growing more and more beautiful with the return of each season. The beauty and economy of this kind of garden is obviously greater than that of "bedding plants" which must be renewed annually, and have at the best but a brief season. Several chapters are of universal interest to gardeners, amateur and professional. Among these are "The effective use of annuals," "Carpeting of large plants with those of low-growing habit," and "Useful hints on the planting of bulbs."

London Parks and Gardens
By HON. MRS. EVELYN CECIL (ALICIA AMHERST)
With 39 illustrations in full colour from drawings by Lady Victoria Manners..........Price, $6.00 net.
The parks and gardens of London are a constant witness to the skill and perseverance of the English gardener, under the most adverse atmospheric conditions. The present volume contains much interesting information, historical and horticultural, and affords a new and interesting viewpoint from which to study London.

Garden Colour
AUTUMN—By ROSE KINGSLEY WINTER—By HON. VICARY GIBBS
With 51 sketches in full colour by Margaret Waterfield....Price, $6.00 net.
This is the fourth edition of one of the most suggestive and practical books called forth by the growing enthusiasm for gardening. Its purpose is to show the beauty of effect which can be achieved by careful planting so that, as the various flowers of a garden come into bloom, they shall compose artistically in line and color with their neighbors. The book is indispensable to those who want to arrange gardens of merit from the artistic point of view.

Nature's Own Gardens
By MAUD U. CLARKE
Over 50 illustrations in line and colour by the author........Price, $6.00 net.
A delightful book on wild flowers and the "wild garden," full of valuable hints for that comparatively new but delightful school of gardening which cultivates native flowers as nearly as possible in their natural conditions, yet in places more accessible than those in which nature usually plants them.

CURIOUS THEORY OF NUTRITION

Mr. Carrington Also Has Views On the Subject of Disease —His Contentions Decidedly Queer.

VITALITY, FASTING, AND NUTRITION,"* by Hereward Carrington, is certainly a great book. It has 648 pages, not to speak of a 39-page introduction, and whoever reads it through will be sure before he completes the task that it weighs at least 150 pounds. Whether the book has any other claim to size will be a matter of widely divergent opinion, but not a few people will find it decidedly interesting, some of them because they will accept Mr. Carrington's curious theories as some element of truth, while to others its only value will be the light it casts upon the author as a type and specimen of humanity. The latter aspect, of course, is not one that many will catch, but it is among the more profitable forms of literary study and criticism.

Mr. Carrington's undertaking is nothing less than the overthrow of the whole system of orthodox medicine and all the accepted notions as to the nature of disease, the manner of its cure, and the relation between the body and food. There is, he calmly says, only one disease, and that isn't so much a disease as a condition—the condition of having the blood overladen and vitiated by an excess of nutrient, or supposedly nutrient, material. What is commonly called disease, no matter what form it takes, is a beneficent and curative process—nature's attempt to get rid of harmful and intrusive matter. There being but one cause of disease, it is worse than useless to treat any one congeries of symptoms. The thing to do is to permit or help nature to free the body of its burden, and the way to do it is to fast until this end has been attained. The length of the fast depends on circumstances. Sometimes a week is enough, but there is no danger, provided the thing is done just right, of extending abstinence from food for fifty or sixty days. The time to stop is when the appearance of real hunger, which is, it seems, like real thirst, a yearning manifested in the mouth and throat, not in the stomach, indicates that the body wants more building material. Nothing could be simpler or easier—or cheaper!

There is a degree or sort of truth in these theories, as most doctors would admit if hard pressed. But Mr. Carrington's system is bigger than this. He insists, besides, that food has nothing to do with, is not the source of, either bodily energy or bodily heat! Oh! yes, he frankly admits, the production of both has a quantitative relation, more or less close, to the food assimilated and to the tissue destroyed in the course of all physical and mental action, but he vehemently denies even as much of a causal relation as exists between the fuel burned by an engine and the work done by it. A closer analogy, his readers are asked to believe, is provided by the wear on the strings of a violin or on the edges of a spade. This, too, is exactly proportioned to the amount of music made with the one instrument and of ground dug with the other, but its replacement would not be a true cause or source of either melody or vegetables. Suppose, now, that the violin or the spade were, like the body, a self-repairing machine; it would have to be fed with something it could turn into catgut or steel and arrange in just the proper places. That enables one to glimpse Mr. Carrington's theory as to the need and use of food. It is at least ingenious, and he twists many a queer physiological phenomenon into an approach to supporting plausibility. As to what vital energy really is, Mr. Carrington does little more than declare it different from any other force, and to say that it somehow comes, especially during sleep, from an outside supply, mysterious and inexhaustible.

Mr. Carrington has read much and is fond of quotation. It will be noticed that the authors of whom he approves are the men of one idea, of fads and panaceas—dietarians, hydrotherapists, and the like. All others he is prone to attack. He is himself a vegetarian of the strictest sect—the don't-cook-anything sort. That, of course, fixes his status for the serious scientist. Unlike most of his kind, however, his literary temper and manners are excellent; his self-confidence uses the phrases of modesty. He is free from the current forms of pseudo-mysticism, and he does not exaggerate the present utility of "suggestion"—much. In other words, he is a distinctly likable person, he knows a whole lot of things, some of which are so and a few more of which may be, and his big book can be read with profit and interest, even by those who will not accept many of its main contentions.

A Story of Oklahoma.

The Indian from an Indian point of view forms the subject of a novel which the Frederick H. Stokes Company publishes this week. The title of the book is "The Man of Yesterday," and its author, Mary Holland Kinkaid, is a prominent newspaper woman of Chicago, Milwaukee, Los Angeles, and Denver, who has made a special study of the country and the people depicted in the story. Much of Mrs. Kinkaid's novel is history that has never before been written; many of her incidents are taken from actual happenings. Her characters, educated Chickasaws and Choctaws, living in luxury, conducting their own Legislatures, and indulging in foreign travel, seem strange enough to the Easterner who thinks of the Indian as he is usually revealed in romances that deal with his race—as a savage with few, if any, of the refinements or advantages of a civilization to which he is believed to be unalterably opposed.

Spring Moving Among Publishers.

From their present quarters on Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, where they have been for the last five years, D. Appleton & Co. move this week to 35 West Thirty-second Street, where they will occupy an entire floor. This firm of publishers is the oldest in New York, having been founded eighty-three years ago by Daniel Appleton, a dry goods merchant from Boston, who started the publication of books in his store at 16 Exchange Place, opposite the old Custom House. In the firm to-day Mr. W. W. Appleton, grandson of Daniel Appleton, is the only one remaining of that name, his brother, Mr. Daniel Sidney Appleton, the English representative of the house, having died last week in London.

The new quarters into which the Appletons are moving are in the same building as that chosen by another publishing house, Henry Holt & Co., who also move from their old home on Twenty-third Street this week, as announced in THE TIMES'S SATURDAY REVIEW last week.

Another publisher, B. W. Huebsch, will move next week from his present quarters on Nassau Street to 225 Fifth Avenue.

The Story of a Great Queen.

"Victoria: The Woman," is the title of a profusely illustrated volume by Frank Hird which will be published next month by D. Appleton & Co. There have been many biographies written of the great Queen; the last year, especially, has been rich in books having her for their subject. Few, however, have dealt with her except as the ruler of Great Britain. The forthcoming book is unique in that it depicts Victoria as a woman and not at all as a Queen. The author has lived for a great many years with Lord Ronald Gower, who was a great personal friend of Queen Victoria, and he has thus been able to gather an enormous amount of material having to do with the latter's personal, every-day life. The book is thus an extraordinarily familiar, anecdotal biography, which could have been written only by two or three living persons who had constant intercourse with the Queen throughout her unofficial as well as her official life.

Another Book on Socialism.

"English Socialism of To-day: Its Teachings and Its Aims Examined," is the title of a book published this week by E. P. Dutton & Co. Its author, the Right Hon. H. O. Arnold-Forsters, was Minister of War in Mr. Balfour's late Government, is a Liberal Unionist, and is the adopted son of the late Right Hon. W. E. Forster. Mr. Forster has written a number of books on such popular themes as that of the present volume, whose object is to explain in simple language the character of the Socialist doctrines which are now being taught by the Socialist Democratic Federation, the Independent Labor Party, and the Fabian Society. In it the author admits the unsatisfactory conditions that exist in civilized countries, and maintains that Socialism, in some senses of the term, "might easily become a great power for good," and that the movement is "much more the outcome of circumstances than the direct result of Socialistic teachings."

NEW BIOGRAPHY OF HENRY HUDSON

Intrepid Sea Explorer and His Lucky Voyage Which Failed to Find the Northwest Passage.

PARTICULARLY timely, in view of the fact that next year occurs the third centenary of Henry Hudson's exploration of the river that bears his name is the publication in Putnam's series, "American Men of Energy," of an exceptionally good exposition of that intrepid and sanguine explorer's achievements.

A biography of Henry Hudson,* in the ordinary sense, cannot be written, since there have come down to us records of but four years of his life, and even that scanty information is in a mutilated state. Mr. Bacon has pieced the fragments together in admirable style, giving them their correct historical setting, and, while recognizing fully the efforts of previous biographers, has exposed their inaccuracies to a searching light.

Some question may arise as to the propriety of classing Hudson as an "American man of energy," but the author reasons thus: "A century and a quarter ago Lafayette became an American citizen by a special act of Congress; three hundred years ago Henry Hudson became an American by virtue of his American explorations, other requirements not having been formulated."

While the fact that the famous explorer was not Dutch and that his name was never correctly written "Hendrik" has long been fully established, the name in its Dutch spelling is probably more firmly fixed in many minds than is the correct English form. Where the error originated is largely a matter of conjecture; but certain it is that in the few remaining documents concerning him, including his contracts with the Dutch East India Company, the name appears in English. As a matter of fact, Hudson's negotiations with the company and the signing of his contract with it were conducted with the aid of an interpreter. His ignorance of the Dutch language was as unfortunate as it was complete, since there can be no question that a large share of his later troubles with mutinous Dutch sailors was due to his inability to speak their language. Certainly, in his agreements with his Dutch employers, if anywhere, the changed spelling would have been observed, and since neither here nor in other papers does he sign himself other than "Henry," there can be no possible reason for the commonly indulged error. "To give his name a Dutch equivalent," says the author, "and to picture him as one expatriated from his own land, is wide of historic fact and may be reckoned on a par with Michael Angelo's feat in putting horns upon his Moses."

Of his ancestors or his immediate family nothing is definitely known, although there was a Henry Hudson, supposed to be the explorer's grandfather, connected with the Muscovy Company, and there are grounds for conjecture that the younger Hudson received his earlier training with that concern. There easily enough he might have imbibed the idea of gaining the much-desired northwest passage to the riches of the East.

The only proof that Hudson had a wife and family lies in his contract with the Dutch East India Company, wherein it was agreed that he should be paid $320 for his services and for the support of his wife and children. Further, his widow was to receive an additional $80 should the explorer be lost during the voyage. While there is mention of a John Hudson who accompanied him on his later voyages and was finally lost with him, there is no proof that the boy was his son, although he is generally accepted as such.

There has been at different times much and rather bitter criticism of Hudson for having tendered his services to the Dutch instead of making his explorations under his own flag. However, the actual conditions were such as clearly to absolve him from censure. The voyages of 1607 and 1608 were undertaken for the Muscovy Company of his own country. Setting out with high hopes and every confidence of success, he returned from both voyages with the pathway to the East still undiscovered. It is not strange, perhaps, that his countrymen were not anxious to undertake immediately the risk of another voyage. The enthusiastic navigator was therefore without employment, and what more natural, in that day as it would be in this, that when overtures were made from the French and the Dutch, he should accept a post with one of them? The affair can scarcely be viewed as other than a business transaction, and it is further justified by the fact that his services were not desired in his own country. In his contracts he was "Henry Hudson, Englishman."

The third voyage was as unsuccessful as were those preceding it, so far as its avowed object was concerned. Turned away from his course by a mutinous crew, retained as Captain only on tolerance, the voyage savored of anything but success. That Hudson should have decided to visit the Virginia colony, and then, without apparent reason, change his course, sailing again to the north, was but a happy chance. Doubtless when first he entered the broad bay he believed that he had at last stumbled upon the passage of his quest, but there is in his logbook absolute refutation of the frequently repeated assertion that he explored the river under the belief that it was a strait. The water is mentioned always as "the river," and evidently he had hopes of his explorations being considered important.

The failure of the Half-Moon to put in at Holland instead of Dartmouth is readily explained by the fact that the crew was in command of the vessel and had no desire to proceed to Holland, where they must have met the consequences of their mutiny.

Of the fourth and fatal voyage little is known save from the record of a man who betrayed his Captain. With food supplies low, the cold and ice precipitated another and a disastrous mutiny. At a point in Hudson's Bay whose exact locality is not recorded, Hudson was set adrift in an open boat, together with the sick of the crew, one loyal man, and the boy, John Hudson, who was supposed to be his son.

Here the world's record of him ends as absolutely as it begins. His is the unique fame of one known only by his deeds, perishing pitiably with the stamp of failure upon him, yet afterward to be recorded as one of the world's most notable discoverers.

The northwest passage itself, it may be remarked in conclusion, remained unachieved until its accomplishment became of little material moment. It is scarcely more than a year since Capt. Roald Amundsen sailed through it in his sloop Gjoa, by a curious concidence on the three hundredth anniversary of Hudson's first voyage in its search.

Experiences of a Great Editor.

Brought intimately in touch with the leading personages and important events of his day, the editor of a great newspaper is naturally the repository of information, anecdote, opinion of a character more interesting and illuminating, oftentimes, than the regular news purveyed through the columns of his daily journal. Hence the announcement that the life and correspondence of John Thaddeus Delane, editor of The London Times from 1840 until Disraeli's last administration, in 1876, will be published this Spring by Charles Scribner's Sons, gives promise of a most interesting volume. The correspondence in question has been compiled from hitherto unpublished letters by Mr. Delane's nephew, Arthur Irwin Dasent. Mr. Delane's private diaries and correspondence cover the period between Sir Robert Peel's return to office and Disraeli's last administration, and describe at first hand the repeal of the corn laws, the Crimean war, and the fall of the "Coalition Cabinet," the ascendency of Palmerston, the Indian mutiny, the death of the Prince Consort and the seclusion of the Court after 1861, Delane's controversy with Bright and Cobden, the Schleswig-Holstein dispute, the reform bills of 1866 and 1867, the Fenian conspiracy, the disestablishment of the Irish Church, the American civil war, the Franco-Prussian war, and the recrudescence of the Eastern question. The correspondence includes not only numerous confidential letters from Palmerston, Disraeli, Lord Clarendon, and other statesmen of the Victorian age, but others, of hardly inferior interest, from men and women prominent in literary, political, artistic, and social life.

BOSTON GOSSIP OF LATEST BOOKS

Interesting Suggestions of Literary Publicity—Several Important Books of Reminiscence in This Season's List.

BOSTON, March 27.—Byron delighted in the malicious distortion of Scripture. "Now, Barabbas was a publisher"; the average author of to-day behaves as if he fancied that the publishing business long ago fell into the hands of Dagonet, Wamba, and their brethren, and instructs, corrects, and advises the firm issuing his book as if it were engaged in its first venture. As for his suggestions, they are as the stars of heaven for number, and about as far from the path of mundane usefulness, and it is to be hoped that all the gifted Hopkinses, and even the Chattertons and Shelleys of the future will see a little pamphlet entitled "Books and Publicity," just issued by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and describing exactly what is done for the success of a book, both before and after actual issue. As it is printed on one side of Japanese paper and generally elegant of aspect, it may be expected to become scarce in a very short time, but those fortunate enough to obtain it will have a new respect for the omniscience of a house armed with 375 lists, classifying 500,000 persons by their tastes in literature. They will perceive that its circulars, advertisements, and descriptive matter do not, as they have supposed, fall impartially, as falls the plague on men, but are aimed as carefully as Locksley's arrow or Leatherstocking's bullet, and they will refrain from giving advice—for as much as a week. Miracles are rare.

The only Riverside Press Edition of this Spring will be the long-announced "Bibliography of Ralph Waldo Emerson," compiled by Mr. George Willis Cooke. In the Autumn will appear Bernard's life of the designer and printer Geofroy T. Tory, with elaborate illustrations, and the work of preparing it and of making readers for the great folio "Divina Commedia," which it is hoped to have ready in 1910, has been so absorbing that all other Spring publications have been foregone. It is possible that some small books will come in the Autumn. Of the four issued in 1907, the "Poems" of Maria Lowell, the Garrick correspondence, Sir Thomas Browne's "Hydriotaphia," and Mr. Harold Murdock's "Earl Percy's Dinner Table," only a few copies remain.

Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have received a letter from the Duke of Northumberland expressing his pleasure in reading the last named book. His own Earl Percy days are ended, and his son, who at present uses the courtesy title, is a member of the House of Commons.

The C. M. Clark Publishing Company has nearly ready "A Random Shaft," by "Jude Macmillar," a simple story written, according to the author, in desperaation born of his law partner's reiterated reminiscences of service in the Philippines. As the partner was an enthusiastic Sergeant of volunteers, it need hardly be said that the Filipinos appear not as injured patriots, but as the species of savage that muster 1,500 men for an unsuccessful effort to capture twenty Americans. As an evidence of the good-natured contempt in which Gen. Lawson's forces held the natives, and as a description of scouting in a tropical swamp, the book has historical value, but as fiction it is not above the average of first attempts.

Among the other books on the company's Spring list are "In the Mountain's Shadow," by Mary Rodney, with its scene laid on an Idaho ranch; "The Law of Love," by Charles St. Morris and "The King's Mark," by Ella M. Bangs. Probably the next one to appear will be "A Cowboy Cavalier," by Miss Harriet C. Morse, whose brother, Mr. Samuel F. B. Morse, Yale, '07, illustrates it. Miss Morse has been traveling for some years, living in Paris at intervals, but preferred to write of the Texan scenes and personages which were among her earliest memories.

Among the Spring announcements of Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. is the second volume of Mr. J. B. Atlay's "Victorian Chancellors," completing the work, and "In Greece with the Classics," by Mr. William Amory Gardner, a volume composed of original translations, descriptive, lyric, or dramatic. A slight thread of a narrative connects these passages and makes an ideal literary guide.

Messrs. Sherman, French & Co. announce "Voices and Visions," by Mr. Clinton Scollard, his first volume since the issue of "The Lyric Bough." It will be composed of three parts, "The Book of Nature," "The Book of Love," and "Out of the Order." The title is one of Mr. Aldrich's phrases.

RECENT ART BOOKS BRIEFLY NOTICED

Handbook on Velasquez's Life and Works—History of Sculpture—Renaissance Masters—Devotional Pictures.

VELASQUEZ. An Account of His Life and Works. By Albert F. Calvert and C. Gasquoine Hartley. New York: John Lane Company. $1.25 net; postage, 15 cents.

FOR nearly two centuries Velasquez was but a name in the dictionary of arts. His tercentenary, celebrated on the 6th of June, 1899, three hundred years from the day of his birth in Seville, was the first commemoration of the event that could be said to possess any special and international significance. One can discover few parallels to the quick neglect which overtook his paintings after his death, in 1660, or to the equally rapid and sustained appreciation they have gained during the last few decades. To-day Velasquez has come anew into his kingdom of fame. He is, above all, acclaimed the painter's painter; he is not an old master, but one whose influence lives still in contemporary art.

Much has been written about Velasquez, and, thanks to the perfection of modern photography, every one may become acquainted with his pictures, which, after all, is the one way to know this master. And the object of this book is to induce the reader to turn to the pictures of Velasquez, many of which are here reproduced. It is not an exhaustive treatise of the painter's work, nor a full biographical essay, still less is it a handbook to explain his pictures. It is just an invitation, as it were, to look more carefully at the pictures themselves, and as such can be commended to all who are interested in making the acquaintance of one of the greatest portrait and figure painters that the world has ever seen. The list of the paintings of Velasquez, together with an indication of where the originals may be found, is in itself a valuable guide to the student.

In this book the author has not attempted to write a new textbook. In his consideration of this particular field of art he has taken the broad view that all great art is essentially national art, and that therefore it can only be understood in the light of national and international history, which has prompted him to give more attention to the artistic interpretation of historical events and social circumstances than most historians of art have deemed necessary. The subject is treated throughout from the standpoint of one who believes that the great schools of sculpture were created not by individuals of genius but by the people to whom they appealed.

This method has entailed several consequences. It has led the author to deal rather curtly with pre-Hellenic art—particularly with that of the Mycenaean age. His reason is that ivory work and goldsmithery, by which Mycenaean art can best be illustrated, do not come within the scope of his book. And references to such schools as the modern German and the American have been omitted in the belief that they would have added little to the strength of his main argument. For the same reason, evidently, comparatively little space has been devoted to biographical details concerning individual artists, even of the first class, and the author has referred only to the most characteristic of their works.

While not an illuminating piece of criticism, the book is nevertheless an interesting contribution to the literature of art history.

THE MADONNA IN ART AND VERSE. Selected and arranged by the editor of "Songs for Christmas," "Songs for Easter," &c. Rockland, Ill.: A. W. Crampton.

This is a selection of well-known devotional paintings, accompanied by devotional text in the shape of poems by authors no less well known than the painters represented in the illustrations. The reproductions are fairly good and the typography, paper, and binding of the kind used for Easter holiday books. The intent and purpose of the book is well set forth in the conclusion of the editor's preface, wherein he says that "in the hope that some soothing, comforting, or devotional thoughts may be suggested to the readers, this volume is sent forth, in the spirit of the Church, asking for its godspeed."

RENAISSANCE MASTERS: The Art of Raphael, Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Titian, Correggio, Botticelli, and Rubens. By George B. Rose. New York and London: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.

The design of this book is to give in a brief compass an insight into the essential characteristics of each of the masters treated, so that the traveler may be able to enjoy them for what they are, without looking for merits in one which can be found only in another. Even the greatest have their limitations, and these as well as their qualities must be understood to derive the fullest pleasure and profit from the contemplation of their achievements. It is, however, not the purpose of the author to endeavor to assist the successors of Morelli in determining the authenticity of pictures. He accepts the results of the latest criticism and based his work on a study of works whose genuineness has been established by the weight of authority, which gives the book a value to those about to take up for the first time their study of the art of the Renaissance.

"THE CRUCIBLE."

"The Crucible," (Macmillan Co., $1.50,) by Mark Lee Luther, is a quickly moving story of an entirely innocent but high-spirited and clever girl, who is started in life with the handicap of three years in a reformatory. From the time that Jean makes her escape and meets in the forest a young chap who unconsciously prevails upon her to return to her prison, the girl holds to her intention of keeping herself apart from her surroundings with a wonderful tenacity of purpose. Her subsequent struggles in New York, where she is successively a cloakmaker, shopgirl, office assistant, artist's model, and student, give an opportunity for some vividly colored pictures of the conditions of the average working girl's life. There is much of weakness and vice, and the ever shadowing horror of the reformatory, but the heroine remains instinctively loyal to inherent ideals and reaches a safe haven through a rather spectacular climax. The illustrations are by Rose Cecil O'Neill and are in her happiest vein.

Gossip About Various Authors.

William Heinemann, the English publisher, has returned to London from Florence, where he took some snapshots of De Morgan, the novelist. The latter spends much of his time in Florence, a city that furnished some of the scenes in "Joseph Vance." Most of the snapshots were taken in the picturesque Park Cachine, where Shelley wrote his "Ode to the West Wind," and a few on the Lung Arno, where Dante is said to have met Beatrice. The man revealed in these snapshots is arrayed in a dazzling check suit of singular fit, has a long, lanky figure and a thin, bearded face that reminds one pleasantly of "Uncle Sam."

Miss Louise Maunsell Field, who publishes her first novel, "Katherine Trevalyan," this week, is a New Yorker by birth, both her parents belonging to families that have lived here for several generations. Her grandfather collaborated with G. P. R. James in a novel, and also wrote a volume of "Memories." Miss Field's first attempt at composition was made when, at the age of 11, she wrote a tragedy. Her first published article appeared in The Critic.

Josephine Daskam Bacon is spending the Winter in Bermuda, where she is writing a serial, "An Idyll of All Fool's Day," the first installment of which appears in the April number of The American Magazine.

John T. McCutcheon, who is at present illustrating the Dooley articles, has just sailed on the Oceanic for a six weeks' cruise through the West Indies. George Ade accompanies him.

Dr. Van Eeden's Realistic Novel.

The visit to this country of Dr. Frederick Van Eeden, the Dutch novelist, poet, and leader in practical communism, has attracted unusual attention to the man who came to America "because he had something very serious to tell," and who thought we would listen "because we like to fight despotism." One of Dr. Van Eeden's realistic novels, "The Quest," has been translated into English and was published in this country last year. Through special arrangements with Dr. Van Eeden and his translator this novel has been added to Dodd, Mead & Co.'s list, and will hereafter be sold by them.

The Scene of "The Ancient Law."

Readers of Ellen Glasgow's novel, "The Ancient Law," have written repeatedly asking if the Tappahannock in the story is really the Tappahannock of old Virginia. In reply the author states that her Tappahannock is not the Tappahannock on the map. It is a smaller place, the name of which she does not wish to publish. But the tobacco warehouses and the streets and roads are in reality, she assures us, just as she described them in her book.

ROBERT LEE DURHAM'S

GREAT AMERICAN NOVEL

THE CALL OF THE SOUTH

With Six Striking Illustrations by Henry Roth, $1.50

Dealing with the very vital race problem, its principal theme is the danger to society from the increasing miscegenation of the white and black races. Mr. Durham has written an absorbing drama of life; and, whether the reader agrees with him or not, his restraint and the evident honesty of his purpose will merit admiration.

But after all it is the story which he tells which will cause the book to be read and discussed. A story of tremendous force and intense realism.

The Barrier

By Rex Beach

The big, new Rex Beach novel is out at last, and early readers have discovered that it is even better than "The Spoilers." This in eight days. Will it be the unanimous verdict? It will. For the story is big with the swing and dash and color which spell success. "THE BARRIER" tells a triumphant love story of Alaska. The people are intensely human and intensely alive. There is, too, an alluring mystery, and an undercurrent of delightful humor runs through it all. The drawings in colors are unusual.

The Judgment of Eve

By May Sinclair

How was Agnes Purcell to know that she was making a choice for the worse when she married the man she loved? How was she to foresee the inevitable decline? This novel is the story of a courageous girl who did not shirk—and a tremendous plea in favor of race suicide. A story, vivid and with a message.

The Cat and the Canary

By Margaret Cameron

For pure fun—delicious, upbubbling, running over humor, this story will last while men and women care to laugh over innocent complications. There isn't a cat in the whole story and there isn't a canary, but there is a "nightie"—and—it's worth reading about.

The Greater Mischief

By Margaret Westrup

Love story of mystery and smiling pathos, with a notable new type of girl for a heroine. This girl's mother is a remarkable woman, and her relations to her children and their comrades form a gracious and lovable picture. And, too, there is Euphemia, a "fat, moralless dog"—all well worth meeting.

Seraphica

By Justin Huntly McCarthy

Seraphica is a duchess, and the story is the romance of her life in the brilliant days when King Louis XV. was a boy and a regent was on the throne. Seraphica is young and gay and curious. A dainty comedy.

"The American Nation," that great 27 vol. History, is just completed after seven years of close application. A booklet telling of this wonderful work is yours for the asking.

THE SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL.

What needs my Shakespeare, for his honoured bones,
The labour of an age in pilèd stones?
Or that his hallowed relics should be hid
Under a star-ypointing pyramid?
Dear son of Memory, great heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such weak witness of thy name?
Thou, in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thyself a livelong monument.
For whilst, to the shame of slow-endeavouring art,
Thy easy numbers flow, and that each heart
Those Delphic lines with deep impression took;
Then thou, our fancy of itself bereaving,
Dost make us marble, with too much conceiving;
And, so sepulchred, in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.
MILTON.

THE proposal to commemorate the tercentenary of Shakespeare's death by the dedication of a great monument has gained such headway as to render probable its success. "The reproach will in due course be wiped away from the capital of the empire that it possesses no fitting monument of the greatest literary genius who ever used the English tongue." So reads an English newspaper leader.

Is this expectation justified? Is it likely that the present generation of British sculptors and architects will create a "fitting" monument—one adequate to the genius of the author of "King Lear" and "Hamlet"?

No one dreams that that is likely or even possible. What, then, is it hoped, is it proposed, to do? To erect in Marylebone, on a pretty half moon of green, at present occupied by a statue of the grandfather of King Edward, (who kindly consents to its removal,) a huge structure, (it is hoped to spend a million on it,) including a statue? One thinks of the "magnificent" pile of stone in Hyde Park styled the "Albert Memorial," or of another like huge pile at Coblentz on the Rhine, and has a good notion of what the "World's Tribute" to the immortal poet will be. One can quite see it in imagination: A pyramid of granite, marble, porphyry, and verd antique, with sylobate and marble reliefs—poets on the E. side, dramatists on the N., philosophers on the W., and historians on the S. Marble groups of Tragedy, Comedy, Lyric Poetry, &c., Europe, America, &c., clustered columns of colored stone upholding a canopy gorgeously embellished with glittering mosaics, gilding, medallions, more reliefs, depicting scenes in the dramatist's life; his birthplace, the Globe Theatre, his second-best bed, &c. A bronze figure pretending to represent the subject of all this extravagance.

Hundreds of thousands, mostly Americans, annually will go to see it. They will forsake the delectable attractions of Regent Street and turn toward the Shakespeare Memorial.

A creation like the Albert Memorial adequately commemorates the life of the excellent consort of Victoria. The Duke of Kent is sufficiently celebrated in the monument which now stands in Park Crescent—though its unincumbered green would be more pleasing to the eye than the statue which now fills it. The Sherman Statue at Fifty-ninth Street and the Shaw Memorial opposite the State House in Boston, yes, other monuments, a small proportion of those which the admiration of men for other men have erected, fittingly celebrate the characters and careers of their heroes. Some of us feel, however, that the genius of Shakespeare surpasses that of any artist who could be called upon to commemorate it; some of us wonder whether we should not do him the greater honor by deciding that a "World's Monument" would be both impossible and unnecessary.

Local tributes of affection for him and pride in him are proper enough; such profess no adequate descriptive office. The deliberate conception and execution of an international monument is another matter. It is bound to be inadequate. This generation, degenerate in the plastic and architectural arts, may not hope to create a memorial of Shakespeare which succeeding ages will accept. Why attempt it? Has the memory of Shakespeare any need of monumental perpetuation? Are Englishmen or Americans, or is the world, in danger of forgetting him? Is the general estimate of his character such that it is likely to be enhanced by a stack of stone and bronze?

The simple truth of the matter is that Shakespeare stands so far apart from the rest of men of genius as to suggest that he needs either no formal commemoration at all or one very different to that accorded others.

Of course the "world's tribute" to Shakespeare will be made. The number of people to whom successful appeal can be made is enormous. Without much labor the committee will get their million. Much, possibly most, of it will be contributed by Americans. For the next eight years we shall hear Shakespeare spoken of as "the greatest genius who ever used the English tongue," not "the greatest genius of England." The monument will go up. Better second thought may give it the form of a free theatre. The suggestion of The Academy that the fund be devoted to teach people to act and dance and sing for themselves—to play, as well as to play-act—is not foolish, but will not be adopted. At all events the collection of the fund will revive interest in Shakespeare and extend popular appreciation of his works. The monument, bad as it probably will be, will hardly be too much of a price to pay for four years' turning of popular thought toward the master dramatist.

MANY SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL PLANS

Provident Institutions, Hospitals, Model Tenements, a National Theatre and Architectural Monuments Suggested

LONDON, March 19.—The proposed memorial to Shakespeare is arousing considerable interest among literary people, and is, moreover, moving sundry other worthy folk to emerge from their suburban retreats and deliver freakish opinions on how the £200,000 which it is to cost would most suitably be spent. These opinions they pretend to found on a knowledge of what form of commemoration would have been most pleasing to Shakespeare himself, though how they are so positive that Shakespeare would not have cared for a statue, but would thoroughly have approved of a soup kitchen or a block of model workmen's dwellings it is difficult to imagine.

Surely it is hard enough to guess successfully at the probable feelings of a living person in any particular circumstance, and that, moreover, when the person in question is a merely commonplace individual like ourselves. How infinitely more difficult must it be, then, to form an accurate guess as to what would be the feelings of this man, who was in every way as remarkable, and who is, in the bargain, three centuries dead, and how greatly should we admire the perspicacity of those who can reveal to us in such detail Shakespeare's sentiments on the subject of memorials.

There have been all sorts of suggestions, such, for example, as for the foundation of "Shakespeare Homes" for decayed gentlewomen or of model institutions for the improvement of music halls. These suggestions are very likely worthy enough. The only objection to them is that they have no possible connection with Shakespeare. As far as the commemorating of the great man goes it would be quite as sensible to use the £200,000 to form a fund for providing every charwoman in Great Britain with a diamond tiara.

Moreover, another objection is that the people who make these severely utilitarian proposals for almshouses and "Shakespeare Homes" in preference to favoring a purely ornamental memorial show they have no conception whatsoever of the basic principles of memorial raising, which is that a memorial, like a Christmas present, should be something that nobody really needs. Private individuals and communities are alike supposed to provide for themselves such things as they need. Christmas presents and memorials fall both into the same class. They are the trimmings.

The makers of these freakish suggestions are, however, in the minority, and are most of them, I fancy, persons who, unaccustomed to handling any but small sums of money, enjoy a sort of Barmecide feast in the imaginary spending of this £200,000. By far the greatest number of those interested in the matter favor the scheme of erecting a fine architectural monument. Unfortunately, though, the best available site for this monument—Park Crescent, at the top of Portland Place—is in an out-of-the-way neighborhood, which the ordinary Londoner would be most unlikely to visit.

A still further proposal, emanating from the distinguished actor, John Hare, is that the money should be used to establish a national theatre. This last idea is apparently getting more cordial support than any of the rest from literary people. However, since the tercentenary of Shakespeare's death—by which time it is intended that the memorial shall be ready—does not come until 1916, there is still plenty of time for many more suggestions and much arguing.

Those people who wish always to be improving their minds, who cannot take a walk in the country without digging up botanical specimens, nor pay a holiday visit to a foreign city without dutifully visiting all the museums and historical monuments, will approve thoroughly of Mrs. Penny's latest novel, "The Inevitable Law," because they will find in it much interesting information. Other people of less utilitarian views will like the book because it tells a good story.

"The Inevitable Law," which, since its publication by Messrs. Chatto & Windus recently, has had a considerable success, is a story of Indian life and is full of interesting detail about the Hindus and the way they live. Particularly striking is the picture presented of Indian women. Mrs. Penny, the author, has spent nearly twenty years in India studying her subject at first hand. When I saw her a few days ago she told me a number of curious stories about Indian ideas and customs.

"Hindus are like children," said she, "and if you treat them as you would children you will get on very nicely. But if you expect them to behave like grown people, to be perfectly honest, wise, and reliable, and always to tell you the truth—well, you will show yourself to be more foolish than they are."

Mrs. Penny described a party she once went to in India at which there were many natives among the guests. Happening to be near the refreshment tables, she saw several of them examining the food in a fashion that rather discouraged her healthy appetite. The Hindus would pick up a cake or a bon bon, sniff at it, look at it closely, nibble off the end, and—put it back! All this most unconcernedly and quite as a matter of course.

"Disgusting? To be sure it was," said Mrs. Penny, "but then quantities of things we do every day are quite as offensive to them."

Some of Mrs. Penny's impressions of Indian natives will be given in a book of reminiscences which she is issuing in the Autumn with Messrs. Smith & Elder. This will be called "On the Coromandel Coast." She has also coming out in the course of the year a novel which deals with magic and supernatural practices in India.

Some names, like certain numbers and days of the week, seem to be unlucky. The name I have in mind is H. G. Wells. A few months ago H. G. Wells was, I believe, knocked down and killed by a motor car. At first it was thought that the victim had been the distinguished novelist, but it turned out afterward to have been merely a namesake. The other day the same thing happened over again. The death was announced of "Mr. H. G. Wells," but it appeared that the dead man was still a third of the H. G. Wells brotherhood. In this case he was an Indian mutiny veteran who had been present at the fall of Delhi. Perhaps if there are any bearers of this ill-starred name in America they will take warning and make a move toward changing it as soon as possible.

A literary event of some importance will take place next month under rather incongruous auspices. It will be the issuing in the pages of The Chronicle of the London Missionary Society of some hitherto unpublished letters of Robert Louis Stevenson. The letters will be accompanied by some recollections of Stevenson written by two missionaries whom he knew while he was at Samoa. This publication of the letters and the article is specially intended to show Stevenson's attitude toward missions. At first he disliked them very much, but later when he knew more about the subject he became, it is said, extremely enthusiastic about missionaries and their work.

Another letter by a famous author has just come before the public in the shape of Thackeray's autograph letter, which was put up for sale a few days ago. Mention is made in it of Arthur Henry Hallam of Tennyson's "In Memoriam." Thackeray was acknowledging an invitation, but interrupted himself to speak affectionately of the dead young man. "This seems very incoherent," says he afterward in apology. "I don't know why the words came to me, and seem like an insult on poor Harry's grave—and I don't know why I should begin talking to you in this way, answering a note to dinner, but we dine and we die, don't we? And we get suddenly stopped on the high road by a funeral crossing it."

A Publisher Turns Editor.

Mr. E. J. Clode, who for the last five years has been conducting a publishing business under his own name, has accepted the position of editor of Pearson's Magazine. It is said that Mr. Clode's editorial duties, which he will assume on his return from Europe next month, will not interfere with the continuance of his activities as a publisher. He will have a substantial proprietary interest in the magazine.

THE NOVELS OF LEONARD MERRICK.

Introducing the Work of a Man Who Knows Life in Various Aspects—A Realist with a Poet's Mind—Hardship and Struggle Without Bitterness—Sketch of the Novelist's Life and of a Few of His Characters.

By EDWARD A. DITHMAR.

IN attempting to set forth a few reasons why the still comparatively unknown novels of Leonard Merrick should be read by women and men who seek in fiction not only a means of relaxation, but spiritual comfort as well, and an uplifting rather than a mere diversion of the mind, there is no vain idea of introducing Mr. Merrick by name to American readers. Some months ago Mr. Howells said a good word for this neglected author which, it is understood, was measurably influential with the readers if not with the publishers of fiction in these parts. Merrick's books have been carefully reviewed, also, in English and foreign periodicals, and these reviews have been read here by a few with admiration not unmixed with wonder. For they have proclaimed him great, though the response in the book market has as yet been small. His name at this moment is in the air. The writer of this imperfect summary of his achievement can take no credit to himself as a discoverer or forerunner. People know about Merrick. "Oh, yes," you will hear; "I've often heard of him. I've been intending to read one of his books. What is he like?"

You may reasonably say to one of these inquirers that he is a novelist of true lineage. His observation, so far as it has been manifested, may not be quite so broad or so deep as that of one or two of his contemporaries. He may not be as alert as some to ethical bewilderments. His art may seem rather small at times, and he may lack the finest distinction, but his version of the human comedy is veracious; he has acquired a vast knowledge of the inequalities and injustice of modern life; he knows all about living on nothing a year, and without effort he conveys the impression of having sat at good men's boards. He has seen many little things worth seeing in his passage through highways and byways, and he sets them down effectively with a just sense of the humor of them or their pathetic import.

Presumably Mr. Merrick would rather be likened to Meredith than to any of the earlier masters. One of his aspiring actresses (he is very fond of the stage) yearns to be the first to portray Lucy Feverel. But a well-meaning admirer of Merrick, who shudders at the idea of Meredith's Lucy before the footlights, finds little in the younger man's books to suggest the old student of Box Hill. Little, that is, except his skill as a novelist. Merrick is really a novelist, that is the main point.

Above everything he is a realist. Actuality is his aim. To be true to life in details as well as in his essence is his idea of the novelist's mission, and his books, as far as they go, are faithful reproductions of the life of his era, in its complexity, with all its confusion and lack of manners.

The ideal, not the actual, is still the best aim of art, literary and otherwise. The power of imagination that lifts us out of ourselves and transports us from the cares of existence, is the romancer's best gift. Realism in art wears cruelly upon us, after a while. It was all very well, years ago, as a relief from the oversupply of outworn conventions, of the works of imagination done over by the unimaginative. But latterly we have had too much of it. Our best fiction has concerned itself too closely with the sordid facts of life, the littleness of human nature, the difficulties of earning a living. Realism has invaded the higher stage and threatened to dethrone the ideal. Even in opera we have had too much of the details of every-day life, the pot au feu of the bourgeoisie, the clatter of dishes in the kitchen. These are accepted facts.

Yet the realism of Leonard Merrick has painfully enthralled one reader in the scant leisure of some busy weeks. His insistence on actualities notwithstanding, the extraordinary charm of these strangely neglected novels has stirred one mind to which realism had seemed repugnant to positive enthusiasm. The explanation is surely that the mind of Merrick, in spite of his method, is essentially the poet's mind. His sympathies are strong. His sufferings, and he must have suffered intensely in the struggle of life, have not embittered him. He emerges from the ordeal with a beautiful and uplifting faith in humanity. The creator of Mary Bretton, Cynthia Kent, David Lee, the mulatto poet; Macpherson, the Scotch bagman of London wine merchants; Dr. Kincaid, and the lost girl of Kimberley is a sincere student of humanity who has found in an evil age that man is truly akin to the angels, and has the ability to impress that old but often forgotten fact forcibly upon a wavering mind.

That is the principal secret of Leonard Merrick. He has no other secret except the faculty of hard work. His books read easily; their charm is manifested at once, and it holds the reader page by page. It is no heaven-sent charm caught without effort and imparted without labor. It is the charm of painstaking labor, of brave persistence. The "smell of the lamp" is an old, dull phrase. There is no such odor in Merrick's writing. There is nothing in it but truths; truths of the town and the city, of the ocean voyage and the long journey by rail, of the hotel, the pension, the lodgings, of the greenroom and the actors' boarding house, of the humble suburban cottage and the villa with a fancy name; above all, truths of humanity, the man with all his potentialities of good and evil, his ambition, his delusions, his passions, the woman in her vanity and folly, as well as in her faith, her capacity for love, her power of sacrifice.

Leonard Merrick is about 44 years old and a native of the pleasant Hampstead district of London. He was educated at Brighton, and his books indicate that he knows his Paris scarcely less well than he knows his London, that he has visited New York and Chicago, and is familiar with South Africa. He writes of the theatrical calling with the intimacy of one who has been closely associated with it. Not only the vexations of dramatic authors, but the trials of the sensitive actors, the ways of managers and agents, the humors of dressing room and greenroom, the indifference of stage doorkeepers are as an open book to him. He is as familiar with the ups and downs of the actor's life as with those of the authors. Novelists and poets are his favorite protagonists, and the struggle for successful self-expression, in face of the neglect of an overread, overamused, and busy world his favorite theme. It is not the best theme with which to entertain a multitude of readers. Perhaps that is why his uncommonly well-written books have not been more widely read. They have always been "favorably" reviewed. One extraordinary note he strikes in his novels is that of sympathy with the reviewers. This seems almost new.

Another agreeable fact about these stories of conflict with the world is their lack of bitterness. There is as little of downright pessimism in them as there is in Dickens. They do not condemn the world or hold it at fault for the troubles of persons who miss its gifts. Merrick's nature is healthy and hopeful. But so was that of Sisyphus, glorying in his everlasting hope as he perpetually tried to roll the stone up the steep hill. We all know that Sisyphus never got the stone to the summit. So we would not have any possible reader of Merrick infer that the outcome of any one of his books is unalloyed earthly happiness. They are the kind the ordinary reader calls "sad." But the sadness is not hopeless, and it is relieved by cheerfulness quite as lifelike.

"Violet Moses" is a graphic picture of one phase of Jewish middle-class life in London. "The Man Who Was Good" is a work of a deeper and more powerful sort, and the character of Mary Bretton, its heroine, is a study of womanly fidelity to an ideal, and womanly purity, so rare and convincing that, with its companion portrait of high-minded Kincaid, it makes one doubtful if this author is, after all, so stern a realist. But the method of the story is all realistic, and the character of Seaton Carew, the man for whom Mary gives all that life has for her, is such a combination of dull selfishness and unpicturesque vanity as an idealist would scarcely have drawn. He gets nearer the ideal than ever before in his latest work, "The Quaint Companions," in which the companionship of David Lee, the mulatto, and Bee Sorrenford, the cripple, reveals not only an unusual posture of circumstances, but has the true poetic uplift.

In "The Actor Manager" the chief personage is not the somewhat priggish hero, or his feminine alter ego, but Blanche Ellerton, an erring woman, vain and selfish, but not unaccountable and beautifully human. Her sins of spirit and flesh are all laid bare. There is no word of plea in her behalf. But there is so much humanity in her weaknesses, in her ambition, in her opportunism; she has triumphed so largely, and by her own efforts, over circumstances that she enlists some share of sympathy. Like Mrs. Wharton's Lily Bart, she is a heroine in spite of her faults. She is a rather more vital personage than another actress heroine of Merrick's, Meenie Weston, in "When Love Flies Out of the Window." In this story one detects the first suspicion in Merrick's writing of the sop to Cerberus, but it is entertaining, and the portrayal of Parlett, the dyspeptic dramatist, is in itself a little masterpiece.

Cynthia Kent, the heroine of "Cynthia: A Daughter of the Philistines," is a more agreeable personage than either Mary Bretton or Blanche. A veritable Philistine in her girlhood, her mental and moral growth during her early married life is depicted with fidelity and tenderness. While Cynthia rises her husband falls. But we venture to say, in face of assured reproval, that he does not fall very far. He is a better man as the really repentant sinner whose temptation was great enough to conquer a stronger one than he was as the youthful dreamer. For the heroine of "One Man's View" the ordinary reader must have less regard, but one cannot question the verity of the characterization. She is the incarnation of a certain kind of selfishness, which is not luxurious or vulgar; she has a will of her own, a capacity for suffering, and a comprehension of her own defects. She falls through no bluntness of the moral sense, and she pays the price bravely enough and without heroics. As to the double sacrifice of the man who first uplifts and afterward rehabilitates her, we have our doubts. A silk gownsman, who has become Solicitor General, with a Cabinet office in his grasp, is not often, we fancy, the victim of incurable love. In this case the world would accuse him of folly. Here is another indication of Mr. Merrick's dubious position as a realist. The action of the man in this case is ethically right, according to the ethics of romance.

One who reads many of Mr. Merrick's novels discovers after a while that his inventiveness is not prolific. He sees, studies, and knows more frequently than he imagines. His is not the gift of Scheherazade. We find the best proof of this in his one volume of collected short stories called "This Stage of Fools." These are all well written. Discretion, a nice sense of proportion, aptness of phrase, distinguish them all. But the plot of "The Laurels and the Lady" is the Caleb Plummer theme of "The Cricket on the Hearth," with the blind Willy Childers (a sad fool, too,) in Bertha's part, and a lady known as Poll Patchouli playing old Caleb's game —with a difference, of course. One of the other stories is the original draft of "The Man Who Was Good," as the plot of the hero's play in "The Actor Manager" is the plot put to further use in a later novel, "The Worldlings." One of the stories in "This Stage of Fools," called "The Body and Soul of Miss Azulay," praised by one of the author's English admirers as Poe-like, has not a hint of the mystery or horror Poe could impart to a tale. But his short stories are Leonard Merrick's least noteworthy achievements.

One finds in Merrick's novels no clergymen, no cloisters, no talk of the Church. This would have seemed strange in the work of an English novelist treating of everyday life a generation ago. Perhaps it is not so strange now. Stranger, however, in the books of an English novelist, is the scarcity of dumb animals. The Englishman is generally fond of dogs and horses, and has a liking for cats. There is never a noticeable dog or cat in the households Merrick describes. The reader sometimes feels the lack. The presence of a companionable dog would sometimes relieve the situation. One is thankful for the "clip-clop" of the horses' hoofs as Humphrey Kent and Mrs. Doane-Pitt ride homeward from Richmond, for he remembers that the carts on the hot road between Du Toit's Pan and Kimberley seem to be self-propelling. There is never a word about the philosophic mule.

Similarly, Mr. Merrick takes little notice of the humors of the nursery. The infant in "The Actor Manager" enters this life and departs from it without a single special appeal to the reader's sympathy. The incident of the small boy's glove toward the close of "The Man Who Was Good" serves to heighten by contrast a situation whose tragic force is not lessened by its commonplace environment; but in the climax of that book the high lights are all on the self-sacrificing woman, not on the child for whom she gives her life. Cynthia's baby is wholesomely troublesome, for which we may be thankful, and is the hero of one droll situation, while poor little David, studiously avoiding the pretty blue berries of the "deadly nightshirt," is a child who enlists sympathy. But the tenderness of this novelist is generally reserved for grown-up people.

His characterization is his strong point. He permits his readers to become acquainted with his personages without labored introductions. Not one of them bears a label. He is most generous, too, in peopling his human comedy with living entities in the least important rôles. Turquand, the Warrington to the Pendennis of Humphrey Kent, and Miss Mix; Cynthia's baby's formidable nurse; the landlady of the obscure French pension, are as real and complex as the protagonists of the tales in which they figure. The Philistines, such as the parents of Cynthia and her terrible brother, and the faded suburban aunt in "One Man's View," are depicted with photographic accuracy. In reviewing six books one could recall, it seems, a hundred minute characterizations equally true to life, and to all kinds of life. Billy Beaufort, the man of the world, the irresponsible journalist, is a personage who might alone make a novelist's reputation.

We have no idea of claiming for Mr. Merrick the rôle of moralist. He has pictured life rather plainly. But the moralists who read his books may derive some comfort from his denotement of the spiritual woes of two gentlemen who steal their friends' wives. There is no material penalty in either case. The death of the self-satisfied playwright in "One Man's View" is a release not a punishment. But the state of his mind, after the error, and the state of the wealthy idler's mind in the last chapter of "The Actor Manager," are worth considering from a purely moral point of view.

Mr. Merrick is a novelist who has not yet fully delivered his message. Those persons who have derived aesthetic gratification from his books are encouraged, as acquaintance with them increases, to hope for less of actuality and more of the spiritual from him in the future. We can get along with less specific information about the mere struggle for shelter and bread and butter, with fewer details of the proceedings in pawnshops, and the makeshifts of the impecunious. As a student of human nature as it exists to-day he has few equals.

"Cynthia" and "The Man Who Was Good" have been published by R. F. Fenno & Co.; "One Man's View" by Herbert L. Stone; "When Love Flies Out of the Window" by D. Appleton & Co., and "The Worldlings" by Doubleday, Page & Co. Most of his novels are included in the Tauchnitz edition, Leipsic, and doubtless all of the English editions of his books can be obtained by addressing some London bookseller.

JESUITS IN NORTH AMERICA.

A HISTORY OF THE SOCIETY OF JESUS IN NORTH AMERICA, COLONIAL AND FEDERAL. By Thomas Hughes. Text, Vol. I., 1,580-1,645. Documents, Vol. I., Part I, 1,605-1,638. Cleveland: Burrows Brothers.

FEW people know the wide extent of the political influence of the Jesuits, especially in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Their activity was spread throughout the world and aroused the antipathy and suspicion of very many nations, which ultimately led to the suspension of the order in the middle of the eighteenth century. Quite recently a grand scheme has been evolved by the General of the Jesuits to give the history of the order in all countries, derived in the main from the archives of the society, which have hitherto remained secret. Of course, this will only give the history of the society from the point of view of the Jesuit, but this has never been adequately set forth, and the claims of historic impartiality render it desirable that the defense should be heard.

The present two volumes are part of the larger scheme and are devoted mainly to a history of the Jesuits in Maryland. The more extensive title is thus somewhat misleading, since the volumes do not deal with Canada and therefore do not compete with the fascinating work of Parkman, nor have they anything to say of Mexico, which ought also to be included under North America. The excuse for the elimination is that the present works deal with the English-speaking colonies, and that means, of course, for the Colonial period of Maryland, which alone gave refuge to avowed Roman Catholics, owing to the fact that Lord Baltimore himself was of that religion.

The first of the volumes deals with the history of the Jesuits in Maryland only up to 1645, and the second volume prints most of the material bearing out the statements of the history. Devoting something like 1,000 pages to the history of fifteen years, 1633 to 1645, it is obvious that the volumes contain a very detailed account of this portion of Maryland history viewed from the Roman Catholic standpoint. Much of this, however, deals with the missions sent out from Maryland to the Indians or to the West Indian Islands. The somewhat adventuresome career of John Lewger is gone into in much detail, and his somewhat remarkable attempt to divorce Church and State in Maryland. Curiously, there are a number of rather intricate points of canon law involved in some of the issues raised, and these are gone into with some elaborateness by Father Hughes.

It is obvious from this description that the volumes under review are rather materials for history than history itself, and are more suitable for specialists in Maryland history than for the general reader or even for the historical student of American history in general. But the work is done with the thoroughness with which Jesuit scholarship is associated, and if the standpoint taken is rigidly that of the society, that is, indeed, only what might have been expected, and constitutes to a large extent the value of this contribution to local Maryland history. The genealogist will doubtless find much to interest him in the volumes, and they will take their proper position in the series of which they in a measure form a part. But for the rest it must be allowed that they constitute a part of that class of books described by Charles Lamb as "Biblia A-Biblia."

SOMETHING DOING.

A MILLION OF MONEY. By Alice Maud Meadows, author of "Out from the Night," "Days of Doubt," &c. 12mo. Pp. 365. New York: Brentano's. $1.50.

Any doubt which may be felt as to whether the English "penny dreadful" is still a factor in literature will be quickly dispelled by a perusal of "A Million of Money." Between its covers are three murders, four marriages, and a variety of other incidents, nearly any one of which would furnish plot enough for a story. And, if the shocking truth must be confessed, the parts about the murders are the most readable of any. The mysteries surrounding the poisoned chocolates that were sent to Lady Gertrude Pembroke, and the stabbing of John Appleford are much more interesting than the dilemma of Lord Beauclair, who loves Mona Winter, but hesitates to say so because she is as poor as himself. There is a host of characters, including two detectives, a number of society women, one Prince, a shopgirl or two, and an American millionaire. It is not too great praise to say that the author of this story is a worthy successor of The Duchess.

SHORT STORY IN A BOOK.

THE CAT AND THE CANARY. By Margaret Cameron. Illustrated by W. D. Stevens. Decorations by Bertha Stuart. 12mo. Pp. 62. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.

That a short magazine story should after nearly two years be republished in book form shows that there is, or at least that the publishers think there is, some feature in it which is particularly good. Among all the tales that are written solely for amusement a large percentage have small grounds of probability; readers are satisfied if they are made to laugh. In this one the humor is heightened by the plausibility of the situations. The title gives no indication of its contents, and as the author evidently did not intend that it should, it would be unfair to divulge the plot. Suffice it to say that the trouble is caused by a nightdress which Barry McLean pilfers from his neighbor's clothesline, or rather purchases, for he leaves a five-dollar bill in its place. The book is attractively made, and would be suitable for a gift.

CARE OF THE TREE.

THE TREE DOCTOR. By John Davey. Illustrated. Pp. 225. 8vo. Akron, Ohio: The Saalfield Publishing Company. $2.

THIS is a book written by an enthusiastic tree lover, and one who, moreover, has made it his business to study trees, their injuries, diseases, and methods of preservation. The subject is discussed in a broader and more entertaining manner than the title would suggest. Some readers may be disappointed that Mr. Davey does not go more thoroughly into the science of tree doctoring, but what the volume lacks in this respect is more than compensated for in the well-directed appeal for intelligent education in the principles of tree life instead of merely emotional admiration.

Who does his duty is a question
But he, I venture the suggestion,
 Does part of his that plants a tree,

said James Russell Lowell, and Mr. Davey agrees with him, but he makes it plain that planting is but one step, and usually the easiest, in the process. The selection must come first, then the planting, and afterward continuous common sense attention. Careless selection of trees for city streets has led the author to give some helpful suggestions on the best varieties. He places the Norway maple first, then the American elm, hard maples, sycamore or the plane tree, pin oak, horse chestnut, and other kinds for special localities.

"What about the Carolina poplar?" some one may ask. Mr. Davey is prepared for the question, for he scathingly replies: "Oh, never mention it unless it be to plant around your barnyard."

The large number of photographs, 213, with which the book is embellished, comprise an object lesson in themselves of the value and benefits of tree culture. Several of them show the successful doctoring of large trees by cutting away the diseased wood and filling up the cavity with cement, a practice that has lately been adopted quite extensively by owners of large estates who are anxious to preserve the life and beauty of their old trees.

A CHARMING STORY OF WANDERINGS IN MOROCCO.

THE SHEPHERD OF THE STARS. By Frances Campbell. Pp. 306. 12mo. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co.

Few more delighthful books have come our way for many a moon. The girls Felicia and Pickle and their entirely charming Shepherd endear themselves to us on the first page, and win our hearts unconditionally before the end of the chapter. But the clear-cut characterization and the fund of humor and humanity in the book make up only a small part of its charm. The author's power of transmitting impressions of colors, sounds, scents, moods, and a host of other delicate things usually incommunicable is almost magical. Even those who do not know the East seem to catch the "Morocco smell," which is compounded of "pepper, spice, mint, and incense, camels, and saffron." And every reader will be able to hear the echo of the weird, lovely, wicked pipe-tune passing in the street one silent dawning—"Who played that flute in the morning air? I am sure it was Mephistopheles going home from a night's work well pleased with himself."

Altogether it is an utterly delightful and beguiling book, and those of us born with the spirit of adventure in our hearts feel impelled, as we read it, to seize staff and water gourd and go out and seek our fortunes upon the winding, golden roads of the East.

MEDICAL MISSIONARY WORK IN CHINA.

Medical missionary work is perhaps the most justifiable form of foreign evangelism. There may be discussion as to the requirements of the Asiatic's soul, but there can be no two opinions concerning the needs of his body. It may or may not be necessary to bring religious enlightenment to the Confucians and Buddhists, but there is no doubt that they have something to learn about hygiene and sanitation. Dr. Osgood's book gives a very clear and enthusiastic account of the hospitals and private medical practices established by the missionaries in China. The good work done by these physicians and nurses deserves the attention of the reading and thinking world, and the fervent religious note throughout the book is so deep and earnest and heartfelt that it must command respect even from those who have no sympathy with the evangelical movements.

IN DEVONSHIRE.

THIS is an odd book. The notion of making an octavo of this portliness for general circulation, when the only nexus between the characters and the events recorded is that they lived or they happened in Devonshire, is what constitutes the oddity. The local nexus is of interest, one would say, merely to Devonians, if that is what they call themselves, though it seems that they rather call themselves men of Devon—North or South, as the case may be. Yet the compiler has managed to bring within his covers much curious information, both about characters and events.

There are not many readers, one supposes, who will find nothing new in the chapter, for example, on "Wife Sales." The chapter shows not only that the fine old British custom of wife-selling still obtains, if not "at Smithfield," but at least until very lately did it obtain in Devonshire. It shows also that it is impossible to convince the bold peasantry of that county that a man is not perfectly within his rights in leading an unsatisfactory or incompatible spouse by the halter to the nearest market place and there disposing of her to the highest bidder, or that the successful bidder does not acquire a perfectly good title.

Some of the historical personages are worthy of more than local fame, Maria Foote, for example, afterward Countess of Harrington, so much more sinned against than sinning, and so much in view in London fourscore years ago. Then there is that shocking reprobate and ruffian John Froude, the "Parson Chowne" of Blackmore's "Maid of Sker." There is the wandering maid of all work, Mary Wilcocks, who imposed herself upon her own neighbors as the Oriental Princess "Caraboo." There are all the rest of the "Devonshire characters."

The latest, most current, and most "actual" of the "Devonshire characters" is as racy of the soil as any of his forerunners, and to Americans is the most interesting of any. For he is that fine old British sea dog, Captain Chichester, R. N., afterward Rear Admiral Sir Edward Chichester, Bart., who had the luck to command His British Majesty's Immortalité at the time Commodore Dewey held the Harbor of Manila. Then and there it was that the painful and conscientious German Admiral, Dietrich, boarded him to inquire what he would do in case the Americans bombarded Manila, and received the famous answer: "That is a matter known only to Dewey and me." The present Autolycus does not snap up that unconsidered trifle about the apology of Dietrich via Chichester: "You see, Sir, the Germans have no sea manners." But, in revenge, he gives us a less familiar tale about the Devonian sea dog, now promoted to the Rear Admiralty and succeeded to the baronetcy, and being "received" in North Devon by a welcoming procession, headed by his own reverend brother, who read him an "address," informally responded: "You said that very well, Pass'n Charles." But very good reading, all of it.

THE MAD KING.

LUDWIG II., KING OF BAVARIA. By Clara Tschudi. Translated by Ethel Harriet Hearn. In one volume. Pp. 275. 8vo. Cloth. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $2.50.

The poor Mad King has had a great deal written about him and his pitiful death—so much that one feels a sense of guilt toward his harassed spirit when one reads anything fresh about the life which to him was such an insupportable and humiliating burden. But so picturesque a figure will continue to be made the pivot of romance and biography for long to come, and we can at least be grateful when the work is done with sympathy and dignity.

One of the most recent publications concerning the fate of this unhappy King is "Ludwig the Second," by Clara Tschudi. It is well and readably compiled, but, as usual, has suffered in the translation. The process of transmuting one lingual metal into another is one which is at its best unsatisfactory in its results. The value of the original substance is almost always depreciated, even in the deftest hands, and Miss Hearn does not appear to be a skilled craftsman. She has a somewhat involved style, and lacks that fine sense of verbal balance which is sometimes termed "meter in prose."

The book, however, is entertaining, and of some biographical value, as the author seems to have prepared herself for the task with exhaustive and painstaking research concerning every phase of Ludwig's career. The chapters covering the period of his childhood are particularly interesting.

FOR MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS.

THE COMPLETE MOUNTAINEER. By George D. Abraham, member of the Climbers' Club, the Swiss Alpine Club, &c. Illustrated. Pp. xi.-493. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. 1908.

THIS book, written by a British member of the Climbers' Club and of the Swiss Alpine Club, describes from a standpoint different from that of any previous work, and certainly with a greater intimacy of detail, the celebrated peaks of Great Britain and the Continent. It is literally a study of footholds. Mont Blanc, the Jungfrau, the Wetterhorn, the Schreckhorn, all the Alps ranges of Switzerland, Italy, France, and Austria, and the noble heads of England, Scotland, and Wales, besides some of the loftiest of Asia and America, here submit themselves to the cuts and inscriptions of the expert mountaineer, whose technique has mastered them all.

It is a book for beginners in the sport of mountain climbing. The latter half of the volume, following the part devoted to the author's home mountains, treats of the finest rock, snow, and glacier climbs of the Alps, with a thorough discussion of their delights, their drawbacks, and their perils craftily to be avoided. The first part, entitled "A Brief History and the Technicalities of the Sport," gives specifications of accoutrement—climbing boots, where and how to get them; ropes and knots, balanced ice axes, ruecksacks, lanterns, colored goggles, drinking cups, climbing irons, compasses, aneroids, maps, and climbers' clothes—and instructions in technique by which marvelous and stupendous feats of ascent may be accomplished with comparative safety. The philosophy of choice of guides especially, and when to do without them, is set forth with gratifying lucidity. The volume is illustrated with half-tone photographs, is well indexed, and contains a glossary of mountaineering terms prepared for beginners and non-climbing readers.

BLOK'S HISTORY OF THE NETHERLANDS.

HISTORY OF THE PEOPLE OF THE NETHERLANDS. By Petrus Johannes Blok. Translated by Oscar A. Bierstadt. Five parts. Part IV., Frederick Henry Van De Witt, William III. 8vo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.50.

THE merits of this history of the Dutch people are now well known; they have been detailed in these columns in reviews of preceding volumes of this translation. It is therefore unnecessary to dilate upon the present installment, the penultimate one of the whole history. Prof. Blok's work combines the two great qualities needed for history—profound research and vigorous literary style. The author's control of the sources is shown on almost every page by special details derived from manuscript materials.

It cannot be said that the present volume is of interest and importance equal to the preceding ones, since, though the period is known to Dutchmen as the Golden Age, it has not that romance which marks the earlier history, even in the somewhat pompous pages of Motley, so profoundly interesting. The present volume deals with two of the great heroes of Dutch history, John De Witt and William III., but the latter is not an attractive figure, even when embellished with all Macaulay's skill, and the De Witts failed in their great task—at any rate temporarily—and have only the pathos of their failure. But Prof. Blok does not depend for the attractiveness of his pages on the colossal characters that stalk across them; his is a history of the people of the Netherlands as well as of its great men and institutions. It has full details of the industrial and commercial history which made Holland great during this period. He has a most interesting account of the tulip mania and of the East and West India Companies, and does not leave out of account the mathematicians and philosophers like Bernoulli and Spinoza. Altogether this is an admirable piece of historical work well deserving of being reproduced in English, as has been done by Mr. Oscar A. Bierstadt in a very adequate manner.

A SCHOOL TEACHER'S LIFE.

THE MEASURE OF THE RULE. By Robert Barr. 12mo. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.50.

Mr. Barr has written the tale of a young man who becomes a teacher in a public school. The account of Prentiss's struggles with insubordinate pupils and domineering superiors is well written, and is doubtless most photographic, but it must be admitted that the author has chosen a singularly colorless phase of social life, colorless at least so far as fictional uses are concerned. It does not appear to be one of Mr. Barr's happiest achievements.

VIEWS OF READERS.

Sir George Trevelyan Notes a Correction in His History—More Light is Shed on "Spero"—Horace Greeley as a Poet—Value of Travel Letters.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

WITH reference to your correspondent "Hartford's" letter of Feb. 29, 1908, I may say that his correction about Gov. Trumbull had already been brought to my notice by an eminent American historian. The words "between the Ministry which had placed him in his office" will stand in future editions "between the King under whose authority he held his office."

GEORGE OTTO TREVELYAN.

"Dum Spiro Spero."

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

After replying to the appeal of "M. J. F.," I notice the comments on Americanisms and regret that I had not exercised my Yankee birthright of guessing as I had intended.

"Dum Spiro Spero" ("While I breathe I hope") is the legend of a New England (New Hampshire) family dating back to the 1640's, and is it not possible that the word "spero" was used as a gentle intimation that the amateur performance was more of a hope than of a fruition?

It is strange how a word or a phrase will attract attention, be picked up and worked until it loses all trace of its original meaning, then drop into oblivion. How many, except a few old battered hulks, will remember "A big thing on Schneider," so common fifty years ago, and how many who used the phrase know its origin? CHARLES H. MOSES.

Brooklyn, March 24.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

A lady writes me as follows: "'Spero' has been in such common use in my family that it had not occurred to me it was not a 'dictionary word.' We have been 'Cape Cod folks' from the first settlers."

It is now settled, I think, that at one time this word was in use in many parts of New England; the wonder is that it has escaped the writers of dialect stories. Mr. Heuser's scholarly letter supports my contention—that "spero" is not a variation of "spree," and seems to prove that it is of English origin.

HENRY BALDWIN.

New York, March 21.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I would suggest another, and I think a more fitting, meaning for the word "spero," as noted in the last two issues. I believe the word to be none other than the Saxon word "spaer," ("spoer,") in every-day English, "spare," meaning moderate, small, frugal.

I have noticed many Saxon words used, with some little alterations, in this neighborhood, by elderly people, words that I have heard used in out-of-the-way places in Sussex and Hampshire, England.

Did Greeley Write Verse?

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I challenge the assertion made by R. L. C. White in the issue of March 14 that Horace Greeley never wrote verse.

I certainly cut from The New York Tribune during the Benjamin Harrison campaign a song—words and music—as sung in the William Henry Harrison campaign, and the words were written by Horace Greeley! If his own paper is not authority, perhaps his daughter, Mrs. Gabrielle Greeley Clendenin of Westchester, N. Y., could tell us if these spirited lines were erroneously attributed to her father. If he could write these verses, there must be others. A. J. BROWN.

Somers, N. Y., March 18.

Lord Cromer and Chinese Gordon.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

The leading review in your issue of Saturday, March 21, that of Lord Cromer's "Modern Egypt," seems to betray his Lordship in the manifest attempt to satisfy the personal animosity known to have been cherished by the politician Baring against the hero Gordon in 1881, by bringing Gordon's career into contempt twenty-three years after that noble and brilliant career was ended. The vengeance now had by the "greatest living Englishman" must be delicious indeed! No memory in England is lovelier to-day than that of Chinese Gordon. Officialdom may erect a monument to Cromer in Cairo, but Gordon's figure shall ever stand sublime in Trafalgar Square, placed there by the English people, and loving hands will continue to lay fresh flowers on Gordon's recumbent bronze in St. Paul's, when no one shall have the curiosity to ask after Cromer's tomb. And yet we must now know that Gordon was a man of "grandiose and preposterous ambition," for in such terms the reviewer, even, has passed judgment on Charles George Gordon, "who at all times and everywhere gave his strength to the weak, his substance to the poor, his sympathy with the suffering, his heart to God. * * * He saved an empire by his warlike genius. He ruled vast provinces with justice, wisdom, and power. And, lastly, obedient to his sovereign's command, he died in the heroic attempt to save men, women, and children from imminent and deadly peril."

EDWARD F. STEVENS.

A Plea for Articles of Travel.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Whoever it was who wrote the review of Mr. George L. Carlisle's "Around the World in a Year" in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS of March 14 shows the earmarks—I mean the penmarks—of the academic critic who holds that travel is no sort of inspiration to acceptable writing, yet the book before him compelled his favorable criticism. His statement, "He did not altogether escape the fatal lure of facts and figures, or (?) resist the vicious inclination to give useful information," while it may to some extent be ironic, still indicates the academician, the man who wants only the purely intellectual in writing. Fortunately, Mr. Carlisle is not that kind of writer, and he has given us a book of travel well worth the reading, not only as a pastime and a pleasure, but as a profit.

And this compels the thought that while our book publishers and newspaper and magazine editors decry so-called travel matter, good "stuff" of this class is very, very much better than most of that which these worthy gentlemen do not decry—publication being taken as evidence of approval. Of course, not every traveler who wishes to write is capable, but there are many travelers who are delightfully competent and would write if they were encouraged. However, admitting that there is none, would it not be a wise and profitable editorial policy to put a few capable writers on the road? Even if they followed beaten paths they could tell of their experiences in a manner not less attractive than muck-raking and kindred subjects. Your critic admits that much, for he says of Mr. Carlisle: "He not infrequently gives expression to a purely personal and, therefore, original and interesting view of things that have been described a thousand times." And Mr. Carlisle is not a professional writer—merely an overworked lawyer breaking away to keep from breaking down, as he says. But it is not necessary to follow beaten paths, nor is it necessary to go outside of the United States to secure material for travel articles of the most entertaining sort, and to altogether too many otherwise fairly intelligent people, of the most novel sort. We are neglecting our own people and our own country. There is need for closer acquaintance, a more comprehensive relationship. The people of every section of the country should know better the people and their environment in every other section. How can this be accomplished more easily and economically than by magazines and newspapers circulating everywhere?

Yet they have done very little, comparatively, and will do no more until editors wake up to the situation and go outside of their own immediate localities for their current matter. Not long ago I went to an editor in New York City, one at the top of things, and told him I wanted to write something about a portion of this country and its people so little known as to be almost Tibetan in their remoteness. I knew I had something to tell, because I had been there, and I had been in New York. He looked at me in some surprise and asked what they had been doing. The news idea was uppermost, you will note. I told him they had been doing nothing for 150 years, and that was why they were interesting in a country where everybody else was doing something. He smiled wanly at my explanation, and said he would print something about them if they did anything. I tried to show him—he was a metaphorical Missourian—that they were interesting because they were so little known and so unlike the big world around them, but he shook his head. I asked him if he didn't want to tell his readers something they hadn't heard of. He didn't think so, but very shortly afterward he printed an article on "Man 250,000 Years Ago." That beat my people by 249,850 years, and I was convinced I had gone to the wrong man. Still I am not yet convinced that mine would not have been more interesting matter for his readers. On another occasion, before taking a trip along the coast line of Alaska, I went first to see what New York editors wanted from that section. Every man said he wanted nothing, except one, who said he might use a few little character sketches of a couple of hundred words, but nothing more, and one magazine editor said he had been there and there was nothing in it. I went just the same, and the very first thing I wrote was more than a two-column letter of travel, which was printed with head-lines by the editor who wanted only a few little sketches. In all I wrote thirty or more columns for newspapers and two articles for magazines, one of the magazine editors coming to me for the matter when I had returned. Yet they wanted nothing. All over this big country are things of interest, people of interest, places of interest, about which and whom the bright and cheerful observer could write travel letters. They make an editor shudder now—which would be a constant and clean delight to all readers.

Travel interests thousands—the best evidence is the success of lecturers who tell and picture their travels in all parts of the world. In a somewhat different form newspapers and magazines could offer a similar entertainment with similar success. The ever-present camera has visualized travel for the stay-at-homes, and they are quick to realize it and pay for the privilege. But newspapers and magazines cannot get their matter haphazard. They must choose their writers and get the most competent for the work in hand. The custom now is to send out a writer who has made a reputation in a totally different field, and the result is, of course, depressing. The writer's reputation may have excited an interest in his work, but his work did not sustain his reputation. Readers are the best judges, and they know what they want. If any newspaper or magazine in this country had published weekly or monthly the matter Mr. Carlisle has put into his book, I venture to say that the editors would have to stop their ears to shut out the cries for more, or else furnish it. It is not literature or past reputation that readers want in travel letters so much as it is living, human, moving, tonic things seen and heard and told about brightly and cheerfully. Impressions, yes, but facts first, and facts from the people themselves. The academic window panes should be smashed to let in the good, fresh air of the road and the river. We'll get to it, by and by, but the editorial mind, being large, moves slowly. Some are already beginning to feel the effects of proper ventilation, and the time will come when the newspapers and magazines, and even the publishers of books, will be having capable writers preparing travel matter for thousands of readers who want it, but thus far have been deprived of it by—may I say?—a mistaken notion as to its real value.

W. J. LAMPTON.

Criticisms of the Non-Critical.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

It is sometimes a relief to the jaded faculties of the ordinary reader of literary miscellany to glance over the protests of the non-literary proletariat against the affectations of authors. There is something really pathetic, if it were not ridiculously useless, in these idle remonstrances against the publication of the cheap, "Brummagem" imitations which are put upon the market, as the real thing. Hear the plaint of one of those whose limited culture prevents him from seeing in the average "magazine poem" anything more than that which our transatlantic brethren, rather slangily, call "tommyrot."

To be sure, his feeble expressions of dissent can have no standing in the literary world; for he has not that distinctive quality of the professional critic, failure as a writer. There are still among us, however, some "mute, inglorious Miltons," who, though incapable of voicing their convictions in rounded periods, can, in Johnsonian phrase, "ratiocinate" at least.

"For example, take the first thing in sight," he says, "the poem from the March Metropolitan, unduly honored by publication on the first page of THE SATURDAY REVIEW." The honest fellow says, in all candor, "It would seem that poetry should be idealized truth—expanded by fancy perhaps, but always limited by fact."

"False similes," he remarks, "incongruous metaphors, labored rhymes, bizarre conceits, and slovenly disguises of sentiments stolen from others, together with a general ignorance of nature itself, are only a few of the miner defects of 'The Reason.'" This matter-of-fact fellow persists that even the title itself is a misnomer; for, says he, "It is a strain upon the tensile strength of metonymy to request the reader to 'Hark the pulses of the night.'" He is even rash enough to suggest that it would be more sensible to appeal to the sphymographic record of nature's heart, as shown by the twiddlings of the seismograph, whatever that may be.

He further declares that crickets are not drummers, but are simply fiddlers; and, more than that, he asserts that said nocturnal musicians never "beat the reveille" to "summon the dawn"; for their strident song is hushed long before the faintest blush of Aurora tinges the east. Again, this mere farmer insists that when cataloguing ordinary varieties of incipient breakfast food, while wheat may be green and that rye may bend, corn is never bearded; nor do the stars vibrate in the sky—the vibrations being all in the poet's eye.

This same chucklehead further claims that the stealing of Flaccus's beautiful "animae dimidium meae" is indefensible from the standpoint of a Western college sophomore. He winds up his diatribe by declaring that the averment of the poet that the particular night in question could not have reached its state of perfection unless the two "spoons" had been rolled under the same die; and, therefore, a perfect match—is irrelevant, extraneous, and incompetent; and that like "The flowers that bloom in the Spring, have nothing to do with the case."

We of the elect, however, who intuitively recognize the hallmark of genius, and languidly approve of a poem, principally because the editor has implied that we might with safety do so, regard with mild surprise such outbursts from an unaesthetic snob, and quietly laugh in our sleeves at his impudent and impotent screed. Everyone says that the description of the Indian attack on the stage coach in Mr. Mulford's new novel,

Mr. Mulford wrote BAR-20, the most successful Western romance of 1907.

THE MAGAZINES FOR APRIL.

Growing Popularity of Articles of a Reminiscent Character Shown in the Month's Issues—Important Personalities in the Coming Campaign—Lists of Contents.

THOSE who have adopted the somewhat depressing theory that mental activity reaches its height at the age of 40, and from that period steadily declines, should read an article in the April Century by W. A. Newman Dorland on "The Age of Mental Virility." The conclusions reached by Mr. Dorland, based on experiences shown in the lives of 400 famous men, are quite at variance with the popular idea as to the average period of highest mental virility in the individual, and should be decidedly comforting to those who are nearing the autumnal stage of their life's journey. Two articles of entertaining reminiscence in the same magazine are furnished by such opposite authors as Mrs. Cornwallis-West and Gen. O. O. Howard, both of whom emphasize the fact, if it needs emphasizing, that President Lincoln and Queen Victoria are still inexhaustible as sources of anecdote and story. The April McClure's also continues the excellent stage reminiscences of Ellen Terry, and has for its leading article a paper on "The South After the War," by Carl Schurz.

One hardly sheds tears over "The Passing of the Alligator," which Mr. Dimock, in April's Harper's, shows is one of the calamities threatening Florida just at present. Happily, the "passing" reptile has been excellently reproduced for future generations in this article by Mr. Dimock's camera, so that his loss to the Floridian landscape will be in a measure bearable. A somewhat similar story of semi-tropical adventure is told by William Todd in Scribner's Magazine for April, who describes his experiences with sharks while "Harpooning in the Gulf of Mexico."

In quite a number of the April magazines there are evidences of the approaching Presidential campaign in the character sketches that are given of various candidates. There is, possibly, a less proportion of fiction for the month than is usual at this time of year.

THE TRAMP IN AMERICA.

THE ELIMINATION OF THE TRAMP. By Edmond Kelly. 12mo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.

A serious and interesting study of the "Tramp," the being who used to be known as a wayfarer, a "chemineau," or some other picturesque title, but who has grown (or rather degenerated) with the passing of years into a most degraded and ugly figure, exceedingly dangerous to the community, both economically and practically. Edmond Kelly is anxious to apply the European labor colony theory as a meditor of the tramp evil in America, and he expounds his problem and suggested solution with energy and intelligence.

New Book by Col. Higginson.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson, in spite of his advanced age, (he is 84 years old,) has not lost his interest in the current problems of the world. One of the oldest literary figures of the nineteenth century still remaining with us, it is pleasant to know that he still preserves his buoyant optimism and that he is still writing books that breathe forth some of America's earlier ideals into the more or less uncompromising modern atmosphere of to-day. Col. Higginson's latest book has for its title "Things Worth While" and will be published this Spring by B. W. Huebsch in "The Art of Life Series," of which Edward Howard Griggs is the editor.

A Dramatist of Childhood.

It is said that Gerhardt Hauptmann, author of "Hannele," has always lived very close to nature. For many years his home was in the Silesian woods and mountains, where his neighbors were primitive folk, simple and credulous, to whom visions and miracles were as real as they are to this day to the peasants of Brittany. Those who know Hauptman well describe him as a man careless to an almost humorous extent of the material facts of life, and holding aloof as much as possible from the commonplaces of everyday existence. He himself once described his peculiarity in this respect to his friend, Mr. Meltzer, as follows:

"In many cases I am not unlike a child. If I saw a cake in a baker's window which was denied me, in some moods I might be quite capable of doing an injury to myself."

His sympathy for and insight into the child nature depicted in "Hannele" is thus easily comprehended.

When Authors Are Tonguetied.

A few weeks ago, at a dinner given to Gertrude Atherton in London, a story was told by a woman who had been present at a New York luncheon when Mrs. Atherton and Mr. Clemens were introduced and placed next each other. Mark Twain thought his neighbor was about to speak, and gallantly waited for her, while Mrs. Atherton, with her customary reserve of manner, waited for him. There ensued a chilly silence, which was broken by Mark Twain saying, as he shook his white locks: "Child, child, don't be so terribly boisterous."

LITERARY NEWS OF PHILADELPHIA

New Volume of Verse by Harrison S. Morris—Address by Mrs. Humphry Ward Next Week

HARRISON S. MORRIS, whose services in connection with American art are so well known in Philadelphia and New York, is bringing out a volume of verse. Its title is "Lyrics and Landscapes," and it will be published by the Century Company. Some of the titles in the collection have appeared in the magazines, while many will be found to be new. Mr. Morris's last volume of poetry was published by Lippincott several years ago, and the new book will contain the best fruit of his writing since that time.

Mrs. Humphry Ward will address the Contemporary Club at its next meeting, on Monday evening, April 6. The Wards while in this city are to be entertained at the handsome home of J. Bertram Lippincott, the publisher, on the Old York Road, near Logan. There they will meet a number of the city's literary people at dinner on Sunday.

Francis Howard Williams, a leading figure in Philadelphia's group of poets, is at work on a long poem, cast in the epic mold, on the subject of Abraham Lincoln. It will be an appropriate publication for the Lincoln centenary next year.

Rupert Sargent Holland of this city has placed with Henry Holt & Co. for early appearance a book of biographical essays, eight in number, to be called "Builders of United Italy." The subjects are Mazzini, the prophet; Garibaldi, the crusader; Cavour, the statesman; Victor Emmanuel, the King; Manzoni, the novelist; Alfieri, the poet; Daniel Manin, the Venetian patriot, and Gioberti, the philosopher. Mr. Holland contributes the "complete novelette" to Lippincott's Magazine for May. It is called "The Pirate of Alastair," and it is a Summer story of the New England coast. A series of sketches of "Historic Boyhoods," by the same author, will begin in the April St. Nicholas, the first paper telling of Michael Angelo.

Two new names have been added to the distinguished list of writers of volumes of biography in Jacobs's American Crisis Series. These are Prof. Walter L. Fleming of Tulane University, who has done much research in a scholarly way concerning the reconstruction period, and Prof. Henry Parker Willis, lately of Washington and Lee University. Prof. Fleming takes the volume on Andrew Johnson, and Prof. Willis that on Stephen A. Douglas.

The Jacobs firm announces two timely books on sport, one for the devotee of the game of golf, the other for the tennis player. "Advanced Golf" is by James Braid, a "world's champion." It contains much good and useful advice for those who wish to improve themselves as players of this game, and whether now expert or inexpert, they will be made the more skillful for reading it. The tennis book is by A. Wallis Myers, and is called "The Complete Lawn Tennis Player." It treats of the game in all its aspects, and is a thoroughly practical handbook. Both volumes are fully illustrated.

The Vir Publishing Company of this city has just issued a new edition of Dr. Sylvanus Stall's "Five-Minute Object Sermons to Children," which are meant to travel "through eye-gate and ear-gate into the city of child-soul."

"Beatrix of Clare," by John Reed Scott, whose publishers in this country are the Lippincotts, has just been brought out in London by Grant Richards, where this author is making his way rapidly. "To those who enjoy a good historical romance," says The Athenaeum, "we can thoroughly recommend Mr. Scott's new novel."

Edith MacVane, whose new novel, "The Duchess of Dreams," will be published by Lippincotts in April, is a daughter of Prof. S. M. MacVane, economist and historian, of Harvard University. She is less than 30, and resides at Cambridge when she is not abroad with her sister, who is married and resides in France. Miss MacVane is soon to write a play, which is to be presented by Margaret Anglin. "The Duchess of Dreams" was written at Sorrento, although it is an American story. It is described as "a tale of social ambition, of startling adventure, and of passionate love, placed against a background of a Newport Summer."

Prof. Henry C. Vedder's new book, "Christian Epoch Makers," will be published about April 1 by the American Baptist Publication Society. Prof. Vedder in the eighteenth chapter of this book has given an excellent account of the great leaders of the missionary epochs of the Christian Church.

"An Island Maid" is the name of a new story by William Joseph Nicolls, to be brought out for Summer reading by George W. Jacobs & Co. Its scene is Orr's Island, on the coast of Maine, and it is a pleasant tale of a wealthy young New Yorker, who deserts his steam yacht and all other loves for the daughter of a fisherman. Mr. Nicolls, who is a Philadelphian, is the author of several volumes on literary and scientific subjects.

The next volume which is promised in Lippincotts' French Men of Letters Series is "George Sand," by Prof. W. P. Trent of Columbia University. The book would have been in hand by this time but for the fact that the author recently discovered much new material concerning Defoe, which required two books from him on that subject. He is now enjoying a Sabbatical year abroad, and last Fall he prepared the Sand bibliography at Oxford, London, and Paris. He has been writing the volume in Rome during the Winter, and the work is now nearing completion.

The translator of "The Lonely House," Mrs. A. L. Wister, recently published by the Lippincotts, was the central figure in a pretty scene at the Academy of Music a few days ago, when Mme. Tetrazzini appeared before a large Philadelphia audience in "Lucia di Lammermoor." One of the stage boxes was occupied by Mrs. Wister, her brother, Dr. Horace Howard Furness, the well-known Shakespearean scholar, and Dr. and Mrs. Horace Jayne. During the ovation which Mme. Tetrazzini received from the audience she went across the stage and kissed Mrs. Wister's hand. This accomplished Philadelphia woman has translated many German stories, but "The Lonely House," which is her first in fifteen years, will, it is said, be her last.

"Glimpses of Medical Europe" is the title of a volume which is to issue from the Lipincott press in April. In it R. L. Thompson, M. D., of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, offers in a popular way most useful and interesting counsel to those who are going abroad for medical study. The principal clinics and hospitals are described. The book is embellished by a number of original pen-sketches by Tom Jones.

Lippincotts will soon publish another "outdoor book." It is called "The Small Country Place," and it is designed to give useful information to those to whom country life is new. The volume will treat of the growth of farm and garden crops, the care of farm animals, bees, and poultry, and other matters. The author is Samuel T. Maynard, a horticulturist of much experience, who lives in Northborough, Mass.

C. C. Shoemaker, the head of the Penn Publishing Company, and George W. Jacobs have just returned from a business trip to New England. They report improving conditions in the book trade, and expect it soon to resume its normal state.

D. C. Heath & Co. of Boston have in press for immediate issue Helene Bohlau's "Ratsmädelgeschichten," stories dealing with old Weimar. They are edited, with notes and vocabulary, by Miss Emma Haevernick, the head of the Modern Language Department in the Girls' High School of this city.

QUERIES.

TO secure attention in this department every communication must be signed with the full name and address of the inquirer, which will not be published unless the inquirer so desires. Trivial questions will not be heeded. Queries will be answered in the order of their receipt, and as the number received weekly is very large, and the pressure upon our columns is always very great, inquirers must always be prepared to await their turn.

THOMAS BRENNAN.—There are two questions I would wish to be informed on by you or your readers:

First.—Who is the author of "Aileen Aroon," or "Robin Adair"? Those songs or airs are both claimed by Ireland and Scotland. You could settle a disputed point in this neighborhood.

Second.—Perhaps some of your readers could tell me where the music or words of "The Poor Little Fisher Boy So Far Away from Home" are to be had. It used to be popular in Ireland about forty years ago.

Gerald Griffin wrote the words of the song "Eileen Aroon" or "Aileen Aroon." The words of "Robin Adair" were written by Lady Caroline Keppel, second daughter of the second Earl of Albemarle, and sister of Admiral Keppel. She wrote, or is said to have written, the song, in honor of Robert Adair, to whom she was afterward married. The air is claimed by both the Irish and the Scotch. It was a tune Lady Caroline had often heard her Robert Adair sing. Robert Adair was an Irishman and a fortunate one. It is said that he was descended from the ancient Irish clan of the Fitzgeralds of Adare.

The story goes that, after practicing as a surgeon in Dublin, he crossed to Holyhead on his way to London. He aided a woman of fashion, whose carriage was overturned. She gave him a fee of 100 guineas, and invited him to her London home, where he met Lady Caroline Keppel. Her family opposed their love match, but finally gave their consent to the marriage. Adair was a favorite of George III., and was the King's Sergeant Surgeon. The Adairs' only son, Sir Robert, was a well-known British diplomatist.

The air in its Irish form is simple. In the Scotch form it is more cramped. Robert Burns, who wrote the words of "Phillis the Fair" and "Had I a Cava" to the air of "Robin Adair," says in a letter to his friend, Thomson, August, 1793: "It is such a cursed, cramp, out-of-the-way measure that I despair of doing anything better to it," and again, the same month and year: "That crinkum-crankum tune, 'Robin Adair,' has run so in my head, and I succeeded so ill in my last attempt, that I have ventured in this morning's walk one essay more."

Samuel Lover, the Irish poet and novelist, says: "Now the Irish air in its original purity is as smooth as an unbroken ascending and descending scale can make it; it is anything but the 'cursed cramp, out-of-the-way measure' of which Burns's sensitive ear was so conscious in the Scotch form."

The Century Dictionary of Names says that the air is Irish, and that "Robin Adair" was sung in England before it was sung in Scotland. The new International Encyclopaedia says: "The air has been repeatedly claimed by the Scotch and the Welsh, but is undeniably of Irish origin."

One of our readers may be able to answer the query about "The Poor Little Fisher Boy."

C. D.—Some time ago you informed one of your correspondents that it was in a play called "The Panel," by Kemble, that the following quotation could be found:

"When late I attempted your pity to move,
What made you so deaf to my prayers?
Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love,
But why did you kick me downstairs?"

Ever since reading this answer I have been trying to buy a copy of that play, but without success. Can you tell me by whom it was published and through whom I might probably be able now to purchase it?

These well-known lines have an interesting history. They appeared first anonymously in the English Annual Register for 1783. Their title was "An Expostulation." This original version reads:

"When late I attempted your pity to move,
Why seem'd you so deaf to my pray'rs?
Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love—
But—why did you kick me downstairs?"

The same lines were published anonymously in 1785 in the "Asylum for Fugitive Pieces." In 1788 John Philip Kemble, the actor, undertook the management of Drury Lane Theatre, and, on Nov. 28 of that year, produced "The Panel," a comedy in three acts, cut down and altered from "'Tis Well It's No Worse," by Isaac Bickerstaff, or Bickerstaffe, who had adapted it from one of Calderon's plays. According to "The London Stage," in Vol. IV., of which Kemble's "The Panel" is published, the lines, as recited, were as follows:

"When first I attempted your pity to move,
You seem'd deaf to my sighs and my prayers;
Perhaps it was right to dissemble your love,
But why did you kick me downstairs?"

Bickerstaff's "'Tis Well It's No Worse," was first produced in 1770, and these lines are not in that original production. The question arises: Is it certain that Kemble was the author of the lines? "The Panel" may be found in any good collection of old British plays.

W. H. McMASTER.—Will you kindly tell me if there is any value in "Plays, Written by Mr. William Wycherley, London, 1735"? I have a leather-bound copy in good condition.

The "Plays" of William Wycherley, one volume, London, 1735, calf binding, has fetched $4.75 at auction in this city; and another copy, in morocco binding, has brought $3.50.

EMERSON STRINGHAM.—Please state whether the tracts of the English Fabian Society are published in the United States, and if so, by whom; if not, where may they be purchased.

The Fabian Society's works have been issued in this country by the Humboldt Publishing Company of Chicago and by the Commonwealth Company of New York. The Fabian Series were also imported and sold by Scribner's. "Fabian Essays," edited by George Bernard Shaw, was published for the Fabian Society in London in 1891 by Walter Scott, and the Humboldt Company published the same work here. "The History and Basis of the Fabian Society," by Mr. Forster, was published by the Commonwealth Company.

Answers by Readers.

H. M. R.—In your answer to "J. A." you report that there "is no complete collection of Kipling's poems in one volume." See "Collected Verse of Rudyard Kipling," published October, 1907, by Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. Contains in one volume the four volumes previously issued under titles, "Ballads and Barrack Room Ballads," "Departmental Ditties," "The Seven Seas," and "The Five Nations."

---

H. H. MOORE.—"V. D." in THE TIMES for March 7 inquires for the poem containing,

"Beyond the ocean many a mile,
And many a year ago,
There lived a wonderful queer old man,
In a wonderful house of snow."

This is the opening stanza of "Santa Claus," by the Rev. Ralph Hoyt, and was first published, I think, in Harper's Magazine about 1860. I have it in "Echoes of Memory and Emotion," published by A. D. F. Randolph in 1862.

The verses describe the doings of Santa Claus in various parts of the world, as, for instance,

"In Dublin what do you think he left
For the hearty Irish boys
Why, bags of potatoes instead of cakes,
And shillalaghs instead of toys."

J. C. H.—Replying to the inquiry of C. E. Tate in your issue of March 7, the poem referred to is by Jean Ingelow, and begins:

There is no rain left in heaven,
I've said my tables over and over,
Seven time one are seven."

This poem ends "I'm seven years old today," and may be found in the collected edition of Jean Ingelow's works or may be had of the American Book Company.

Miss A. CRARY.—The poem asked for by "A. G. C.," "This learned I from the shadow of a tree," is entitled "Influences," and was written by Miss A. E. Hamilton, an Irish lady of Castle Hamilton, Killeshandra. She died in 1876, aged 30. The query quotes the entire poem; it includes but four lines.

---

Mrs. L. H. G.—My father, Judge Gaylord Judd Clarke, was the author of "Life Leaves." He was born in Tioga County, New York, 1836. A graduate of Union College and Albany Law School. Was a fluent writer and a brilliant speaker. Removing with his family to Texas, he founded St. Clement's, the first Protestant church in El Paso, in 1868. Became Judge of the Supreme Court and died in the discharge of duty by an assassin's bullet in 1870.

---

C. W. WHITMORE.—Some few weeks ago you published an inquiry calling for authorship of the lines:

"Courage has genius, power, and magic in it," &c.

They are found in the Prelude to Goethe's poem of "Faust":

"Lose this day loitering—'twill be the same story
To-morrow—and the next more dilatory;
Then indecision brings its own delays,
And days are lost lamenting o'er lost days.
Are you in earnest? Seize this very minute—
What you can do, or dream you can, begin it.
Boldness (courage) has genius, power, and magic in it.
Only engage, and then the mind grows heated—
Begin it, and the work will be completed."

Where, in more apt phrase, will be found a slogan for the life strenuous of this age of steel and steam and electricity?

G. P. K.—In reply to "V. D." in your issue of the 7th inst. as to poem, the first stanza of which is as follows:

"Beyond the ocean many a mile,
And many a year ago,
There lived a wonderful, queer old man,
In a wonderful house of snow;
And every little boy and girl,
As Christmas times arrive,
No doubt will be very glad to hear
The old man is still alive."

The title of the poem is "Santa Claus," by the Rev. Ralph Hoyt, and was published in New York and London in 1860, and was a formidable rival to "The Night Before Christmas," if not so widely known. That it was immensely popular with children may be judged by the copy which I have before me, which is worn and thumbed almost beyond recognition. The poem is in three cantos of about 100 lines each.

---

C. D. S.—In the Answers to Readers, issue of Feb. 29, you state the lines—

"There is a life I long to meet,
Without which this life were incomplete"— are from the play "Led Astray." I have always associated the sentiment with "Ingomar the Barbarian," and as I now remember the lines read:

"There is a life I long to meet,
Without which life this life were incomplete"—

"Two souls with but a single thought,
Two hearts that beat as one."

The harmony of thought strengthens my impression as to the source, but would be very glad to change a wrong one.

---

H. H.—The lines quoted by Mrs. H. G. Beckwith—

"There are nine and sixty ways
And every single one of them is right"— are the last three lines of a poem by Kipling called "In the Neolithic Age." It would doubtless take up more room to print than you would like, but it can be found in the book of "Verses," Volume XI. of the latest Scribner edition of Kipling's works. It is also printed in the collection of Kipling's poems published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

---

GELETT BURGESS.—Since you have told your perplexed correspondent, "A. B.," that my statements about the ancient patriarch in the introduction to my "Maxims of Methuselah" are not to be taken seriously, may I say a word in my own defense, or, rather, in Methuselah's? The legends, it is true, need not be taken too seriously, (though I, myself, prefer to do so,) but as legends they are well authenticated. Credence should depend, not upon me, but upon one's pious faith in the early Christian Fathers, mediaeval romancers, and Hebrew and other Oriental mystics. In other words, my authorities—Eisenmenger, Collin de Plancy, St. Epiphanius, Fabricius, Eusebius, Tho. Bangius, and the Midrash, &c.—are all genuine sources, and my references may be corroborated at any library. It seems to me that this answers "A. B.'s" question better than the published reply which dodged the issue. Methuselah looms as a historical as well as a sacred figure of antediluvian days, and I have, as conscientiously as I could, kept my interpretation of him consistent with the facts vouched for by historians.

---

MRS. DAVIS.—The following is a poem, entitled "The Prayer of the Nation," which may be what "H. A. G." requires in your edition of Feb. 29:

"God give us men! A time like this demands
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor, and who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
In public duty and in private thinking!"

JOSIAH GILBERT HOLLAND.

M. M. H.—Referring to the inquiry of "X." on Feb. 29, and the reply of "C. S. D.," March 14, in reference to the line, "Until the day break and the shadows flee away," if "X." will look in the Bible, the Song of Solomon, Chapter II., and the first part of the seventeenth verse, he will find the exact words.

---

THEODORE F. WOLFE, Succasunna, N. J.—The poem concerning which your correspondent "H. A. D." inquires, is entitled "Where the Beautiful Rivers Flow," and was certainly written by the gifted Father Ryan. The subject is Ireland. Poem is in six stanzas of eight lines each, presumably too long for your columns. If "H. A. D." will communicate with me I will put him in the way to obtain a copy.

---

S. MORRISTOWN.—Some weeks ago some one asked for the author of a short poem beginning: "A tone of pride or petulance repressed, a selfish inclination firmly fought." Years ago I cut it out of a calendar, and the name of the author is Edward Harding, though who he is I do not know.

Appeals to Readers.

J. B. T.—Can any of your readers give me the author of the following lines and where I may find the poem from which they were quoted to me:

"When the box of Pandora was opened on earth,
With the list of what Fate for each mortal intends,
And slipped in three blessings—wife, children, and friends."

F. A. CLEVELAND.—Can one of your readers tell me who was the Cleveland mentioned by Rousseau in his "Confessions," Book V., thus: "Even the imaginary misfortunes of Cleveland, read with avidity and frequent interruption, have, I am persuaded, disordered me more than my own."

---

LITTLE BILLY HAY.—Can any of your readers tell me where to find the words of an old song, beginning "There were three men of Bristol City" who "took ship and went to sea," and on reaching the equator, their provisions being reduced to "one split pea," Gorging Jack and Guzzling Jimmie resolve to eat Little Billy Hay, who is "young and tender," but he is providentially saved by the British fleet? Also, can any one oblige me with the words of "'Ostler Joe," which I have tried in vain to buy in New York?

---

K. M. HARTE.—Can some one tell me who wrote:

"Oh, love of mine, what sorry years
I'd spend beside thee, strange it seems;
But though thy presence, sweet, endears,

and give me the rest of the poem?

R. H. E.—Could any of your readers inform me what the name of the rather pathetic and interesting old ballad is which was published, I believe, in Harper's Weekly many years ago? It was supposed to give the experience of a farmer, who led a very monotonous life, I think, in the State of Maine, and the refrain to each verse was:

"Oh! this gittin' up;

---

M. E. B.—I would like to ask if any of your readers can give me a little poem which is, I think, entitled "My Old Home," referring to old age and comparing it to the decay of an old house? I can only remember one line:

"The windows, too, were dim."

---

S. J. HENRY.—Will you inform me where I can find the poem of which the following verse is a part?

"How oft in evening's twilight hour,
When another day has passed and gone,
While seated beneath a shady bower
I pause to rest, and wait in vain
For loving footsteps known to me,
Which nevermore will come again,
I think of thee, I think of thee."

---

W. L. SHERWOOD.—I have been informed that the poem given below was written by my father. Can any of your readers inform me whether it has been published, and if so when and where?

THE HUMAN HEART.

Hath seen its strings lay bare
A beauty and a mystery
In all that resteth there;
In love, how silently 'twill brood
O'er feelings unconfessed;
A bird that feeds in solitude
The younglings of its nest.

"Its hate is like volcanic fire—
We reck not of its wrath,
Till bursts the lava of its ire
Around our scorching path.
Its friendships, oh, the blessed seeds,
It strews in Time's dark bowers,
That spring through misery's bitter weeds,
To crown life's cup with flowers.

"The heart's despair—what simile
Portrays its gloom aright?
It is the Hell of memory—
Unutterable night.
Its holiness—a tree whose bloom
Eternity supplies,
And flocking to whose branches come
The birds of Paradise.

"In every human change, the heart
Is but a living lyre,
Where each fierce passion plays its part
Upon a separate wire.
But harsh and wild the tones will be
While passion 'round them clings—
It never breathes true melody
Till God has touched its strings."

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF NEW YORK BOOKS

Many New Novels Published To-day—Books of Varied Character Promised for the Spring.

THE five following novels are published to-day by Dodd, Mead & Co.: "The Fair Moon of Bath," by Elizabeth Ellis, author of "Barbara Winslow"; "The Dissolving Circle," by Will Lillibridge, author of "Ben Blair"; "Lord of the World," by Robert Hugh Benson, author of "The Light Invisible"; "The Man Who Was Thursday," by Gilbert K. Chesterton, author of "Varied Types," &c.; "The Vigil," by Harold Begbie, author of "The Penalty," &c. Besides these works of fiction, the four following books are published: "Tuscan Feasts and Tuscan Friends," a study of life near Florence, by Dorothy Neville Lees; "Letters from Percy Bysshe Shelley to Elizabeth Hitchener," being forty-seven letters by the poet Shelley, written June, 1811, and June, 1812, now published for the first time, with introduction and notes by Bertram Dobell; "Passages from the Past," a volume of reminiscences, by the Duke of Argyll; "Myths About Monarchs," a book of clever nonsense verses, by Hansard Watt, author of "Home-Made History."

Four books are published to-day by Charles Scribner's Sons, as follows: The English translation of Rene Bazin's "L'Isolee," entitled "The Nun"; "Old Mr. Davenant's Money," a romance of Long Island, by Frances Powell, author of "The House on the Hudson," &c.; "Mind in the Making: A Study in Mental Development," by Edgar J. Swift, Professor of Pedagogy in Washington University; "The Coming Catholicism and Passing Protestantism," by the Rev. Newman Smyth, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational Church, New Haven.

"The Dawn of the Constitution," by Sir James H. Ramsay, author of "Foundations of England" and "The Angevin Empire," is just published by the Macmillan Company. In this new volume of his historical studies the author deals with the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. of England. Marion Crawford's "Zoroaster" and "Marzio's Crucifix" have just been issued in a single volume. A new edition of Mr. Crawford's little book on "The Novel" is also announced.

Next month the Century Company will publish "A Handful of Verse," by Harrison S. Morris, Managing Director of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, and author of "A Duel in Lyrics," "Tales from Two Poets," "Madonna, and Other Poems," &c.; also "Poems," by Robert Underwood Johnson, for twenty-six years associate editor of The Century Magazine.

Two books which will be published in the early part of next month by Moffat, Yard & Co. are "A Teacher of Dante, and Other Studies in Italian Literature," by Nathan Haskell Dole, containing essays on Dante, Petrarch, Boccaccio, and other of the great poets and writers of Italy. On account of delay due to the photogravure illustrations, the publication of Charles Edward Russell's "Thomas Chatterton" has been postponed until now.

"Humorous Hits and How to Hold an Audience," a volume of selections, original and otherwise, furnishing entertainment for the public audience as well as the private family circle, by Grenville Kleiser, author of "How to Speak in Public," is just published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company.

On Wednesday of this week the three following books were published by the McClure Company: "Love's Logic," a collection of short stories by Anthony Hope; "The Tennants," a story of the South, by Mary S. Watts, and "Katherine Thevalyan," a novel of New York society, by Louise Maunsell Field. New editions are being published of Homer Lea's "Vermillion Pencil," and O'Henry's "Cabbages and Kings."

This week the Frederick A. Stokes Company publish Miss Alice Lounsberry's "The Garden Book for Young People." The book tells, in story form, how children, with little ground and pocket money, can do gardening on their own account. It contains nearly fifty illustrations.

E. P. Dutton & Co. publish this week "Reminiscences of Oxford," by the Rev. W. Tuckwell, M. A., late fellow of New College. In this volume the author, who, of course, is an old Oxonian, takes up the Oxford of the early thirties, and tells of many of the original characters harbored by the famous university during and since that period. The book contains sixteen illustrations.

On the 10th of April D. Appleton & Co. will publish a novel by James Barnes, author of "Outside the Law," &c., entitled "The Clutch of Circumstance." The setting for the novel is found in the western part of New York State, where an interesting plot, involving a mysterious murder, a great strike, &c., is developed in connection with a romantic love story.

In THE TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS for March 14, "Apologia Diffidentis," by W. Compton Leith, published by the John Lane Company, was quoted at $1.50. This is the wrong price, the proper quotation being $2.50 net.

Henry Holt & Co. are already preparing the "Carolyn Wells Year Book" for 1909. Miss Wells is said to have been somewhat dismayed when her publishers wrote her that they wanted her now, nearly eighteen months before it was to be read, to write some appropriae sentiments for Thanksgiving, 1909.

Two books promised for next month by Longmans, Green & Co. are "Talks on Religion," a collective inquiry, edited by Henry Bedinger Mitchell, and "High Priesthood and Sacrifice," an exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, by William Porcher Du Bose, M. A., S. T. D.

"The Programme of Modernism," together with the text of the Pope's encyclical against modernism, translated by Father Tyrrell, the well-known English Jesuit, is published to-day by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Next month will be issued "The New York of Yesterday," being a descriptive narrative of old Bloomingdale, as set forth in the development of its first religious society, the Bloomingdale Reformed Church, by Hopper Striker Mott.

"Death in the Kiss" is the title of a book issued to-day by the Broadway Publishing Company. It is neither a novel nor a poetic effusion, but a medical treatise on the dangers from "innocent infection," written by a New York physician, who appears under the veil of the anonymous.

A large quarto volume containing the ancestry of Leander Howard Crall of New York is published this week by the Grafton Press. The book is the result of more than ten years of continuous research, and is accompanied by various reproductions of ancient parchments, photogravures, &c.

Early next month Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish a book entitled "Prose Every Child Should Know," edited by Miss Mary E. Burt. The volume contains selections from Homer and Aesop to Lincoln and our modern writers, and is calculated to be a valuable adjunct to the books used by school children. On the 10th of next month Louis V. Le Moyne's "Country Residences in Europe and America," containing more than 400 reproductions of the world's finest drives, courts, gardens, &c., will be published.

Simultaneously with the new edition of Justin McCarthy's Victorian commentary, "A Short History of Our Own Times," published in this country by Harper & Brothers, comes the announcement that Mr. McCarthy's "Modern England Under Queen Victoria" has gone into an Italian translation, and will be published by an Italian house of Turin, Fratelli Bocca.

Prof. Charles Zueblin of the University of Chicago has written a book he calls "The Religion of a Democrat," to be published shortly by B. W. Huebsch. Prof. Zueblin is a popular lecturer at some of our most prominent universities. His forthcoming book deals with the question of man's religious needs and the present-day means of satisfying them.

"Practical Farming" is the title of a book by W. F. Massey which has just been issued by the Outing Publishing Company. The book is intended to serve as a work for reference from day to day and from season to season. The author is a lecturer well known to the farming community on agricultural subjects.

A historical sketch of that little known land, Lower California, from the days of Cortez to the present time, is published this week by Paul Elder & Co. under the title "The Mother of California." The author is Arthur Walbridge North. The book contains an introduction by Cyrus C. Adams of the American Geographical Society. Two other books are "The Love Sonnets of a Car Conductor," by Wallace Irwin, and "The Secrets of Beauty and Mysteries of Health," by Cora Brown Potter.

Owing to an unavoidable delay "Bridget," the novel by Mrs. Herman Bosch, did not arrive last week as announced. "Bridget" will make her appearance to-day, however, under the auspices of B. W. Dodge & Co. The book is a romance of New York of a rather unique type.

A unique and cleverly written book entitled "A Vocabulary for Young Fathers," by O. N. E., is promised for Spring publication by the Dodge Publishing Company. The book promises to appeal strongly to the proud father, and should aid him in the understanding of the otherwise meaningless sounds uttered by his offspring. It contains a number of drawings made especially for this volume by Esther P. Hill.

Next month Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. will publish Gabriel Compayre's "Montaigne," thus completing a series of volumes on pedagogy by this famous French educator. The series is known as Pioneers in Education," and includes separate volumes upon Rousseau, Herbert Spencer, Pestalozzi, Herbart, and Horace Mann.

A novel by Arthur Hornblow, author of "The Lion and the Mouse," will be published by the G. W. Dillingham Company next month. The title of the forthcoming book is "The Profligate."

A New Novel of the Fall of Jerusalem
By ELIZABETH MILLER

The City of Delight

In her latest book she has told her greatest story, a romance of love, of passion, of mighty deeds and desperate ventures.

The scene of this swift-moving drama is Jerusalem, and the time is her fall; and the glorious pageant of her losing conflict with Rome is set forth with all the magic of words and all the splendor of colors.

And ever the heart of the reader beats in time with the hearts of the young heroic lovers, strangely met, strangely parted, and most strangely and bravely reunited.

Love's Logic

Fifteen delightful new stories by this brilliant writer, dealing in the main with different aspects of life among the upper and aristocratic classes of England, often penetrating even further, into the homes and hearts of royalty. Each story is in itself a perfect little record of human life; some are humorous, some pathetic, some exciting and full of adventure. The logic of love—that really most illogical of human passions—dominates them all. Cloth $1.25

LOUISE MAUNSELL FIELD'S fine romantic novel of New York's society

Katherine Trevalyan

A brilliant novel of New York's society seen from the inside. No recent writer has given so full and accurate an account of life as it is lived by the very rich and the very fashionable in our own time. Miss Field has skilfully depicted this life with all its characteristic color and incident, its follies and foibles, its vices and even its virtues. Against this variegated and moving background the author places in sharp contrast with its hectic coloring the pure and elevated character of her heroine and develops a story of singularly strong emotional interest. Cloth $1.50

The Tenants

Mrs. Watts is the anthor of "The Great North Road" and other stories which have recently attracted such wide attention in McClure's Magazine. On the larger canvas of her novel, "The Tenants," Mrs. Watts has for the first time found room for the free development of her delightful art and her infinitely entertaining manner of dealing with men and women and incidents. If you want sheer entertainment of a discursive, conversational sort this novel of life in the '80's will suit your mood admirably. Cloth $1.50
